NEW-YORK CITY.

The Gyroscope Spiritually Explained.

Mrs. CORA L. V. HATCH held forth last evening again at the Tabernacle, in the trance state, before a respectable audience, on the Gyroscope—it being in answer to the question proposed on a former evening by Capt. RYNDERS. She went into an analysis of motion generally—geological, chemical, astronomical; of forces—attraction of gravitation, of cohesion, repulsion, and momentum. She then described the word Gyroscope in its original sense, which was a "view of motion," but which was specifically applied to an instrument deemed by scientific men a plaything. She gave as the reason of the motion of the gyroscope, that the momentum given to the wheel overcame the attraction of gravitation, and that law is for the time suspended. She then applied this principle to the formation of planets, denominating momentum the "life principle of motion," and averred it was the law of spherical formation Scientific definitions and ideas in regard to the subject were repudiated, and men of science were rapped over the knuckles for knowing so little as they did. Motion was inherent in everything; rest was but composure. Stars were the blossoms of suns, which bud and bloom because they could not rest.

A gyroscope was procured by a gentleman in the audience, and set in motion for the benefit of the curious. The spirit, through the entranced lady, concluded by hoping that the gyroscope of the minds of her hearers would lead them to an investigation of the laws of gravity which control the elements as well of thought and soul as of the external world.

The Blind in New-York.

The Institution for the Blind in this City contains 175 pupils. The last report avers that the blind, as a class, show languid health, occasioned by constitutional tendencies which caused their blindness, and aggravated by the difficulty of keeping up habits of bodily activity. There were three deaths in the Institution last year. The report reviews the disadvantages which attend public displays of the blind. The aim of the institution is "to impart instruction which will be of real service in after life," and with this view of conducting it on truly parental principles, exhibitions of the pupils are no longer considered necessary. "The blood of youth," says the report, "should not be distempered by the unhealthy excitement of public life, with its false standards of happiness, its illusions and disappointments; nothing can be more unphilosophical than the notion that excitements natural to maturer years, can add to the mental activity of the young." The mechanical instruction of the blind proceeds as usual. The expenditures in this department in 1856, were $17,000. Instruction cost $865. The musical classes are conducted as usual, effectively.

Liquor Licenses.

"Freeholders" are at a premium since the new Excise Law passed. To maintain all the existing groggeries in town, it will require about four times as many freeholders for "signers" as there are voters. The retailers are very busy preparing for the prodigious emergency that awaits them. The licenses of liquor-sellers now in operation will continue so until the 29th of May. On the 12th of May Judge RUSSELL, Justice OAKLEY, Recorder SMITH, and the presiding Judge of Common Pleas are to meet and appoint three Commissioners of Excise. These Commissioners are to meet May 20, and before the expiration of forty days are to license all applicants who are entitled to license for a year from that time. If the new law is obeyed, the price of feathers, curled hair and straw will go up finely, for every man in the City who gets a license must keep six spare beds for guests, and stabling for six horses.

Rumored Defalcation.

We learn that the confidential cashier of a large retail dry goods establishment on Broadway has embezzled the funds of the concern to the amount of $100,000 to $150,000. The fact was developed on Saturday last. The delinquent has been in the employ of the firm for nearly twenty years, and enjoyed their entire confidence and esteem. He is also a director in one of the City Banks. The members of the suffering firm have not as yet ascertained whether the missing funds were purloined recently, or whether the abstraction has been going on for a series of years. It is said that most of the money has been sunk in unfortunate speculations in Wall-street.

The Anti-Slavery Society.

The American Anti-Slavery Society, in announcing its anniversary celebration for this year, takes occasion to reaffirm its old platform in terms rendered doubly emphatic by the Dred Scott decision. The object of the Society is declared to be not merely to make Liberty and Slavery sectional, nor to war especially against fugitive laws, but to effect, "comprehensively and uncompromisingly, the immediate and fatal overthrow of Slavery" on American soil. The meeting is to begin on the 12th of May, and continue for two days at least, and as much longer as the spirit may move the brethren. The Tabernacle having been given over to destruction, the Society goes to the City Assembly Rooms, a pleasanter place. Among the speakers invited is Rev. Dr. CHEEVER.

Young Men's Christian Association.

The affairs of this Association are steadily improving. When the rescinding resolution, which restores full freedom of discussion to the body, was under consideration, it was promised that if it did not prevail, abundant means would be furnished the Association. It passed, however, and now the friends of free discussion feel called on to tender freely their subscriptions. A large sum has already been paid into the treasury. The indications are that the body will be free from debt on the 1st of May, at which time a new Board of Direction will probably be chosen, and affairs resume their customary order.

Gen. Jackson's Snuff-Box.

The Joint Special Committee of the Aldermen and Councilmen appointed to hear evidence enabling them to substantiate a recommendation as to the award of Gen. JACKSON'S Snuff-Box, met in the City Hall on Tuesday.

Gen. SCOTT was present, by invitation, and advised the Committee to consult, by letter, Gens. QUITMAN, TWIGGS, SHIELDS, HARNEY, SMITH, and WOOL. If the Committee wished, he would write the letters, and frank them, the object being to inquire their opinion what soldier from the State of New-York was the bravest man in the Mexican War. The Committee accepted the General's offer very gratefully, and thus the proceedings ended.

Board of Governors.

The Board of Governors met at the Rotunda on Tuesday. The President C. GODFREY GUNTHER, Esq., in the Chair.

The roof of the City Prison appearing to be in a dilapidated state, as was evident from a communication to that effect from the Warden, the matter was referred to the Committee on Prisons.

Dr. JOHN A. CROOK was nominated as Assistant Physician at Bellevue Hospital, on the nomination of Dr. SANGER.

The Committee on Salaries reported that it is inexpedient to increase the salaries of the Warden of the City Prison and his subordinates, at the present time.

Governor DUCRO in opposing the reception of the Report, insisted upon the faithfulness and general merits of Mr. GRAY, the Warden. His position was responsible, and he was opposed to temptation.

Governor OLIVER supported the views of Governor DUCRO.

Governor TIEMAN said that a residence, lights and fuel were furnished to the Warden, and his salary was $3,000 per annum.

Governor DUCRO reiterated his arguments very warmly.

Governor TOWNSEND agreed as to the merits of the Warden, but thought that this would be opening a wide door to a general increase.

Governor MOLONEY was in favor of a general increase of salary in all Departments.

The Report was ultimately referred back, to be reported upon again in two weeks.

The subject of "female" keepers at the Workhouse being introduced, Governor DUCRO became facetious. Surely the Board had had sufficient experience as to their unfitness. "Didn't they dance hallelujah, and kick up precious shines?" "Gentlemen," said he, "I am ashamed"——

The President (interrupting) desired the worthy Governor to repress his jocularity.

The matter was referred to a Committee.

Governor PINCKNEY, in reference to the appointment of messengers, said he had been consulted by an applicant for the situation at the City Prison. The person being told there was no salary, he replied that he could make $600 per annum out of it.

The President assured the speaker that it was impossible to make "black mail" at that prison.

A Governor suggested that in spite of the Warden, possibly the thing might be done. It certainly was a shame that the poor creatures should be plundered.

The conversation then dropped. Presently the Board adjourned.

THE COURT OF SPECIAL SESSIONS.

At the last session of the Court of Special Sessions two young women were sentenced to the Penitentiary, each for the term of six months, for picking the pockets of a lady in Canal street of a portmonnaie containing about $30 in bank bills. The prisoners were well dressed and looked modest,—but the Recorder declared them to be bad and well known characters. One of them had a child at the breast. Both pleaded hard for dismissal, but the Recorder said he had no doubt of their guilt. They were seen to commit the theft and run to Mercer street, where they lived and there divide the spoils. They were taken from Court crying.

A bright-eyed little fellow, calling himself Eddy Johnson, was placed at the bar for pocket-picking. Although only about 12 years of age, he was declared by the officer who arrested him to be a notorious and skillful thief. His counsel said there was no doubt of his dishonesty, nor any doubt that he had committed the act of which he was accused—picking a lady's pocket in Chatham street—but the difficulty was to prove it. The Recorder said he had examined the case. The boy was a bad one, and he ordered him to be remanded.

A mulatto woman named Anderson, living in Worth-street, was then put at the bar. A black man swore that the prisoner had stolen from him a wallet containing $10 in bills. "I know she stole it," he said, "there was no one in the room but us two. I hung my pants upon a chair, and when I went to look for the money it was gone."

"He tells a lie," said the accused, "I didn't steal a cent. He was drunk at any rate, and he wanted to treat, and hadn't any money, and then turned round and said 'it's you.' I declare, Mr. Judge, I didn't take a cent of his money."

The Recorder inquired whether the accused had been ever before arrested. She said she had not. She was then asked whether she would restore the money. She answered she would if she could, but wasn't sure, because business was dull—awful dull, and she didn't steal it. The Recorder paused a moment, and then said to both accused and accuser—"Clear out," and away they went.

Michael Clark beat his wife, Margaret, because he was drunk, and because she was "loafing and drinking and chatting up stairs with her dirty neighbors." Mrs. Clark's face was black and blue, and dirty. She complained of Mike's usage, and expressed herself willing to let him go, "but," she added, "sure what's the use,—he'll do it again immediately."

"Does he beat you often?" asked the Recorder.

"Faith, sur, an' he does whenever he's in the humor, and has a sup in his head."

"That'll do. Six months, Mr. Vandervoort," said the Recorder.

Clark was taken below.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

THE MURDER OF POLICEMAN HARDENBROOK—CONCLUSION OF THE CORONER'S INQUEST.

The inquest commenced on Wednesday last upon the body of Stephen P. Hardenbrook, who was murdered by burglars in West-street, was concluded yesterday. The two Germans, named Casser and Kyser, who were arrested on suspicion of being the guilty parties, were dismissed, they proving an alibi. Casser's wounds are inflicted in Ninth-avenue, by a brother musician, with whom he quarreled on the night of Hardenbrook's murder, and Kyser, it was shown, had not been, on Wednesday night, so far down town as West-street. The man, Conklin, who it was said had witnessed the murder, was put upon the stand. He swore that he had not witnessed the conflict between the deceased and the burglars, and that his assertion to the contrary was made by "way of a lark."

There being no other evidence to offer, the Jury, after an address from the Coroner, retired, and soon thereafter returned and reported the following

VERDICT AND SUGGESTION.

"That Stephen P. Hardenbrook came to his death by being stabbed in the back, between the seventh and eighth ribs, five inches to the right of the spine, and two inches below the angle of the scapula, passing through the lung, diaphragm and into the liver, from which death followed in about three hours afterwards—this wound being inflicted by some person or persons unknown to the Jury."

SUGGESTION.

"The Jury would suggest to the authorities of New-York the immediate appointment of two officers instead of one on river routes and other dangerous localities, in order to preserve the property and lives of the citizens from the too frequent assaults of burglars and midnight assassins."

The Jury were thereupon dismissed, and the inquest concluded.

EXTENSIVE BURGLARY—ARREST OF THE BURGLARS.

A burglary was committed about 3 o'clock yesterday morning, upon the store of Goldstein & Co., No. 118 Liberty street. The thieves effected an entrance by the grating on the stoop. They packed up a large amount of silk goods and fled. Their operations were discovered by a young man who happened to be passing at the time. He immediately gave the alarm, when Officer Dwyer, of the Third Ward, came up, and pursued the burglars into the house No. 147 Greenwich street, where he arrested a German named Roche, who keeps a clothing store there, and a man giving his name as John Wilson. The stolen goods were recovered. The prisoners were taken before Justice OSBORNE, at the Lower Police Court, and committed for examination.

WHY DO PEOPLE TAKE COD LIVER OIL?

Because it contains Iodine, and Iodine is admitted to be a specific remedy—in fact the only reliable remedy—for consumption. And yet, a bottle of Cod Liver Oil does not hold in solution the hundredth part of a grain of Iodine; and, therefore, you are compelled to swallow and digest of that disgustingly fat substance, nearly five gallons before you can hope to realize from it as much medical relief as you may be confident of deriving from a single quart bottle of ANDREWS' Liquid Iodine, or Pure Iodine Water—a palatable, inexpensive, positive remedy for consumption, rheumatism, scrofula, palsy, and all complaints of the lungs, heart, liver, or the blood. The Metropolitan Police Bill.

In the Brooklyn Common Council, Monday evening, Alderman DEL VECCHIO offered the following preamble and resolutions:

Whereas, The Legislature has passed an act authorizing the formation of a Metropolitan Police, and including within its limits the City of Brooklyn; and,

Whereas, The said act was passed against the wishes of the people of the City of Brooklyn as expressed through their representatives in both branches of the Legislature; and,

Whereas, Said act will entail upon this city a large additional expenditure of the public money, without the least prospective advantage to the citizens; and,

Whereas, The said act, if not as a whole, in several important provisions is believed to be unconstitutional; therefore,

Resolved, That a Special Committee of three be appointed to procure the written opinion of such eminent counsel within this State as they may deem proper and expedient, and to present the same to this Common Council.

Inasmuch as this resolution involves an expenditure of money it was laid upon the table for one week, under the rule.

Alderman DEL VECCHIO, it seems, was prepared for this, and immediately offered the following:

Resolved, That the Counselor of the Board be directed to take what measures he may deem necessary to prevent the transfer from the hands of the City Treasurer to the State Treasurer, all moneys that may be applicable to the maintenance of the Police force.

This resolution was lost—Nays, 18; Ayes, 15.

BROOKLYN CITY COURT—TUESDAY, April 21.

Before Judge CULVER.

George W. Brown vs. Lewis W. Berry.—This case has occupied the attention of the Court for two days and was submitted to the Jury last evening. The action is to recover pay for a party wall erected by plaintiff adjoining property of defendant. Payment is refused upon the ground that when he purchased the property this lien was not upon it. It appears that the party wall was built when owned by a person of whom defendant purchased and the usual papers were filed, but when the sale was made no mention was made of this fact and it is claimed that it is not incumbent upon the present owner to pay. The Jury were instructed to bring in a sealed verdict.

THE SHEEPSHEAD BAY OUTRAGE.

Richard Lewis, indicted with Jackson and Dixson for rape upon two emigrant girls, last Summer, at Sheepshead Bay, was placed upon trial, in the Kings County Court of Sessions, yesterday.

After considerable delay, the following Jury was obtained:

1. Ira Smith,
2. Oliver Vincent,
3. Thomas M. Clark,
4. David Davis,
5. Jesse Hines,
6. Jas. A. Pyne,
7. Jas. A. Jackson,
8. John Wallis,
9. Ludwig Miller,
10. Wm. C. Booth,
11. W. J. Conselyea,
12. Bowman Low.

The Court then adjourned to this morning, when witnesses will be examined.

The Case of Jackson.—Twice within a week District-Attorney Schnuckar has been to Poughkeepsie for the purpose of arguing the motion for a new trial in the case of Joseph Jackson, convicted at the last session of the Court of Oyer and Terminer, of rape, but on each occasion Mr. Clinton, counsel for the defendant, has failed to appear.

SENTENCES.

Andrew Feely, convicted of attempting to violate the person of Catharine Pfeiffer, was sentenced to two years imprisonment in the State Prison.

Edward Tappan, pleaded guilty of bigamy, and sentence was suspended.

Patrick Lawrence, convicted of petit larceny, was sent to the Penitentiary for 30 days.

John Mengus, convicted of grand larceny, was sentenced to two years imprisonment to the State Prison.

DISCHARGED.

Martin O'Meally, Michael Walsh, and John Leavis, ton, arrested for passing counterfeit money, were discharged, the Grand Jury having failed to find an indictment.

NEW-JERSEY.

Land Slide.

The travel on the New-York and Erie railroad was obstructed yesterday by a rather extensive land slide on Shobolan, on the line of that road, 107 miles from Jersey City, which occurred on Monday night. No through trains arrived at Jersey City yesterday, but those detained were expected to arrive at 2 o'clock this morning.

Found Drowned.

The body of MICHAEL O'DONNELL was found on Monday night in the Morris Canal. He had been missing for five weeks. He left home intoxicated when last seen. He followed the business of sawing wood. Recorder BEDFORD viewed the body and gave permission for its interment.

TUESDAY, April 21—P. M.

The Fulton steamer from Havre and Southampton, arrived early this morning with three days later market accounts from Europe. The Funds were lower in London in consequence of a change of terms at the Bank of England in lending upon Stocks. The rate on such advances is now 7 ₱ cent. The disconnt rate on mercantile bills remains, as before, at 6½ ₱ cent. The same difference of ½ ₱ cent. was made in January on the approach of dividend day on Consols. A well-advised London authority writes:

"The course now adopted is precisely similar to that which was pursued three months back, after the last dividend payment. Nevertheless it has frightened the dealers, and a fall has occurred from 93⅜ to 92½. From this there has been only a partial reaction, the closing price to day being 92¾. A slight restriction in the usual accommodation granted by the Bank to the discount houses has contributed to the feeling of pressure. Heavy payments for the duties on tea, which were held back until yesterday, when the reduced scale came into operation, have likewise increased the demand.

The Bank, however, during the last few days has not lost gold, and as £1,500,000 is certain to arrive from Australia during the next six weeks, many persons are disposed to hope not only that any further upward movement in the rate of discount will be averted, but that a return to comparative ease may not be altogether distant."

At Liverpool, the prices of Cotton remain firm, but the sales are again reported dull, and chiefly to the trade. Breadstuffs not so firm. Provisions looking better. In American Stocks, there had been some fluctuations in Illinois Central shares, on the low quotations from this side of 128¾ ₱ cent., but the actual sales reported on the London Stock Exchange are at 30 ₱ cent. premium Sterling—equal, with the exchange, to 135@136 here. Private letters advise of sales at 31 premium, after a temporary fall below 30. The other stock quotations are much the same as by the previous mail. The steamer brings, among other political items, an intimation that the English fleet may be directed to blockade all the Chinese ports.

The Street demand for Money was dull today—the supply quite liberal. Some deposits have been temporarily left with Brokers at 6 ₱ cent., though 7 ₱ cent. is the general rule. The City Chamberlain is a borrower at this rate, on temporary Scrip, and we regret to hear that some few of the Comptroller's warrants have been refused payment, for want of proper provision. The magnitude of the current finances of the City is now so great that it seems questionable whether the Bank account of the Chamberlain ought to be confined wholly to a single institution, and that not of the largest capital. Discounts outside of Bank are 8@8½ ₱ cent. on strictly prime lists of paper, and 9@10 on fair names. The offerings at Bank are not generally pressing, and the discount line ran down a million of dollars last week with-⅝@½; most of the ready money sales at ¼@⅜. The market closed firm, however, 109¼@109½. It was also firm on France and the north of Europe. The Express Company will take to Boston this afternoon $460,000 in gold bars, and $100,000 in silver, of which $30,000 was received yesterday by the Black Warrior from New-Orleans and Havana. The Fulton brought in $140,000 in Spanish gold. The Sub-Treasury received $286,863; disbursed $338,807; and held at the close $14,913,934

The financial news by the Fulton, though really of no practical bearing on this money market, was out any effort at curtailment. The additional business done in Exchange to-day for the Boston steamer was at irregular rates on London, 109¼@ ket, (the change in London being confined to advances on Consols,) was availed of at the early Board to turn the upward current which manifested itself yesterday, but the continued and rapid advance in Reading, and the marked ease in Money for all business purposes as well as on Stocks, were more than equal, at the close of the day, to the use made of this news. Prices left off at nearly the same point quoted on Monday afternoon. The additional rise on Reading was 2¼ ₱ cent., making 5 ₱ cent. since Saturday. The sales for cash at 84 @84¼ ₱ cent. were about 4,000 shares, subsequent to which the stock was offered down on sellers' option, 30 or 60 days, at 83@83⅛, and even as low as 82 ₱ cent. This effected the cash bids, which left off 83¼@83⅛ ₱ cent. It was stated in the afternoon that the difficulty of commanding stock to deliver on the heavy short contracts, recently entered into, is already so apparent as to have induced most of the cash purchases, on the opening of the Second Board, by the Bears themselves. Yet the stock has not been more largely oversold than half-a-dozen other Railroad shares on the active list. There was an advance of 1¾ ₱ cent. on Chicago and Rock Island, and ⅛ ₱ cent. on Toledo from the last bids of Monday. Erie closed 46¼; New-York Central 87⅛; Illinois Central 129¼, with a disposition to press contracts at sellers' option.

The Board of Canal Commissioners have decided to have the Canals of this State open and ready for navigation on the 6th day of May next.

The interest in the present is fast giving way to the prospects for the next crop. It is fully conceded that the total for this season must fall below 3,000,000 bales.

Two weeks ago it was asserted pretty generally throughout the South, that the planting had been unusually early this year, and that the crop was more forward than for some years past. During the past week we have accounts from nearly every section of the cotton growing region, that the reverse was the case. A heavy frost occurred on the 5th and 6th of April, killing such cotton as was already above ground, and on the 13th instant, another severe frost passed over the whole country, do

The British screw-steamer Edinburgh, CUMMINGS Commander, from Glasgow on the evening of the 9th inst., arrived at this port yesterday.

The Edinburgh brought three hundred passengers.

We have received Glasgow papers of that day, containing telegraphic advices from London dated on the morning of the day previous, (April 8,) and consequently later than the intelligence brought either by the Pelion or the City of Washington.

The London Globe, ministerial evening paper, in its issue of the 8th inst. gives the following as the latest summing up of election returns in Great Britain and Ireland: Liberals, 374; Conservatives, 250.

The Globe states that at present the Bishop of Norwich has not the power of vacating his See, and an act of Parliament must be passed making it lawful to accept his resignation. Under these circumstances, the vacancy is purely prospective, and of course no steps have been taken to fill it up.

There is a report in Paris that the coronation of the Emperor NAPOLEON is fixed for May 4.

The Journal des Debats attributes the existence o [illegible] in France to the absence of free discussion in speaking and in the press.

The Grand Duke CONSTANTINE was expected at Toulon on the 23d ult. A flotilla of French war steamers would meet the Russian squadron, and accompany it to Toulon.

The Pope's Government has made still further reductions in duties on foreign goods, the former reductions having produced very beneficial effects.

A telegraphic dispatch from Marseilles, dated 7th of April, states that the snow that blocks up the roads in Persia will delay the return of the ratification of the treaty with England. The Ottoman Ambassador at Teheran has presented a note requiring the execution of the boundary treaty, and the restitution of seven towns, especially Ourmiach and Sulimaniah.

A dispatch from Stockholm says that the Diet have unanimously approved of the abolition of the Sound Dues, and the treaty concluded with the various powers.

The following document, purporting to be a dispatch addressed to the Viceroy of Canton by the Chief of the Council of the Emperor of China, has been received in Paris from Macao:

"YIH--I have serious news to announce to you. We have read with attention the account you have given us of the attack by the English barbarians. The Hoti Ko were unanimous in their indignation, and we determined that the Emperor should be informed of it, notwithstanding the pain it occasions his magnanimous heart; and these are the commands of his mighty will:

"YIH--You are to carry on a war of extermination against the foreign barbarians who have attacked you. They must receive from you an exemplary chastisement. But after the vengeance shall have been deemed sufficient by you, and if they manifest sincere repentance for what they have done, the Emperor, our magnanimous Sovereign, who is inundated with floods of light, consents that hostilities should cease, and that commercial affairs should be settled with these foreigners as they existed previously, for their fault.

"YIH--You will take heed, and you will communicate the proceeding to the Mandarins placed under your orders.

"Given the 10th day of the second moon."

The Stock market was generally flat, and transactions limited.

As previously mentioned in these columns, the re [illegible] sales of Tea, Coffee and Sugar came into operation on Monday last, and on that day and yesterday the duties paid at our Custom House, principally on these articles, exceed £50,000.

Notwithstanding the strong and decided accounts received from America by the last arrived steamer of [illegible] receipts, reduced estimates of crop, and higher prices, the Cotton market keeps dull and inanimate, [illegible] purchases only to supply their immediate wants, and there is no speculation. Beans, feeding qualities, in good demand, at about 6d. ₰ boll decline in the week. White Peas the turn cheaper. Sack and barrel Flour the turn in favor of buyers.

There were several transactions in Sugar at the London produce market to-day at full prices. High rates were obtained for Ceylon coffees, which were in good request. In tea the clearances were large, but the sales small. In other articles there was no change.

The sales of Cotton at the Liverpool market to day amounted to 6,000 bales, 500 of which were taken up by speculators and exporters. The market was quiet, and the closing prices were—Surats, 4¼d. @6d.; Egyptians, 9⅛@10d.; Brazils, 7⅞d.@9d.; American, 6⅝d.@9⅛d.

Business was far from brisk at the London Corn Exchange to-day, and prices for the leading articles were a shade easier.

The Panama Railroad and the Movements Against New-Granada.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, April 21, 1857.

There are signs that the New-York Panama Railroad Company are a little alarmed at the effect of the vigorous demonstration of this Government against New-Granada. It was not a war that they wanted, but future security against the extortion of the New-Granadian Government and against the repetition of the outrages of the 15th of April. A capital of twenty-three millions of dollars is vested by the Panama Steamer and Railroad Company in this transit, and, in the event of a war, even if no foreign nation took part with New-Granada, it is probable that the transit would be at least temporarily interrupted.

The people and the Government of New Granada, as a measure of defence or revenge, might obstruct or break up the railroad and seize upon and destroy the property of the Company. It would be an easy thing to bombard and destroy Aspinwall, but it would be more destructive to the interests of the American Company than those of the natives. The Company may deny that they stimulated the Government to the adoption of hostile measures, or that they have urged the expediency of the acquisition by the United States of the territory within which the transit lies. They would prefer that the territory should be common and free to all nations, for if it was the expression exclusively of one, it would be exposed to the hazards of war.

DISASTER AND SUPPOSED LOSS OF LIFE.—We learn by a letter from Havre-de Grace, that during the violent blow on Wednesday of last week, a schooner, supposed to be loaded, and apparently of 100 tons burden, was seen to go down in the bay opposite the mouth of the Sassafras River. She was steering up the bay under a three-reef mainsail, which still remains set. It appears from parties who have visited her, that her jib is gone—probably blown off before sinking. She lies in about 3¼ fathoms water, and what is still more painful to add, her boat is still attached to her, thereby rendering it probable that her crew are all lost. The general impression is that she is a Schuylkill coaler. At present her name, as well as the fate of her crew, is a mystery.—Baltimore Sun

INTERESTING FROM WASHINGTON.

Governor Izard, of Nebraska--Colonel Sloo and the Tehuantepec Company--The Guadalupe Treaty--Nicaraguan Affairs, &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, April 22.

It has been decided by the Administration not to remove Governor IZARD from the Executive post which he holds in Nebraska, but to give him an opportunity to be heard in answer to the charges that have been brought against him. If after such a hearing it should be necessary to remove him, a Southern man will be appointed as his successor.

Col. SLOO telegraphs from New-Orleans that he has been again cheated out of the direction of the Tehuantepec Company, and that at the new election just held the present Board has been reelected, with Mr. NICOLL as President.

The Sloo Company urge the Government to make at once a contract with them for the conveyance of the mails across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec. If this should be done it would render operative the eighth article of the Gnadalupe Treaty and secure to the Government the desired right of way, as that article authorizes the United States, whenever they may deem it necessary, to interfere for the protection of persons and property of American citizens upon the Tehuantepec Isthmus.

The Government is disposed to act for itself and entirely independent of the companies, as the importance of securing this route is profoundly appreciated.

It is contemplated to establish two more Naval Courts of Inquiry. The number of applicants for redress is one hundred and twenty.

Tuesday, April 21, 1857.

The United States Government, under the late Administration, suspended diplomatic intercourse with Nicaragua, but defined no particular line of policy in regard to that country--or its affairs. The present Administration has adopted or fallen into the same line of masterly inactivity. This Government has not even possessed the facilities for accurate information from Nicaragua which have been secured by the Government of Great Britain, the latter having had, through a discreet and intelligent agent, full details of everything which has passed. It was supposed, some weeks ago, that WALKER was about to establish his dominion, drive out the allied forces, and dictate terms of peace with his neighbors; and that, under the circumstances, the present Administration would resume diplomatic correspondence, and enter upon a negotiation for the assent of Nicaragua and Costa Rica to the terms of the modified Dallas and Clarendon Convention. But, whatever might have been the outside opinion, the Administration were too cautious to be deceived by rumors of Walker victories, and took no steps on the subject. Now that WALKER is excluded from the port and river of San Juan, it is not unlikely that he may be shut out before long from the Pacific side also. When GARRISON and MORGAN cease to afford him aid, his sands will run low.

Should WALKER be expelled, Nicaragua may be cut up and partitioned among the neighboring Central American States, according to the plan of the Allies. In that case, it might be still more difficult to obtain the assent of all these petty States to the provisions of the Dallas and Clarendon Convention.

The only policy of our Government is to settle the pending difficulty with England first, and await an opportunity for a negotiation with Nicaragua.

It is very plain that our Government will not take upon itself the task of keeping open, for our own commerce and that of the world, the Nicaragua transit, in opposition to all obstructions. The ingenious plan of a joint guarantee, by England and the United States, of the Isthmus transits has been entirely frustrated. The appeals of the original Accessory Transit Company, whose business was interrupted and property confiscated by WALKER, for redress, have remained unnoticed by this Government. This ought to be a warning to companies of this description, of the hazard of investing their funds in a local enterprise in a foreign country. They can look for no protection to this Government, notwithstanding the occasional flourishes of Presidential rhetoric on this subject.

It is true that the Greytown affair might seem to be an exception to the rule. Upon the complaint of the Morgan-J. L. White Transit Company, of the seizure of some of their property by Greytown people, the Government sent Captain HOLLINS to bombard and destroy the town, in case of the failure of the town authorities to pay a certain sum, as an indemnity. The spasmodic effort will not soon be repeated, for the Government found, soon after, that they had been imposed upon by the Company, and never recovered from their mortification in consequence of it. The story of the Company was so explained by Greytown people and others, that MR. MARCY himself was convinced that the Government had been humbugged. This was one strongly operating reason with the Government for not attempting to protect that Company when it became a prey to the capitalists of fillibusterism. I know well the fact that a change came over the feelings of the Administration on the subject, soon after the Greytown affair, and that they then first assumed the ground that private companies must take care of themselves, and not involve the Government in their private squabbles.

This leads me to remark upon the subject of Mr. MARCY's note, towards the close of his official term, to the French Minister, in answer to demands for indemnity on account of the destruction of the property of French citizens at Greytown. The British Government had also mentioned the subject, not making, however, any serious point of it. The reply of Mr. MARCY covers the whole case. You will find that the French Minister did not put his demand in writing, though Mr. MARCY requested it; and it is also a remarkable fact, that neither the French nor the British Minister questioned the right of this Government to proceed in the manner they did, against Greytown. The demand was only for indemnity. Mr. MARCY's reply was directed to this last point; and of course, the right being admitted, the claim for indemnity fell to the ground. Mr. MARCY urged, in this note, the examples which British history affords, in many instances, of the assertion of the right, and the refusal of the indemnity, and pointed to the Copenhagan affair and the recent bombardment of Canton. The greatest panic existed in the settlements, and all the farmers were erming and preparing to join in the pursuit.

THE FREE-STATE VICTORY AT LEAVENWORTH--ARRIVAL OF MR. STANTON.

LEAVENWORTH CITY, K. T., MONDAY, April 13, 1857.

Three times three for Leavenworth City; a thousand cheers for the success of the Free-State ticket, and the election, decided and triumphant, of HENRY J ADAMS. The importance of this Free State victory, insignificant as it may appear in its immediate results, can scarcely be over-estimated. In the evidence it furnishes that freedom has triumphed in this stronghold of Border Ruffianism, in the confidence it will inspire in the hearts of the Free-State men throughout the length and breadth of the Territory, in the effect it will have upon Congress and the country at large, it assumes a magnitude and an importance almost incalculable.

The Pro-Slavery Party had two nominees in the field, but Mr. ADAMS outstripped them both. The vote stood:

	Adams.	Taylor.	Shannon.
1st Ward	188	10	94
2d Ward	158	19	39
Total	346	29	133

This handsome majority was also obtained in spite of a so-called enactment, dug up from the bogus legislature records, of which a six months' residence was required in the city as a qualification for a voter. This cut off a large Free State vote which has come into the Territory since Spring.

ARRIVAL AND SPEECH OF MR. STANTON.

Mr. STANTON, Secretary of the Territory, under WALKER, and acting Governor during WALKER's absence, arrived in the city to day, and delivered an address to the people. In opening which he announced himself as a native of Virginia and a resident of Tennessee, and then very coolly informed his hearers that they might judge from this fact, "of his proclivities." He thought the Free-State people were making a great mistake in not voting for Congressional Delegates, and further, that the constitution there adopted would pass Congress. He deeply regretted the disturbances that had occurred in the Territory, and hoped that there would be no further trouble, but maintained that the laws of the Territorial Legislature must be enforced. Mr. STANTON is a fine looking man, and, it is said, means to do about right, but the Free-State men are greatly disappointed in his speech, which betrayed, so they think, an unaccountable ignorance of Kansas affairs and a hostility to the Free-State cause. I will take occasion to see Mr. STANTON, and endeavor to learn his views and policy more distinctly.

It may be mentioned as a singular fact in connection with Mr. STANTON, that he followed Dr. STRINGFELLOW, who delivered a preeminently Pro-Slavery address, holding that he had, as a National Democrat, two great objects in view, the first to do all in his power to make Kansas a Slave State, and, failing in this, to make a Democratic Free State, which is about the same thing.

THE NEW POLICE COMMISSION.

Mayor Wood obtains an Injunction--His Instructions to the Captains.

THE NEW BOARD ORGANIZES.

CANDIDATES FOR THE NEW PLACES.

There was a great commotion in and about the City Hall yesterday, in expectation of the meeting of the new Police Commissioners. The curiosity was stimulated by the rumor that Mayor WOOD would interpose some obstacle to their organization.

During the forenoon the Mayor summoned the Police Captains before him at his office, and to each and all of them he delivered instructions not to acknowledge in any manner the power of the new Police Commission, but to act as heretofore, by order of the old Commissioners, until the powers of the Board appointed by the Legislature should be determined by the Court of last resort.

At the opening of the Supreme Court in the morning, His Honor made application for an injunction to be issued upon the new Commissioners and it was readily granted by Justice DAVIES.

The proceedings had at this Court were as follows:

Before Hon. Justice Davies.

Fernando Wood vs. James W. Nye, Simeon Draper, Jacob Cholwell, James Bowen, Jas. S. T. Stranahan and S. S. Powell.--Yesterday an application was made by the plaintiff for an injunction against the defendants, restraining them from acting as Commissioners under the new police bill.

An order to show cause was granted, returnable on Saturday next, at 11 o'clock, and a temporary injunction was ordered. It concludes as follows:

"In the meantime, and until said motion be decided, I do hereby order, restrain and enjoin the above-named defendants, and each and all of them, from entering upon the duties of the office of Commissioner of Police, as mentioned in the act entitled 'An act to establish a Metropolitan Police District, and to provide for the government thereof,' passed April, 1857, from forming any Board of Police; from assuming any control over the police force of the City and County of New-York; from entering upon or taking possession of any telegraphic apparatus, public police property, books, records, and accoutrements now in the possession of the Police Department of said City and County, or from exercising any authority or power over or in respect to the Police of the City and County of New-York, or any of its officers, records or property."--April 21, 1857. HENRY E. DAVIES.

J. D. & T. D. SHERWOOD, Attorneys, 111 Broadway.

The complaint, in brief, sets forth, first, that the plaintiff is Mayor of this City, having been duly elected, &c., and is a corporator and tax-payer. Second, that by virtue of said office, he is at the head of the Police Department of this City and County, and is clothed by the Constitution and Laws of the State and the Charter of the City with the power of directing, governing and controlling the police. Also, by virtue of his office, he is one of the Board of Police Commissioners, established by the act of April 13, 1853; and as such, is clothed with the power of trying the officers, policemen and doormen of the Police Department, and of appointing the same. Also, he has, by virtue of the ordinances of the City, the power to prescribe rules and regulations for the government of the police of the City and County.

3. That the plaintiff is informed and believes that at the adoption of the present Constitution of this State in 1841, the police establishment and powers in the City and County of New-York were a local matter, vested in the territorial limits of this City and County, so far as its appointments and removals from office and its compensation and specific duties were concerned; and all officers connected with the Police were either county or City officers, and not State, district or other officers, whose election or appointment was not provided for by the said Constitution. These same powers and regulations have been continued until the passage of the act hereafter mentioned.

4. By section 2 of art. 10 of the Constitution of this State, it is provided that all county officers whose election or appointment is not otherwise provided for by the Constitution, shall be elected by the electors of the respective counties, or appointed by the Board of Supervisors or other county authorities, as the Legislature shall designate for that purpose.

5. That plaintiff avers that, pursuant to the practice prior to the adoption of the Constitution of 1847, any commissioners or officers then existing, or thereafter to to be created or appointed, who were to be vested or charged with the power of appointing to, or receiving from, office any of the police, and of regulating and governing them, were, necessarily, under the Constitution, either a county or a city officer, and not otherwise, and to derive their office from an election or an appointment.

6. The plaintiff states, that in violation of these provisions of the Constitution, the Legislature did pass the act known as the "Metropolitan Police Bill," which authorized the appointment by the Governor, with the consent of the Senate, of seven Commissioners of Police, who shall be chief officers of said Metropolitan Police District, which district is declared to consist of the counties of New-York, King's, Westchester, and Richmond, and by said act have conferred upon the Commissioners all the powers over, and duties in respect to, the Police in this City, now possessed by the local authorities of this city; and that the greater part of the expenses of these Commissioners shall be paid by the City.

7. Wherefore the plaintiff believes the act to have been an evasion of the Constitution, and therefore void; and that he is acting in this matter in connection with the majority of the present Board of Police Commissioners.

8 The plaintiff believes that the defendants have been appointed Commissioners of Police under this act; have taken their oath of office, and claim to be duly qualified to act and perform its duties in connection with the plaintiff, as Mayor of New-York, and SAMUEL S. POWELL, as Mayor of Brooklyn, and intend to enter upon the duties and assume the control of the Police force of this City, and the property connected therewith.

9. The plaintiff is informed that the act is unconstitutional, and believes that the Board of Aldermen have passed a resolution directing the Mayor, Recorder and City Judge to retain possession of all property belonging to the Police Department, and to refuse to acknowledge the Police Commissioners. The Board of Councilmen have passed a resolution requesting the opinion of the Corporation Counsel on the bill, and directing the Mayor, &c., to abstain from recognizing the Commissioners until the opinion is received.

10. The plaintiff is apprehensive that if the Commissioners get possession of the property of the Police Department, there will arise a conflict of authority which will jeopard the public peace, &c.

11. The plaintiff prays for judgment against the defendants, and that the act in question be declared unconstitutional; also, that the defendants may be perpetually restrained from exercising any power or authority, under the said act; and, in the meantime, until the final judgment, the defendants be restrained from entering on their duties, or possessing themselves of any of the property of the Police Department, &c.

The bill in question is appended, and forms a part of the complaint.

The following undertaking was filed:

Title of Suit, &c.--Whereas, the above named plaintiff applied to Hon. HENRY E. DAVIES, a Justice of the Supreme Court, for an injunction in the above entitled suit against the defendants, restraining them as in the complaint in said suit and in said order of injunction as mentioned and set forth;

Now, therefore, in consideration thereof, I, FERNANDO WOOD, the above-named plaintiff, of the City of New-York, do undertake that I will pay the above-named defendants such damages, not exceeding $50,000, as they may sustain by reason of the said injunction, if the Court shall finally decide that the said plaintiff was not entitled thereto.

In witness whereof, I have hereto set my hand, this 21st day of April, 1857. FERNANDO WOOD.

In presence of J. W. EDMONDS.

City and County of New-York, ss.--Fernando Wood, of said City, being duly sworn, says that he is a householder and freeholder in said City, and is worth the sum of one hundred thousand dollars over and above all debts and liabilities.

(Signed) FERNANDO WOOD.

Sworn before me this April 21, 1857.

HENRY E. DAVIES.

City and County of New-York, ss.--I do certify that on this 21st day of April, 1857, Fernando Wood, to me well known personally, appeared before me and duly acknowledged that he executed the above undertaking, as his own free act, for the uses and purposes therein mentioned. HENRY E. DAVIES.

For plaintiff, Charles O'Conor, Ex-Judge Edmonds, Attorney-General Cushing, and Theodore Sedgwick. J. T. and T. D. Sherwood, Attorneys.

Organization of the New Board.

The five gentlemen, to wit: SIMEON DRAPER JACOB C. CHOLWELL, Gen. J. W. NYE, JAMES BOWEN and J. S. T. STRANAHAN, appointed to act as Commissioners under the new Police law, met yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, at the Sessions Court-room for organization.

On motion of Gen. NYE, Mr. SIMEON DRAPER was chosen Chairman of the Commission, who thereupon proceeded briefly to state the purpose of the meeting and the general policy which would govern the action of the Board. He had discussed with his associates the nature of the duties about to devolve upon them, and felt their importance and responsibility. The Board would keep constantly in view the fact that the power placed in their hands was designed solely to promote the public interest, and not aid the schemes of any political party. Politics would be ignored, and character, capacity and experience, would be the only qualifications acceptable in applicants for appointments. Such incumbents as possess these requisites would not be removed.

The Chairman then remarked that he had called on his Honor the Mayor in the morning, and invited him to join the new Commissioners in organizing, and also requested permission for them to meet at the Mayor's office. His Honor received him cordially, and stated that he would favor him with a reply in the course of a day or two. Not hearing from him in that time, Mr. DRAPER addressed the Mayor the following note:

To His Honor the Mayor:

SIR: I have waited an hour with the hope of seeing you, in regard to the time and place of the first meeting of the Police Commissioners, appointed under the act passed April 15, 1857.

I will be glad to have an interview with you in reference to these points, as early in the day as you can give me an opportunity. Please inform me of your wishes this forenoon, if you can conveniently do so, by a note addressed to me at No. 106 Pine-street.

Your obedient servant, S. DRAPER.

The Mayor returned the following reply:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, NEW YORK, Saturday, April 22, 1857.

MY DEAR SIR: In reply to your note of this date, I have to state that I do not recognize the right of yourself, or the gentlemen to whom you refer as Police Commissioners, to act as such, and that I shall, under the advice of counsel, resist the exercise of any authority as such. Very truly yours,

SIMEON DRAPER, Esq. FERNANDO WOOD.

Mr. DRAPER also stated that the Commissioners had been served with an order granted by Judge DAVIES, at the instance of the Mayor, restraining them from organizing. But he had procured such a modification of the injunction as permitted them to organize. The case of the injunction will be heard to-day at 4 o'clock.

Gen. NYE was confirmed as Secretary, and Mr. BOWEN elected Treasurer. Messrs. BOWEN, STRANAHAN, CHOLWELL, and the Mayors of Brooklyn and New-York were named a Committee to prepare a form of by-laws.

On motion of Mr. BOWEN, it was agreed that the meetings of the Board should be public.

The Commission then adjourned to Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Candidates for Police Openings.

There is by no means so large a list of candidates for the offices within the gift of the new Commissioners of Police as might be expected. They have the appointment of the following new officers: A Superintendent, at $3,000 per year; a Chief Clerk, at $2,000; six Deputy Clerks, at $1,000; six Surgeons, at $1,500, and a Receiver, to take charge and keep account of all stolen goods which may be recovered, until they are reclaimed by the owners. The salary of this officer is not fixed by the law. The Commissioners may also appoint as many more Clerks as they may deem necessary, whose salary is left to the discretion of those making the appointment.

For Superintendent we have heard of only one candidate, JOSEPH KEEN, formerly Warden of the Penitentiary, and now of the Workhouse on Blackwell's Island. He has a special advocate in SIMEON DRAPER, Esq., who has certainly had a chance to discover his merits or demerits, while he himself was serving as Governor of the Almshouse. Justice OSBORN, the oldest Police Magistrate in the City, has also been named in this connection, but we do not know that he is a candidate. Chief MATSELL, it is said, would not object to the appointment, but there is no rumor of his sending his "papers" to the new Board.

For Chief Clerk there are four candidates who are talked of publicly. First is FRANKLIN J. OTTARSON, Republican Councilman of the Forty-first District, and City Editor of the New-York Tribune. Second, GEORGE W. PEARCEY, late Police Magistrate, and now a lawyer and member of the Republican Committee. Third, GUY R. PELTON, lawyer, and late member of Congress from the Third District. Fourth, WILLIAM ALLEN, of the Tenth Ward, lawyer.

For Deputy Clerks, there is at present a marvelous lack of candidates. In fact we have as yet only heard of one, MERWIN N. JONES, of the Third Ward, at present employed in the Register's office, but this announcement will, doubtless, develop a plenty. Of the present Police Surgeons--who by law are policemen detailed to do medical duty--some will probably be ordered to do patrol duty. For the new posts there are a number of candidates; among them Dr. S. WATERMANN, of the Tenth Ward, and Dr. A. S. JONES, of the Fifteenth Ward, one of the present incumbents.

There are likely very soon to be further vacancies in the department, since several who wear the stars do not possess the qualifications required by section 7 of the new law, and hence are liable to be removed. Charges are also pending against others. Many candidates for any vacancies there may occur in the deputy superintendencies, inspectorships, &c., stand ready. The new law requires that inspectorships shall be filled from the sergeants, and sergeantcies from the patrolmen; but it does not say that a man shall not be appointed a patrolman at 12 o'clock, a sergeant half an hour later, and an inspector at 1. In case Deputy Superintendent MATSELL should resign, Capt. WALLING (late American) is a candidate. It will be remembered that Captain W. was turned out of the Captaincy of the Eighteenth Ward last Summer, by Mayor WOOD.

Capt. HOPKINS, of the Third Ward, (a Republican,) is also talked of in connection with this place. For Inspector of the Sixth District there are two candidates--MOSELY LYONS, last year the Republican candidate for Assembly, and GEO. J. SMITH, (American,) Captain of the Ward in 1849-50. In the Eighth District there are also two candidates--WM. PEEL, Sergeant of the New-York Volunteers in Mexico, and formerly on the Crystal Palace Police, who has been Secretary of the Republican Central Committee since its organization, and MORRIS DE CAMP, some years ago Lieutenant of the Ward. In the Ninth District, JACOB L. SEBRING, late "Lieutenant," now "Sergeant," is a candidate for the Inspectorship, when vacant. In the Fourteenth Ward there are also several candidates. For the Inspectorship of the Twentieth Ward, CHARLES MISSING, and of the Twenty-Second, JAMES E. COULTER, (Republicans,) are candidates.

Fire Wardens' Report.

The annual report of the Fire Wardens gives the following list of the different complaints acted upon by the Wardens, buildings examined, etc., for the year ending April 14, 1857:

Heaters and furnaces examined and altered	43
Dangerous stove-pipes removed	124
New buildings where violations existed	96
Wooden sheds removed and altered	120
Notices served on trap doors and hoistways	180
Buildings in course of alteration, where violations of the law were found	260
Whole number	823
Whole number of buildings and sheds examined by the Wardens	2,106

The Grand Target Company Parade.

The monster parade of the target companies of this and neighboring Counties, which was to have taken place last Monday, and which was postponed through the inclemency of the weather, will come off to-day, if the skies are at all propitious. The fact that the procession will march through nearly all the principal streets of the City, will enable almost everybody to have a glance at it. The line will form on Fourteenth-street, at 9½ o'clock A. M., under the direction of Adjutant-General DISBROW, Major-General WILLIAM WILSON, and JOHN CARIGHTON, and will move down Broadway at 10½ o'clock. Over 12,000 men, it is conjectured, will turn out.

☞ Health Warden KIRK, of the Seventeenth Ward, in a recent examination of the streets in his Ward, discovered 160 houses from which garbage and kitchen offal is daily cast into the streets, in direct violation of the City ordinances. It is made the duty of the Health Warden to report the street and number of such houses. By this means the City Inspector will, in due time, be prepared to take efficient action. For the new Charter gives sanitary powers over the streets to that officer.

TICKET-[illegible]

Observations and Experiences of a Western Man.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

Coming into your City last Saturday, I found at the Hotel where I took lodgings some fifty or sixty persons from various parts of the country who had come hither to take passage in the George Law which sailed on the 20th. I soon learned from their conversation that many of them were very much disappointed, in consequence of the price of passage being greatly enhanced within a few days previous to the ship's departure. There was also much dissatisfaction, caused from some having to pay a much higher price for tickets of the same grade than others had paid on the same day. Being a resident of an interior part of the State of Illinois, I at once concluded that there was a game being played by some persons, and to whom the blame should be attached, was a mystery.

I therefore set about the inquiry into this strange mode of doing business.

I learned that, near to the proper ticket office of the California Steamship Company, there were what are called bogus ticket offices, selling genuine tickets of the Company for this trip. It was then pointed out to me in the public newspapers, where the Company through their Agent, Mr. J. W. RAYMOND, had cautioned the public against buying tickets at any other office in this City, except at No. 177 West-street, corner of Warren. My next inquiry was, how did it happen, that the tickets sold by these bogus agents were genuine? Had they been stolen from the true office? How did they get them?

I learned that these tickets had been purchased by speculators from the agent of the company, for the purpose, of course, of selling to persons wishing to go to California at an advance on their cost. Here also appeared a strong feature in this speculation: the company, through their only acknowledged ticket agent in this City, first sells a number of blank tickets by wholesale, as it were, to speculators, or men keeping bogus ticket-offices; and then cautioning the public against buying these same tickets. Did the company, through this agent, intend by such advertisement to actually prevent any person from buying the tickets sold to these speculators? This certainly cannot be the intention of such an advertisement, because there is only the same number of tickets issued that there is berths to be sold; therefore it would be rascally, in the extreme, for this agent to sell speculators tickets for which he did not intend to furnish berths.

I came to the conclusion, from my observations, that the company is by no means free from blame in this matter of ticket-swindling, but that on the contrary it does much to aid it, and by advertising its own rates as the "bogus" agents advertise theirs, if in fact shares the proceeds of the whole operation.

As an evidence of this, I will state a case that came under my own observation in January last. Stopping a few days at that time at Lovejoy's Hotel, I made the acquaintance of three farmers from my neighboring State of Iowa, who had come here on their way to California, and being put on their guard from seeing the caution of the true company in the TIMES, by their vigilant agent, J. W. RAYMOND, they felt quite secure from being swindled. On entering the City in the cars, they were called upon by one of the bogus agents' runners, and fur

CLAIM FOR RETURN OF DUTIES ILLEGALLY EXACTED UPON IMPORTATIONS OF IRON—DUTIABLE VALUE UNDER TARIFF ACT OF JULY 30, 1846—APPRAISEMENT WHEN UNLAWFUL—EXTENT OF THE AUTHORITY OF APPRAISERS.

Eglenton & Battel vs. The United States.—(On trial upon petition and proofs.)—In April, 1849, the petitioners, E. & B., imported from Liverpool into New-York a quantity of iron the invoice value of which, including charges, was $2,170 52. The appraisers estimated its value at $2,392. The collector thereupon exacted a duty on the appraised value of 30 per cent.; that the appraised exceeding the invoice value by more than 10 per cent.—he also exacted, as penalty, an additional duty on the appraised value of 90 per cent. Other three importations of iron in the same year by E. & B. were similarly regarded and treated at the Custom House. In May they imported a quantity, by the Lemuel Dyer, the invoice value of which, including charges, was $1,873 94, and under a protest, made in writing and signed by them, against such addition, added to that va ue, so as to increase it to $1,628 35. The Collector, thereupon exacted on such increased value a duty of 30 per cent

The petitioners paid the duties thus exacted of them, on each of the five importations, under a protest, duly in writing and signed.

The whole of the iron, so imported, was purchased for cash at Liverpool in January, February and March, 1849, at the prices stated in the invoices and entries, and those prices were the cash market value of the iron, at the city of Liverpool, at the several periods when the purchases were made. In the interval between the purchases and the several shipments, such iron rose in price. The appraisers, under instructions from the Secretary of the Treasury, estimated the value as of the time of shipment, and not as of the time of purchase, in every instance except in that of the importation by the Lemuel Dyer. In that one, as already stated, the petitioners made the addition in the entry to the cost or value given in the invoice, under protest.

The importations were made under the tariff act of July 30, 1846; the eighth section of which makes it the duty of the proper collector to cause the dutiable value of such imports to be appraised, estimated and ascertained in accordance with the provisions of existing laws. The laws then existing, and in force till the passage of the act of May 5, 1851, (9 Stat., 539,) required the appraisers, where the goods imported were purchased, to ascertain their value at the time of the purchase, (not their value at the time of exportation,) in the principal markets of the country from which the same were imported into the United States.

The act of Aug. 30, 1842, section 94, (5 Stat., 566,) in express terms makes it "the duty of all collectors and other officers of the customs to execute and carry into effect all instructions of the Secretary of the Treasury relative to the execution of the revenue laws."

The petitioners now claim that the duties exacted on the excess of the appraisal over the invoiced values, and on the amounts added by themselves to the invoice value of the importation made by the Lemuel Dyer, and also the penalties exacted on the appraised value of two of the importations, where the appraised exceeded the invoice value by more than 10 per cent., should be refunded to them. The different payments to the United States were made between 11th and 16th of May, 1849.

By the Court, SCARBURGH, J., Held: The appraisers had no authority to consider the value at the time of exportation, except as a means of ascertaining the value at the time of purchase.

2. The object of the laws then in force seems to have been to tax the importer on the amount or value he had expended.

3. Where, therefore, the appraisers considered only the value at the time of exportation, and by their appraisement ascertained that value, and that value alone, and it was different from the value when the purchase was made, the appraisement was illegal. This is not inconsistent with the doctrine, that where the appraisers act within the legitimate sphere of their duties, their appraisement is final.

4. Where power or jurisdiction is delegated to any public officer, or tribunal over a subject-matter, and its exercise is confided to his or their discretion, the acts so done are binding and valid as to the subject-matter.

5. The only questions which can arise between an individual claiming a right under the acts done and the public, or any person denying their validity, are as to fraud in the officer and fraud in the party.

6. All other questions are settled by the decision made or the act done by the tribunal or officer, whether executive, legislative, judicial, or special, unless an appeal is provided for or other revision by some appellate or supervisory tribunal is prescribed by law.

7. The appraisers are appointed "with powers, by all reasonable ways and means, to ascertain, estimate, and appraise the true and market value and wholesale price" of the importation. The exercise of these powers involve knowledge, judgment and discretion.

8. Hence, their acts as appraisers, within the power given them, are, under the principle stated, considered as final, if not appealed from.

9. But their powers are special, and can be lawfully exercised only within the limits prescribed for them.

10. Inasmuch, therefore, as, in this case, the power of the appraisers was, by statute, confined to the ascertainment of the value at the time of the purchase, when the question is, whether they undertook to ascertain some other value different from that at the time of the purchase, it is a question of "power in the officer."

11. Such a question may properly arise, and if it be determined that the exercise of the power here was confined to ascertaining the value at the time of the exportation, then the act of the appraisers was invalid and unlawful.

12. The appraisers must, in this case, be presumed to have obeyed the instructions of the Treasury Department, and consequently, to have ascertained the value of the iron at the time of the exportation. The plain evidence is positive to the same effect.

13. As to the importation by the Lemuel Dyer, the petitioners made the addition to the value stated in the invoice in quite hoarded the penal duty provided for by section 8 of act of July 30, 1846, (9 Stat., 42.) That addition was made under protest, and in view of the determination of the Secretary of the Treasury, requiring the appraisers to ascertain the value at the time of the exportation. The design of the petitioners was to raise the value stated in the invoice to the value at the time of the exportation. They not only made the addition under protest, but they have paid the duties exacted thereon under protest. The exaction of those duties was illegal.

14. The protest made by the petitioners, whether other papers as were required by the act of Feb. 26, 1853, (10 Stat., 727,) or not, show that the money, the repayment of which the petitioners are now claiming, was paid by them involuntarily. They were forced to make the payments by the Collector, colore officii, through the invalid and illegal course pursued in having the appraisal made of the value at the wrong period. That money was thus obtained by a moral duress, not justified by law.—Abstract of opinion.

Bill reported in favor of petitioners for $1,153 40.

AS TO THE ADMISSION OF CERTAIN PAPERS AS TESTIMONY.

Nock vs. The United States.—Ketchum vs. Same.—Guilbeau vs. Same.—(On motion.)—On Dec. 20, 1855, the Senate passed a resolution as follows:

Resolved, That all private claims upon which no adverse reports were made or ordered during the late session of Congress, and which were pending before the Senate at the close of the last session, and which claims are founded upon any law of Congress, or upon any regulation of an Executive Department, or upon any contract express or implied with the Government of the United States, and which the claimants choose to prosecute before the Court of Claims, be, and the same are hereby referred to the said Court; and the Secretary of the Senate be, and he is hereby instructed, to deliver all the papers in such cases to the Clerk of the said Court upon his application.

On March 3, 1855, the House of Representatives, also, passed a resolution as follows:

Resolved, That all reports which any of the Committees have directed to be made to the House, shall be delivered to the Clerk, and they are hereby ordered to be printed; and such of them as are of a private character, together with all the bills that shall remain in the private calendar, and on the Speaker's table at the adjournment of Congress, are hereby referred, with the accompanying papers, to the Court of Claims.

It was argued, on the motion, that all papers transmitted to the Court of Claims under these resolutions, by either House of Congress, were to be considered as competent testimony, without regard to the rules of law which regulate the admission of evidence.

By the Court.—GILCHRIST, P. J.—In the case of Thomas Crown vs. The United States, we held that ex parte affidavits transmitted to us by Congress should be regarded as competent testimony where the witnesses were dead; but that unsworn statements in writing from deceased witnesses were incompetent to be received. In the opinion in the case referred to, we stated the reasons which brought us to this conclusion. We thought that the peculiar circumstances surrounding a case which had been before a Committee of Congress, properly made it an exception to the ordinary rule of law excluding ex parte affidavits, although the witnesses might be dead. In cases before us where a witness is dead, the party does all he can by producing his affidavit from his proper place of deposit; but where a witness is living, and accessible, the reason for admitting his affidavit, taken without notice to the adverse party, entirely fails. We do not find anything in the forms of the resolutions referred to which should alter the rule of evidence. They simply refer to us certain cases and the papers belonging to them. One object undoubtedly, in constituting this Court, was, that the United States might have the opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses in that mode which long experience has shown to be the best adapted to secure the ends of justice. The admission of ex parte affidavits is the exception to the ordinary rule regulating the admission of testimony, and this exception cannot exist unless under circumstances of peculiar character.

We think, therefore, that the motion in these cases must be denied, as there is nothing to bring them within any exception.

MARINE COURT.

POLICEMEN AND THEIR UNIFORMS—THE POWER OF THE LATE COMMISSIONERS—INTERESTING DECISION.

Burnham vs. The Mayor, &c., of New-York.—The following abstract is from a very elaborate opinion rendered by Judge THOMPSON, in deciding the above action: Burnham was a policeman, and was suspended by Captain Carpenter, of the Fifth Patrol District; and, on the 27th of February, 1854, finally discharged from the department, for refusing to provide himself with a uniform as required by the rules and regulations of the Police Commissioners. The only question in the case is, whether the plaintiff was suspended and discharged for sufficient cause, and in conformity with the provisions of the act of 1853, relating to the Police Department of the City of New-York. The act provides that the Commissioners shall prescribe rules for the discipline, conduct and government of the policemen, which shall be binding, under the penalty of suspension or dismissal. It is further provided that policemen shall wear a suitable emblem, or device, to be prescribed by the Commissioners. In pursuance of one or both of these provisions the Board of Commissioners established a rule that the members of the Police Department should "wear a frock coat, of Navy-blue cloth, single breasted; collar made to roll or stand; nine buttons on the breast, two buttons on the hip, also two buttons at at the bottom of the skirt." The Commissioners had no authority to ordain this rule. Neither of the provisions of the act referred to invest them with any such power. The right to establish rules for the discipline, conduct and government of Policemen, gave them no authority to establish a uniform for the police corps. The Board of Commissioners are a mere quasi-corporation, possessing no power beyond that which is expressly conferred by statute. The moment they transcend the limits prescribed by law, their acts become wholly null and void. The term "discipline," as employed in the act of 1853, means simply "instructions in manual exercises, evolutions and subordination." Conduct signifies personal behavior or deportment. The term "government" means the exercise of such authority as is necessary to direct and control the personal actions of the members of the Police force in a manner best calculated to render them prompt and energetic in the discharge of their duties and obligations to the City. It appears very evident that no power to establish a uniform is derivable from permission to prescribe rules for the "discipline, conduct and government" of the Police. But do the Commissioners derive any such power from their right to prescribe an emblem or device for Policemen? Ordinarily, the term "emblem" means, "An inlay; inlaid or mosaic work; something inserted in the body of another." Device means, "An emblem intended to represent a family, person, action or quality, with a suitable motto; used in painting, sculpture and heraldry. It consists in a metaphorical similitude between the things representing and represented, as the figure of a plow representing agriculture." Garments are never used as emblems or devices, except that in sacred meetings, white robes are sometimes used as emblems of purity. It is a well-known rule of construction in reviewing statutes, that you should give to the words used by the legislature their usual import, according to the common use of them. To the act of '53 we have applied this simple rule. We have but one course to pursue, and that is, to give effect to the intention of the law-making power. Judgment must, therefore, be rendered for the plaintiff for $500.

THE NEW ORGANIZATION OF THE MARINE COURT.

The new law in regard to the Marine Court is working quite a change in the practice there prevailing. The first section provides, as has been before stated, that summons issuing out of the Court may be served by the Sheriff of this City and County, or by any other person not a party to the action. The service is to be made and the summons returned with proof of the service to the clerk within the time now prescribed by law. All other process must be directed to and served by the Sheriff of the City and County of New-York.

With the summons must be served a complaint duly verified and stating the amount for which judgment is demanded. If the defendant fail to answer on the return of the summons, and the action be on contract, the clerk or one of the justices of the Court shall render judgment against the said defendant for the amount demanded in the complaint, together with costs. On the return of the summons, if the defendant appears, he shall put in a written answer duly verified, and the clerk may then adjourn the cause to any day the parties may name.

For any summons, attachment or warrant the clerk may issue, he is to receive $1, and if a trial be had the plaintiff is to pay him $3 50, besides which he is to receive no other fees. He may appoint a deputy and two assistant clerks, whose salary is to be fixed by the supervisors.

Freemasonry.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

DEAR SIR: It is perhaps Anti-Masonic to reply to your article on the Deniny case, yet the injustice is so gross that it ought not to pass without some notice.

A juror takes an oath to give a verdict in accordance with the evidence given before him. If he does differently, he forswears himself; and, therefore, no oath or obligation would be binding on such a one. The best and most reliable men of the nation, who have occupied every position of trust and honor with in their country's gift, have been active and prominent Masons, and it is worse than absurd to suppose them guilty of the crimes you charge against the order.

Any attempt to use Masonry for such purposes would not only injure the cause of the person so using it, but would subject him to the condemnation of all good Masons.

Philadelphia Cattle Market.

PHILADELPHIA, Wednesday, April 22, 1857.

The Beef market was better supplied yesterday and to-day than for several weeks previously. There was also an improvement in the quality of the stock and prices.

BEEF CATTLE—The sales of beef cattle reached 1,400 head, at prices ranging from $10@$11 to $11 50@$12 ₩ 100 lbs. Most of those from Illinois, Chester County and Ohio, brought the latter price. Some from Lancaster County were sold as high as $12 50, and one bullock, weighing 2,560 lbs., was sold for 15c. ₩ lb.

SHEEP—The supply of Sheep was very good, amounting to 5,500 head, and sales were active at prices ranging from $6 50 to $7 50 ₩ 100 lbs. gross, or at 12c.@13c. ₩ lb. net.

PIGS—This market was not so well supplied this week, the entire sales only reaching 1,450 head. They were disposed of at from $9 50@$9 75 ₩ 100 lbs.

COWS AND CALVES.—There has been no change in this market; the supply only reached 250 head, which were sold at from $30 to $50 for fresh Cows, $35 to $35 for Springers, and from $15 to $20 for Dry Cows.

Beeves are sold by the estimated dead weight of the four quarters; the so-called "fifth quarter" (hide and tallow) is not reckoned in here as it is in Boston and some other cities. When cattle are weighed or estimated alive, the dead weight is reckoned at a certain number of pounds to the 100 lbs. of live weight, as agreed upon. The general rule in this market for medium cattle is 56 lbs. to the 100; 44 lbs. being allowed for the "fifth quarter" and offal.

The average prices to-day, as compared with last week, are about ½c @¾c. higher.

GENERAL REMARKS UPON THE BEEF MARKET.

A glance at the tables above will indicate the condition of the market to day. Not only was there a short supply, but also a falling off in quality from last week, though they were not far below the general average at this season. The supply from the West has been small, more than one-third being credited to New-York State. The small receipts are in part due to the detention of freight trains on the railroads. Thirty car loads were stopped at Susquehanna, on the Erie Road, by a land-slide upon the track. It is also thought that there are few cattle in the country generally, both West and East, though we are inclined to think the deficiency somewhat magnified. The butchers just now find it difficult to meet the unusual demand that always follows the Lenten fast, especially as they have not bought freely for some weeks past, on account of the high prices. To-day they were inclined to hold back for the arrival of the delayed trains, which are looked for to-night, but finding the yards fast clearing out, and considering that the few to arrive would scarcely vary the prices, they too went in for a few even at 13½c.@13c. ₩ lb.,—hardly 14c.@15c., as some butchers would have us believe. The yards were cleared at an earlier hour than we have seen them before for a long time, very few remaining after 3 o'clock P. M. The sales of to-day amounted to only about 1,400, which added to 500 sold yesterday, makes 1,900, for what is usually called the day's market. The sales at all the markets for the past week have been 2,605, against 3,326 for last week. About 650 head were sold at Buffalo and Albany for the Brighton and other Eastern markets. The sales at Bergen have been almost nothing. Only ten car-loads have arrived there during the week, and most of these were brought over the river previous to selling.

The following are the principal lots on sale to-day, including a few disposed of last evening:

We present, as usual, a few extracts from our copious notes of the transactions of this day:

B. BARTRAM sold to-day for BARTRAM & BELDEN 90 Ohio Cattle fed by J. RENNICK. They were of extra quality, fully No. 1, and were estimated by BARTRAM to weigh 900 lbs. net. All were sold at an early hour at an average of about 13c.

The same party sold, yesterday, a fine lot of 75 cattle from STEWART'S Chirtenango, (N. Y.,) distillery, raised 850 lbs., for 12½c.@13½c. J. HARRIS took 23 at $120 each, and Col. DEVOE bought 4 at $135. They were owned by BARTRAM & BELDEN.

J. BEVANT contributed 45 Steers, which were only excelled by one other drove, and a few isolated animals. These were first bought in Illinois by WM. J. COGHRAN, a noted feeder of Pickaway County, Ohio, and fed by him for some time past. Live weight in Ohio 1,860 lbs. Sold, to-day, by C. G. TEED, at 12c.@13c. J. VALENTINE took 20 at $116 each, or fully 13c., both buyers' and sellers' estimate. GEO. DEVOE bought 8 at $105. This is the kind of stock we like to meet, and the butchers appeared to be of the same opinion.

MILLER, HABING & GURNEY sold 102 medium Ohio Cattle for —— JOHNSON, at $70 ₩ head, or about 11¾c. ₩ lb. Estimated 600 lbs., being rather light steers.

T. WHITE & SON sold for LAMB & SMITH 100 Illinois Cattle, fed by J. PRUNTY, of Cass County. They ranked among the good droves, and brought 11¾c.@13c. Home weight 1,419 lbs.

The same parties sold for WHITE & BARTRAM 86 fine distillery Cattle, from Onelda County, N. Y., estimated at near 900 lbs., at about 12½c. ₩ lb. Mr. H. MYERS took 4 at $110; C. GWIRE 20 at $120, and W. JOHNSON 7 at $108 each.

HARRIS & PANOAKE contributed 90 fair Cattle, from Ross County, Ohio; rated 800 lbs. in yards, and selling by J. A. MERRITT at 12c @13c.

PURCHASE & WHEATON sold on their own account 30 New-York State cattle of good quality, judged by owners to weigh 850 lbs. They brought 12c.@13c.

HARRIS & CLAYPOOL sold two lots of Illinois steers, one of 96 head, medium cattle, called 925 lbs. net, for CALEB & JACOBY, at 11c @12½c., and another, consisting of 88 fair to good beeves, of the same weight, for PLATT & READ, at about 12c.

SHERMAN & HOAG sold for ALLERTON & SHERMAN 30 Illinois cattle, estimated 725 lbs. net, at 12c.@13½c. They were a very fair lot of steers, and sold readily. Also, 48 rather common Indiana cattle, of 740 lbs., for J. MCCULLEN, at 11¾c.@12c.

GEORGE M. WELLS brought in 68 Illinois cattle, of good size, and very fair quality, rated at from 700 to 750 lbs. They were sold to ALLERTON & CARTER, who sold them yesterday at 11c.@12¾c.

C. W. COGHRE sold for D. ALLERTON 54 Illinois cattle, rated 750 lbs., at $91 50 each, or about 12c. They were fair beeves.

MILCH COWS WITH CALVES.

Milch Cows are sold at each of the above yards, usually with their Calves at their sides. The prices vary somewhat with the supply and demand, and very greatly, of course, upon the milking value. The particular fancy of the buyer has also considerable to do with the price. Not unfrequently a Cow is sold at $90@$100, or even $120. The general price throughout the year for ordinary Cows is $30 to $40 or $50. Quite a number sell above $50, and more, perhaps, below $30. We often see apologies for Cows go at $20 @$25. The weekly reports from the different yards will give the weekly fluctuations.

The demand is not very active at this season, between hay and grass. Prices appear to be maintained.

ALLERTON reports 47 Milch Cows received during the week, selling at $30@$35 for common, $40@$50 for good, and $50@$60 for extras. A few as high as $75. Stock light, but selling slowly.

BROWNING reports receipts of 57 Milch cows, selling at $36@$50 for common, $40@$50 for good, and $60@$70 for extras. No change during the week. Supply equal to the demand.

CHAMBERLIN reports 117 Milch Cows, selling at $25@$30 for common; $35@$45 for good; and $50@$55 for extras. Market remains unchanged, with a full supply on hand.

O'BRIEN reports 106 Milch Cows, selling, at $30@$40 for common, $40@$50 for good, and a few at $60@$65. Selling as last week. Quality good.

VEAL CALVES.

Veal Calves are sold by live weight, each animal being weighed alive at the time of sale. The principal places of sale are ALLERTON'S, BROWNING'S, CHAMBERLIN'S and O'BRIEN'S.

The receipts for the past week have been very large, and the quality an improvement upon previous week. Prices rule higher in consequence of the scarcity of beef and mutton.

ALLERTON reports 841 Veal Calves, selling for 5c.@7c.; a few at 7½c. Stock very large, and generally of fair quality. Selling well. The pens, though full in the morning, were nearly empty at night.

BROWNING reports 63 Veal Calves, selling generally at 5¾c.@7c., live weight. Selling much as last week.

CHAMBERLIN reports 181 Veal Calves, selling at 5½c @7c. Market well supplied. Stock generally fair, and selling well.

O'BRIEN reports 84 Veal Calves, selling at 6c.@7c.; a few at 7½c. A great falling off in numbers, making a short supply. Quality improved, and selling readily.

SHEEP AND LAMBS.

These are chiefly sold at ALLERTON'S, BROWNING'S, and CHAMBERLIN'S, at so much ₩ head for a particular lot of Sheep or Lambs, or of the two together. They are also frequently sold by live weight, as this is readily ascertained. The actual prices at the different yards seldom vary greatly. The difference in reputed prices is generally due to variation in the quality. When they are sold by weight, it is usually the net weight, which is ordinarily one-half what they weigh when alive, the pelt and offal making the other half. If fat and small-boned, they will dress 56 lbs., and in some cases 60 lbs., ₩ hundred. The average run is about one half the live weight.

Receipts continue light. The late storms have doubtless kept back many sheared sheep intended for this market. It is quite enough to expose them in fair weather, while a storm like the last would have proved too severe for naked sheep.

ALLERTON reports receipts of 615 Sheep, which brought $3@$3 ₩ head, or from 12c.@14c. ₩ lb. dressed weight. A few at 15c.@16c. One lot sold this morning at 7c. live weight. Market nearly empty in the morning—quite so at noon.

BROWNING reports receipts of 1,269 Sheep, selling at 12c.@15c. Stock sells readily as fast as it comes in. Receipts this morning, 200, which were immediately sold, leaving the market bare.

CHAMBERLIN reports receipts of 1,541 Sheep and Lambs, selling at $5@$7 ₩ head, or 10c.@14c. ₩ lb., dressed weight. Supply continues short, although an increase upon the previous week. No change in prices.

REPORTS OF BROKERS' SALES AT BROWNING'S FOR WEEK ENDING APRIL 21, 1857.

A. P. KINTON & Co. report sales of 263 Sheep, at $7 50 ₩ head; 50 do., at $7 62 ₩ head.

HALE & BALDWIN report sales of 500 Sheep at 13c. @ 15c. ₩ lb.

SWINE.

These are sold alive at so much ₩ lb., gross or live weight. Considerable numbers are sold at ALLERTON'S, Forty-fourth-street, and at various other yards, while large droves are sold direct from the cars or boats, and driven immediately to the various slaughter-houses.

The supply continues good, and a downward inclination is manifest. Stock generally fair.

ALLERTON reports receipts of 1,725 hogs during the past week. Prices for live hogs ranged during the week from 7¾c. to 7¾c. ₩ lb. With a pretty full stock prices are not firm at the above quotations.

VAN BRUNT & WATROUS, Pork-Packers, No. 200 Chambers-street, report prices as follows:

CORN-FED.

DISTILLERY.

Live.....7c. | Dressed.....9c.

Market rather dull, with a downward tendency. Supply good.

Wholesale Produce Markets.

Reported exclusively for the New-York Daily Times.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, April 22, 1857.

The prices given in our report from week to week are the average wholesale prices obtained by producers, and not those at which produce is sold from the market. The variations in prices refer chiefly to the qualities of the articles.

The heavy rains have prevented an active vegetable trade. We drop from our list vegetables which are either so poor as to be nearly worthless, or which are about out of market. Cabbages and several varieties of apples are omitted this week. A few early vegetables are making their appearance, and will be quoted as fast as a price is established.

Potatoes have not been very active during the past week, but prices are fully maintained.

Apples are becoming quite scarce, and the supplies are narrowed down to a few varieties, mostly Russetts. They are held very high by the few who have them.

Butter is not active, which is usually the case at this season, between hay and grass.

Eggs are in good supply; mostly Western.

The Poultry market is rather poorly supplied, and prices are advancing.

THE ELVES,
LEGEND.—The mountain forests of Pastoria are inhabited, it is said, by Pixies, Sprites and Elves, who, like the Phantom Dancers of Germany, delight to entrap travelers into their realms and bewilder them with their mischievous antics. Having the power of transferring the spirit, they often, in their malicious gambols, give life to the newly dead. Statues, rocks and trees are seen fantastically moving in the forest, but it is only during the DAY they retain their fictitious existence; at the approach of NIGHT they resume their immobility.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The first step was taken yesterday towards contesting the validity of the new law creating a Metropolitan Police. Mr. Draper, on behalf of the Commissioners, sent a note to Mayor Wood, who is ex officio a member of the Board, inviting his attendance at a meeting. The Mayor declined on the ground that he did not acknowledge the validity of the Commission, believing the law which created it to be unconstitutional. He said, furthermore, that he should not acknowledge the authority of the new Board until compelled to do so by the Court of last resort. Upon his application Judge Davies issued a temporary injunction upon the new Board, and requiring them to appear before him and show cause why the injunction should not be permanent. The case is to be argued to-day. The Mayor, also, made a speech to the Police officers, directing them to obey orders from no other quarter than himself. We apprehend the Mayor is mistaken in supposing that he can retain his present position until the case has been heard and decided by the Court of Appeals. If Judge Davies should continue the injunction upon the new Board this may be so. But if not, a mandamus would speedily compel the Mayor to transfer his authority over the Police to the new Board, though he might still contest their right to its exercise in the Courts of law, and if the final decision should be in his favor he could be reinstated. We understand that the resignation of Mr. Matsell as Chief of Police, to which we have heretofore alluded as being in the hands of the Mayor, is to take effect only in case the new Board shall appoint a Superintendent of Police over him. Having so long held the highest position at the head of the force, he is unwilling to take a subordinate place.

By the arrival last evening of the British screw steamer Glasgow, we receive one day's later advices from Europe. The latest summary of the elections in Great Britain is: Liberals, 374; Conservatives, 250. An important document has been published in Paris, purporting to be a proclamation of the Emperor of China, calling upon Yeh to inflict chastisement on the barbarians. It is given elsewhere.

News from the City of Mexico, to the 4th inst., has been received. It is stated that a new revolutionary movement, headed by the clergy and Santa Ana's emissaries has been discovered, and that several arrests have been made. The excitement relative to the threatened Spanish invasion was unabated, although, if the advices from Spain received here by the last steamer, should prove true, this will soon cease to be a matter of apprehension. In the meantime, however, the difficulty with the British Government seems to be approaching a climax—the Chargé of that Government, at the Capital, having sent in his ultimatum, allowing nine days for an answer. The telegraphic dispatch from which we learn this affords no information as to the precise condition of the negotiations which has led to this movement, but we shall probably be informed in this particular on receipt of our files and correspondence.

The Auditor of the Canal Department reported to the Canal Board on the 18th, that the amount of tolls lost to the State annually, by reason of boats passing between Higgins and Oswego, taking the route of the Oneida Lake Canal and the Oneida River Improvement, instead of going through the Erie and Oswego Canals by the way of Syracuse, was $42,164. The Board passed a resolution on Tuesday that all boats and property taking the former route, should hereafter be charged for the same distance and with the same amount of tolls as is now charged upon boats and property upon the latter route.

A band of six hundred Sioux Indians, said to be the same body which committed the murders at Spirit Lake, have been committing depredations at South Bend, Minnesota River. There is a rumor that the settlement of Markalo has been attacked and burned, and that the inhabitants have been murdered. Troops have been dispatched from Fort Ridgely in pursuit of the Indians.

The Meat Markets were poorly supplied yesterday both with Beef and Mutton. A land slide upon the Erie Railroad temporarily delayed some 30 car loads of cattle. Only 2,605 beeves were received in the City during the week ending yesterday, against a weekly average for 1856 of 3,548. Prices went up at the principal market ½c.@¾c. per pound, and the yards were cleared out at 3 o'clock P. M., with many butchers still unsupplied.

Yesterday a temporary injunction was granted by Mr. Justice Davies, restraining the Commissioners, appointed under the new Metropolitan Police Bill, from entering upon their duties. A motion for a permanent injunction will be made on Saturday next. The suit is brought by Mayor Wood against the Commissioners personally. He claims that the act is unconstitutional, and its effects would be injurious. In the undertaking which he filed he swore that he was worth $100,000 over and above all his liabilities.

The Board of Councilmen have determined to sit nearly every day until 1st of May to clear their calendar. Councilman Otterson induced the President to reverse the decision of concurrence with the Board of Aldermen in the resolution adopted on Tuesday as to the Police commission. The matter was ultimately laid over. Corporation Counsel reported to the Board his opinion that the new Charter will not deprive Councilmen of their pay after May 1. The rest of the proceedings though heavy were of local interest.

Three Committees of the Board of Councilmen ought to have met on Wednesday, but they could not get a quorum.

The Commissioners of Emigration could not obtain a quorum on Wednesday.

The argument on the motion to appoint a receiver in the case of Moncrieff and Mitchell vs. Moses Bettman, stands adjourned to Tuesday 28th. The defendant, it will be remembered, was an extensive dry goods merchant, who was arrested some few days since, and held to bail in the sum of $5,000, on a charge of having obtained goods on credit to the amount of $140,000, and then preparing to fail, with the intention of avoiding the liability.

An interesting decision was recently rendered by Judge Thompson, of the Marine Court. It seems that one James T. Burnham was a Policeman, and when the Police law of 1853 came into operation, was directed to wear the uniform, which he refused to do, and was, in consequence, dismissed from the department early in 1854. He now sued the Corporation for his salary for the balance of his term, and Judge Thompson, holding that the Commissioners had no right to compel the wearing of a uniform, gave judgement for the plaintiff for $500.

The investigation into the charges against Coroner Connery was not continued yesterday as was expected, in consequence of the detention of Judge Daly in another cause. The Coroner's case will be continued this morning, and probably concluded during the day, as it is understood the respondent's counsel do not deem a long defense necessary.

The trial of Dr. Elijah Hunt, for manslaughter, in causing the death of Mrs. Lawson, and her unborn infant, by abortion, was commenced yesterday, and will be continued to-day, in the Court of General Sessions. The evidence is entirely unfit for publication.

Captain Barstow, of the ship Americus, was arrested yesterday on a charge of leaving one of his seamen in a foreign port. He was taken before United States Commissioner Stillwell, and gave bail for his appearance to answer the charge.

At the New-York Eastern Methodist Conference yesterday, some personalities were provoked from Rev. Dr. Bangs and others, by the Slavery question. At the evening session the unfinished business of the morning was not resumed.

The Chinese Squadron.

In commonting, the other day, upon the state of the Chinese question, we allnded, briefly, to the importance of protecting our commerce and giving efficiency to our diplomacy in China, by such a naval force as should be really imposing and available. Our representations on this subject are continually justified by the complaints which come to us with every Eastern mail, of the almost absolute uselessness in the Chinese waters of such men-of-war as we now send to that station—vessels whose deep draught of water prevents them from entering many of the harbors along the coast, and nentralizes their otherwise formidable capacity in the pursuit of the multitudinous pirates from whom we may reasonably expect even more anoyance than from the snrly and stupid officials of the Celestial Government.

From the month of the Pei-ho River to the Chusan Archipelago the coast of China is for the most part very low, rendered difficult of access by extensive shoals, and so beset by quicksands, especially in the neighborhood of the Yang-tse-Kiang and the Yellow Rivers, which command the approach to Pekin, as to be very dangerous to vessels of all kinds, and particularly so to immense war-steamers like the Powhatan, the San Jacinto and the Minnesota. If our naval forces are to act as a guard of honor to our envoy, and to assist him in a polite but resolute assault upon the fortress of the imperial reserve, it certainly would seem to be desirable that they should be able to accompany him in his advance towards the Chinese capital; and we cannot but regret the apparent determination of our Government to ignore the facts of the case, so far as to dispatch only vessels of a quite impracticable size upon a mission so momentous. The only ship which has as yet been distinctly designated for the service, the steam-frigate Minnesota, is of still heavier draught than the San Jacinto, and we are informed by our Correspondent, on board that vessel, in a letter which we published yesterday, that the "only two ports on the coast which they can enter, are Hong Kong and Amoy," neither of them ports of prime importance in the actual condition of Chinese affairs.

As, however, it seems to be still extremely uncertain what our Minister to China will be expected to do, or what policy he is to pursue, it may have been thought meet by the Administration that he should be furnished with such a fleet as would most suitably fit him for doing nothing at all in particular, and for making such a magnificent and "circumlocutory" pother as should save appearances, and keep the national reputation, without committing us to the responsibilities of any decisive achievement. But no such excuse can be offered for a neglect to reinforce our Chinese squadron with steamers perfectly fitted to follow and overtake the pirates of the Southern Coast and the Canton River in their swift-sailing junks. These audacious robbers, aptly termed by the natives the "foam of the sea," fly like the foam from the impotent fury of the deep-water ships, and can only be properly punished and repressed by such vessels as the gun-boats built by the British Government for Baltic service after the opportunity of Baltic service had passed away. These gun-boats are simply dashing little screw-steamers, varying in capacity from 150 to 200 tons, and in length from 90 to 100 feet. They draw but six feet and a half of water, are propelled by high-pressure engines of sixty horse-power and carry the heaviest guns known to the British service. They have made on the average nine or ten knots the hour under steam; and under lug-sail, with their three raking masts, are the most knowing and dangerous looking little craft afloat. They can be "kept well in hand," and consequently will fight under way and almost at full speed. A rapidly-conducted quadrille of these lively little sea-witches, pironetting about any point of attack, would produce the most vivid and unpleasant effects upon the parties subjected to the battery of their charms. Their services in the Chinese waters would never be required at any very great distance from a coaling station, and as auxiliaries to the sea-squadron they would completely answer all the purposes which we can possibly contemplate in maintaining a naval force in those waters. The English are sending out a formidable array of vessels of this kind as indispensable to their own operations. The pacific intentions of our own Government, of course, make it unnecessary for us to keep up any very unusual armament in that region of the globe; but if we are to have any armament at all, it does seem to be worth while that we should make that armament an available one. We can very easily improve on the model of the Baltic steam gun-boat, and as the question of protection to our commerce is one absolutely independent of all diplomatic considerations, we do most earnestly hope that the Administration, which has dealt with the passing emergency of Chinese affairs, as we believe, so wisely in the appointment of Mr. Reed, will go on in like manner to provide adequately and accurately for the permanent necessities of our Chinese establishment in the matter of the Chinese squadron.

The Order of the Snuff-Box.

We wish General Scott, the Corporation Committee, and the divers Generals whom the Commander-in-Chief has mentioned as having had most communication with the New-York regiment during the Mexican War, joy of the task with which they are charged, as General Jackson's executors in the matter of the Gold Snuff-box. The old soldier's bequest was dictated by the best possible feeling, no doubt, but we cannot help thinking that honors of this sort should never be offered unless there is some accurate mode of comparing the merits of the competitors for it. No matter who gets the gold box, the public will never believe that he was really the bravest and most deserving man amongst the volunteers, and unless the distinction means that its owner outshone all his fellows, it means nothing at all, and is, consequently, rather worse than an absurdity.

General Jackson has proposed to do something with his snuff-box, which no order of merit, either civil or military, in any other country has ever undertaken. He proposes to certify to the world, by means of it, that some particular individual in a large regiment possessed more courage than any other of some thousands of comrades. Nobody here, or anywhere else, will accept any box, cross or medal, as proof of any such claim; and the recipient of it may rest assured that, though he may be a very brave soldier, any pretensions to the character of bravery par excellence, which he may feel disposed to base upon it, will not be generally acknowledged. In the days of Homeric warfare, when rival kings and chieftains howled defiance at one another from opposing ranks, and finally decided the question of superior prowess by a duel in presence of both armies, it was comparatively easy to make one's way into the position of the bravest of all the Greeks, or of all the Trojans. Men in those days fought their way up, as a boy does at school, and by dint of skull-cracking and disemboweling, established themselves at the head of their brother warriors. Further down on the rolls of time, we find people asserting their claim to the title of "best lance," or "best sword," by the simple process of roving about, challenging their rivals and knocking them on the head. He before whose lance the best lances had gone down in the genteel tournaments, was, beyond cavil, the best lance of all. In those days war was a series of single combats, in which discipline and organization went for very little, and pluck and strength for a great deal. Individual prowess was the thing most prized and most talked about. It was, consequently, comparatively easy to decide upon individual merits.

In modern times all this is changed. In the armies of to-day that man is the best soldier who most completely repudiates his individuality and merges himself in the mass. Self-abnegation, implicit obedience, temperance and coolness are the qualities which wring victory from fate. When a soldier stands where he is placed, and remains there at all hazards against all odds, or advances, under orders, until stopped by death or a counter order, he has done his duty and is entitled to be considered every whit as brave as Achilles or Hector. We, by no means, mean to underrate the value of zeal, and daring, and enthusiasm, but we must not forget, that to be useful they must run in regulated channels, must never overflow certain bounds, and must gush forth and retire to the sound of the trumpet and the beat of the drum. A modern army is a great machine, in which all the men are wheels. There may be just as good iron in the smallest and least important of them all, as in the largest and most powerful.

The French, who, of all nations, make most use of military honors and rewards, have never yet attempted anything so preposterous as to single out the bravest man in a regiment or a division. They bestow the Cross of the Legion of Honor lavishly upon all who have afforded unusual exhibitions of courage or fortitude; but this prize, eagerly sought as it is, means simply that the wearer, finding himself on a certain day in a certain trying position, displayed great heroism. It means that, finding himself in possession of a good opportunity he made a good use of it, just as some thousands of others, who have earned the same reward in the same manner. It neither says nor insinuates that any other man in the army has not the same raw material in him as any one of the decorés, but it is intended to stimulate them to turn similar chances, whenever they occur, to good account. The English carry their recognition of the equality of bravery in the ranks of the army to a still greater, and in fact to a ridiculous extent. To avoid even the appearance of insinuating that any one man is not just as brave as any other man, had he the same opportunity of showing it, they give the medals to all indiscriminately who take enough part in a campaign to have been within hearing of the guns though they were never actually under fire. The cavalry who arrived in the Crimea during the Spring and Summer of 1854, though they did no fighting, nor even outpost duty, have all got medals, upon the presumption, that if they had been called on they would have charged as fiercely as the Six Hundred at Balaklava, or stood as firmly as the Guards at Inkermann. This is simply a grotesque and mischievous exaggeration of a good principle. In all other European armies the same rule is adopted as that which prevails amongst the French. Distinctions are freely and impartially bestowed, as evidences of faits accomplis, of exploits performed, but certainly not of the existence of qualities or endowments peculiar to the recipients, and not possessed by their fellows. Judging from the terms of General Jackson's bequest one would imagine that a battle between disciplined armies was a "fight in a fair," "every man for himself and God for them all," in which all had an equal chance of shining. General Scott is an old soldier, and has seen a good deal of fighting, and ought to know better than to lend himself to the bestowal of any distinction so very invidious and offensive as this snuff-box is likely to prove. Bravery was far too common a quality amongst the New-York Volunteers to entitle any one man to be publicly and officially dubbed the "bravest of the brave." To talk of any one in the superlative degree stamps his fellows with inferiority, and we object in the strongest manner to any such judgment, where the inferiority is not proved beyond question.

Opening Hell Gate.

Of the many valuable recommendations contained in the late Report of the Commissioners for preserving the Harbor of New-York, there are none more worthy of consideration than those relating to the Hell Gate passage. The attention of the General Government has frequently been called to the necessity of improving this entrance to our harbor, and of making it safe and available to the commerce of the world. The Commissioners show good reason why this improvement should be made immediately; and they earnestly recommend that, if the General Government continue to neglect it, the State of New-York should undertake it; since the commercial interests of the State, as well as a proper regard for the lives and property of its citizens, require that this passage be speedily freed from the perils that now obstruct its navigation.

The only outlet of our harbor to the sea, which is at present available to commerce, is the channel by Sandy Hook. But the depth of water on Sandy Hook bar, which crosses this channel, is only twenty-three and a half feet at low tide; and a ship drawing twenty-three feet cannot pass safely over the bar except at half or high tide and with a smooth sea. With the growth of the commerce of the world, there is a constant tendency to increase the dimensions of ships. The largest ship built, twenty-five years ago, was 1,000 tons burden; and this ship, heavily laden, did not draw more than eighteen or twenty feet of water. Most of the ships now employed in our packet service to Europe, and in the trade to California and China, average from 1,800 to 2,500 tons. These ships, heavily laden, draw from nineteen to twenty-three feet of water, and, on account of the shallow depth on Sandy Hook bar, cannot enter or leave our harbor except at certain stages of the tide. Large men-of-war and mail steamers are now compelled to wait at anchor, as the steam-frigate Niagara was waiting on Monday last, for a favorable opportunity to cross the bar, inward or outward.

Considering these circumstances in connection with the fact, recently discovered by the Coast Survey, that the waters about Sandy Hook are gradually shoaling, and that the Hook itself is steadily crowding its shoulder out into the ship channel—at the rate, for the last twelve years, of one sixteenth of a mile a year—and we have reason to believe that, unless some new and more capacious outlet of our harbor be opened to the sea, New-York must eventually lose its rank as a first-class port. In the demands of Commerce, ships will be built that cannot, at any stage of the tides, cross Sandy Hook bar. Such a ship, the Great Eastern, is now about to be launched near London, and will make its first American harbor in Casco Bay, only because it cannot get into this port.

To open a free passage to the sea by Hell Gate has become a necessity which should be heeded. There is plenty of water in this passage, but it is now full of perils. These perils, consisting of formidable rocks and impetuous currents, are all crowded into an area of about two thousands yards; and yet, it is said, in this small space more disasters are experienced and more risks incurred by the coasting commerce using this approach to the City, than in all the rest of the navigable waters of Long Island Sound, from its Eastern entrance to the Battery—a distance of one hundred and thirty miles. The improvement of the passage is, therefore, quite as necessary for the safety of the passenger boats and coasters which daily throng through it, as for increasing the commercial conveniences of our harbor, making it accessible to the largest ship that can be constructed in any part of the world.

The dangers to which the lives and property daily passing through Hell Gate are liable, is much greater than is generally supposed, even by those who have repeatedly passed the gauntlet in safety. Lieut. Porter, of the Coast Survey, says that during the two months in which he was surveying the channels, fifty vessels went ashore there; and the Commissioners, in their Report, state that of the fifty thousand vessels that annually enter the Hell Gate channels, "one thousand sustain more or less damage in consequence of the remediable difficulties of the navigation." Steamboats, running between this port and Norfork, Bridgeport, New-Haven, Hartford, New-London, Stonington, Fall River and New-Bedford, loaded with passengers, are daily passing through these dangerous channels. If one of these steamboats should be swept upon any of the rocks which imperil this passage—as was the steamer Oregon, in the Winter of 1847-48—and if, instead of hanging by the keel, as the Oregon fortunately did, she should slip off into the deep and impetuous current, it is certain that nearly every life on board would be lost. It requires a cool head and a steady hand to navigate this passage, even with the help of steam; but notwithstanding our pilots are competent and skillful, there is reason to fear that the navigation of Hell Gate may yet be characterized by some terrible calamity.

The improvements required in Hell Gate, and recommended by the Coast Survey and the Commissioners, are the removal of certain rocks and shoals, and the regulation of the currents by constructing stone walls and piers at certain points. The passage should also be well lighted. These improvements accomplished, and the entrance to New-York harbor by Hell Gate will not only be safe, but will be available, with the aid of steam-tugs, to the largest ships at all stages of the tide. The shoalest water in the channel will be nine feet deeper than the water on Sandy Hook bar. Men-of-war, merchantmen and steamships of the largest class can then approach or leave New-York by way of Long Island Sound, which is land-locked and well lighted, passing at any time of day or night, with perfect safety, through a better channel than that which opens to the sea from Baltimore, or Philadelphia, or Liverpool.

How to Treat Spiritualism.—"How shall we treat Spiritualism?" has become a serious and a leading question in a good many parts of the country, but particularly in the neighborhood of Boston, where it has become a disturbing element even in the Divinity School at Cambridge. The dismissal of one of the students for having attempted to beguile one of the Professors has created no small excitement; and the daily papers are gravely discussing the claims of the Spiritualists to sober attention. But the best way to treat Spiritualism, at least for those who believe that the professors of the art are doing more harm than good, is to let it alone; or else let it be submitted to scientific examination. The amount of truth that has thus far been extracted by all the examinations and publications that have been made respecting Spiritualism are as a grain of wheat to a ship-load of chaff. The latest miracle of the science has been the conversion of Marshal Rynders, who, it is reported, has become a disciple of Mrs. Hatch.

The Tehuantepec Transit.

Colonel Sloo has again been foiled in his attempt to regain the direction of his Tehuantepec Company. Our correspondence from Washington advises us that the election which has just taken place in New-Orleans confirms the present Board in its possession of power, and, what is more gratifying and important, that our Government is disposed to take up this question and act upon it with exclusive reference to the interests and necessities of the country—without regard to the claims of the contending Corporations. The subject is grave and imposing enough to be thus considered,—for the route has strong points of superiority over any other by which the Isthmus has been or may be crossed.

1. In the first place it lies within the range of American protection,—connects waters which will eventually become closed seas of American Commerce, and crosses territory which will, possibly, at no distant day belong to the United States. It admits not only of a plank road and a Railroad, but, also, of a Canal,—for which the supply of water, facility of lockage, and other engineering qualifications, are fully equal to those on any other route.

2. It shortens the sea distance between New-York and San Francisco, as compared with Cape Horn, 12,030 miles; as compared with Panama, 1,375 miles.

It shortens the distance from New-Orleans to San Francisco, as compared with Cape Horn, 13,448 miles; as compared with Panama, 2,300 miles. It shortens the distance from Liverpool to Canton, and Jeddo, and from New-York and New-Orleans to the same points, in the same ratio; a consideration of the profoundest moment, now that the gates of the Middle Kingdom, and of the richest Archipelago on the globe are to be forced broad open.

3. Between the ports of the United States and the other transit routes, positions intervene in the occupancy of foreign powers who at the shortest notice may become hostile ones. There will be the Honduras Railroad, protected and commanded by the Belize. Cuba, in the possession of Spain, and Jamaica, in the possession of Great Britain, interpose between us and the Nicaragua and Panama routes. No such military disadvantages affect the transit by the Isthmus of Tehuantepec; no European battery frowns upon our busy marine, as it streams to and from the interoceanic channel.

The cost of the actual work; the wealth of material in exuberant supply along the track; the healthfulness of the country; the attractions to labor, and the ease of transporting laborers thither, are specific advantages of the Tehuantepec route.

It strikes us, therefore, that the point really to be passed upon by the Cabinet at Washington is, not over what grant to private individuals or corporations this Government may extend its protection, but how best this transit route may become ours; what price we shall pay for the district, from sea to sea, or, failing that, for the right of way, under very stringent guarantees of security. It will be sound economy to calculate what price would be too exorbitant for the Territory out and out. But if this be a point too advanced for the steady-going plans of the Administration, then let us have something better to protect and fight for than either the Garay or the Sloo grant. The former was so favorable to the grantee, such an utter surrender of all value without equivalent, that at this late date, when the worth of the Isthmus is so well understood, no degree of coercion will drive Mexico to admit it. The latter, on the contrary, is so unfavorable to the grantees; so hedged about with bonuses, exactions, reservations, Government privileges, forfeitures, limitations, imposts and regulations, as to leave very little chance for profit to American capital. Col. Sloo, or rather his agent, Col. Lee, seized just that moment for obtaining the grant, when anything like liberality to any applicant of his kindred and tongue, must have doomed the Mexican Administration of the day to instant overthrow. The years 1852-53, were years of morbid excitement throughout that Republic against the Garay grantees and against the United States for urging their pretensions. The concession is what might have been anticipated under such conditions. It is absurd; it has proved impracticable; and, even if the actual President consent to waive the first exaction, namely a plank road from the Atlantic to the Pacific waters within three years, when what is tendered him is a mule track, we have no security that the same leniency will recur again and again, when other stipulations equally impossible, turn out to be so. The wiser plan is to make a clean sweep of the board; begin the whole subject ab ovo, and find what it will cost to secure an American transit at Tehuantepec, built by American capital, and protected by the same American arms that looked in one day upon the Halls of the Montezumas. We are glad to perceive indications that the Administration is likely to take this view of the subject.

A Strange Taste Easily Accounted for.—Our Virginia neighbors are still in a sea of troubles about the "Homestead Emigration Society," and strictly insists that none of its members should ever be permitted to improve the soil of the Old Dominion. But, if the low priced lands of Virginia must be sold to the highest bidder, the South, Mr. Pryor's new paper, decidedly objects to their being purchased by Massachusetts speculators. "If we are to have emigration," says that journal:

"Let it not be composed of the constituency of Sumner and Wilson. We prefer, instead, an importation of vigorous muscle, generous blood and brilliant intellect from the Emerald Isle, which has already supplied us with so large and precious a proportion of our population."

Strange as this preference for the sons of the Emerald Isle may appear, in a State which contained so many Know-Nothings, it is very easily accounted for. The sons of the Emerald Isle have always been the stanchest supporters of the "peculiar institution" both at the North and the South, and nothing can be more natural than that the Virginians should prefer them to emigrants from New-England. The South does not regard the project of Eli Thayer as a laughing matter, and is not disposed to treat it any longer as a joke. The recent election in St. Louis has caused the Virginians to open their eyes to the possibility of there being a Free-Soil Government one of these days in Richmond.

"It is easy to indulge in mock heroic sneers at the prospect of Eli's terrible performances," says the South, "but every reflecting and candid person will acknowledge the hazard of admitting a wedge of this colony into our midst—no matter how pliable for the present occasion. Is there nothing admonitory in the tremendous agitation triumph in Missouri, that we should welcome an anti slavery colony to our embrace?"

Still, we do not see any other way for Virginia to prevent an inception of freedom [illegible] and deep-plowing Goths and Vandals [illegible] territory, but to put so high a price upon her exhausted lands that they cannot be bought with any prospect of yielding a profit.

Tampering with Justice.—In our remarks yesterday upon the disclosures in the Court of Sessions concerning the extraordinary efforts made to secure an acquittal for a murderer, Deniny on trial for arson, by tampering with the Jury, we spoke of his counsel as being implicated in these proceedings. We have since been informed that this is a mistake,—that Deniny's counsel had nothing whatever to do with them except to procure from the District Attorney's office a list of the jury panel and give it to his client,—a list which every person accused of crime is entitled to have, and which counsel always procure for their clients in important criminal cases. We are furthermore assured that the affidavits in the case contained no imputation upon the conduct of the counsel for Deniny, and that the Recorder in his remarks on the case expressly said that he had seen nothing in it, which was not authorized by law and required by his duty to his client, and that he could not be held responsible for any of the malpractices of which, according to Deniny's disclosures, other parties had been guilty.

We very cheerfully make this correction in justice to the gentleman referred to, and regret exceedingly that we should have been misled, by the report of the proceedings in Court, into a misapprehension of his relation to this case.

Important to Tea Drinkers.—It will be seen by the intelligence brought by the steamer Edinburg last night, that there is a prospect of the war with China being prolonged to an indefinite period, the Emperor having sent orders to Governor Yeh, to resist the outside barbarians with the utmost vigor. This news, if it should be true, will have the most serious effect upon the China trade, and the prices of Bohea, Souchong and Twankey will go up to anything but fabulous prices. Let those who appreciate favorite beverage this morning do it with a solemn sense of the possibility of being deprived of that enjoyment altogether. The China war may prove a drouth instead of a tempest in the tea pot. John Chinaman has it in his power to lead the whole civilized world by the nose of its teapot, and it is, doubtless, a consciousness of this fact that makes him so obstinate a customer to deal with. Let what will happen we must have our tea, and we can get it nowhere but in the "Flowery Land;" there is no substitute for it, and John Bull can no more deprive himself of Souchong than he can give up his malt. But for this we might have seen of the Chinese war being continued forever; if the Cousin of the Sun does not soon come to terms, we may be very certain that John Bull will.

The Season.—The wet and the cold, the high east winds, and the dismal weather, which have thus far made April so uncomfortable, and caused everybody to exclaim about the backwardness of the season, are not, after all, so very unusual or unseasonable as most of us imagine. Ice and snow are by no means unusual in this month, and showers are proverbial in April. Unfortunately for the public quiet, E. M. has been too ill to issue his bulletins from Brooklyn Heights, and the people have lost all confidence in the weather. But we hope the Philosopher will soon be on his feet again and out among his thermometers and hydrometer in his cotton night shirt. We shall then know whether there is anything unusual in the weather or not, and the public mind will be easy on the subject. In the meanwhile some humble imitator of E. M., down east, has informed the public that forty-four years ago there was a snow-storm in Boston on the 16th of April, and that icicles eight inches long hung from the peach trees. We have had nothing so severe as that yet.

The Dallas-Clarendon Treaty in England.—An English gentleman whose personal character and relations with the Government entitle his opinions to the highest authority, writes to a friend in this City:

"I have no doubt that the amended version of the Treaty will pass smoothly enough. It is a subject not one soul in England cares a two-penny-piece about."

President Fillmore's Mormon Policy.—The Buffalo Commercial Advertiser explains and defends the policy pursued by President Fillmore in regard to the Mormons. As they had gone to Utah and established a separate government for the express purpose of getting beyond the reach of "Gentile intermeddling," it was deemed proper to pursue towards them a policy of conciliation, and with this object in view the Governor and one of the three Judges were selected from the Mormons, the secretary, treasurer and two other Judges being sent thither from the States. Brigham Young was appointed Governor upon the personal indorsement and recommendation of Col. Thomas L. Kane, of Philadelphia, who had visited the same time in the Territory, and certified Young to be a man of great purity of character and the Mormons generally to be quite as moral and upright as the people of the Eastern States. The disclosures of their theory and practice of polygamy, it is claimed, were not made until some time afterwards.

An Indian Republic.

Rev. Thos. S. Williamson, a missionary, writes to the St. Paul Times an interesting account of the new Indian Republic of the Dakotas in Upper Minnesota. He says:

"A year ago less than half a dozen families of them in this neighborhood were living in log cabins, none in anything better, and I think it was the first Winter a Dakota family occupied even so good a shelter, in this neighborhood, as a cabin built of logs laid up horizontally. At this time, besides two framed houses, there are not less than fifteen log cabins of the kind spoken of, in this neighborhood, occupied by Dakota families. Most of these are furnished with stoves, and, in regard to comfort, will compare favorably with the first dwellings erected by the agricultural population of Ohio, Indiana and Minnesota. The glass and sash for most of these dwellings have been furnished from their civilization fund, and the logs for about half of them were hauled by men and teams furnished from the same fund, and they have been assisted in getting the sawed lumber used about them. Almost all the other labor expended on them has been performed by the Dakotas themselves, with some assistance and instruction."

The possibility of establishing Telegraphic communication across the Ocean has been widely discussed, and has been actively canvassed for the last three or four years by the leading practical philosophers of Europe and the United States. A summary of the results ar... that cannot be without public interest at the ...esent time.

In May, 1854, a series of very interesting experiments were made in England by Mr. LATIMER CLARK, on long conductors varying from 100 to 2,000 miles in length, and which give some very valuable data for determining the laws which affect the transmission of practical working currents through extended conductors like the one about to be submerged in the Atlantic. The results of these experiments were of the greatest importance to those engaged in constructing submerged lines, and have demonstrated the fact that the speed of electricity is essentially modified by the conditions of the circuit through which it passes. An accurate account of these valuable experiments may be found at the conclusion of the third volume of Faraday's Experimental Researches in Electricity, with the logical deductions of the learned Professor in reference to their practical bearing, and some useful suggestions for their application.

At a meeting of the Institution of Civil Engineers, at London, Jan. 13, an account of which has since been published in some of the English journals, a paper was read by F. B. WINDOW, in which he reasoned from the data established by Mr. CLARK's experiments that the submerged wire from Ireland to America would require 2½ seconds for each signal to reach its destination, and after it 2½ seconds more must elapse before another could be sent. Thus, one word would require a minute for its transmission, and a message of twenty words, with the usual office signals, would occupy half an hour; at this rate, not more than fifty messages could be sent in the twenty-four hours. This would be a point too low for the commercial success of the line with a single conducting wire like the one in process of construction.

The subject was postponed to the next meeting, which took place Jan. 27, when it was again taken up in its mechanical, engineering and scientific bearings. The first point embraced the questions involved in the construction of the cable, which were soon disposed of by a report from one of the parties engaged in its construction, that the work was progressing at a satisfactory rate, and it would doubtless be delivered within the specified time. The questions for the engineer to solve were not so easily disposed of. These elicited a variety of opinions, and were the subject of a long and deeply interesting discussion. Engineers of much experience in laying submarine cables gave their views on the difficulties to be overcome in carrying out this grand project, and were listened to and received with expressions of the most profound interest. A sample of the cable was exhibited, which was about five-eighths of an inch in diameter and as flexible as an ordinary rope of the same size. Its strength was said to be equal to a breaking strain of three tons, which the contractors considered sufficient for all the casualties to which it may be exposed in its transportation and deposit on the bed of the ocean. Others believed that the grand difficulty to be surmounted lay in its strength and ability to bear the great power to which it would be subject from the movements of the ship; the counter-currents through which it must sink, and at the same time the enormous pressure of seventeen tons per square inch to which it would be exposed at the deepest part of the ocean. Some thought that to meet all these combined forces would require a strength of not less than eight tons breaking strain, and that to obtain this strength it would require the best quality of steel wire for the outer covering of the cable. This necessity was urged by one who had much experience in laying submarine cables, and was considered by him the "mountain of difficulty," although not insurmountable.

The effects of salt water on the gutta-percha covering were considered, and samples were shown which had been submerged for six years, without the slightest indication of decay. Other samples, which had been buried in the earth, were affected very differently, and were almost entirely destroyed in a much shorter time. It was believed that gutta-percha might be said to be completely indestructible in salt water, and was the only substance at present known that could be used with the slightest hope of success for insulating the Ocean wire. The result of experience in laying large cables containing a number of conducting wires during the last two years, had demonstrated their impracticability for very long distances. The great risk attending the process of laying them, and the complicated effects attending the passage of electric currents of high intensity through conductors placed near each other and consequently exposed to the direct effects of induced currents, renders them almost entirely impracticable.

Mr. CLARK has suggested that his experiments on long submerged wires seemed to prove that the ratio of resistance to the passage of electricity through long circuits was "inversely as the square of the distance, and identical with the law of attraction in the magnet." On this point, however, the "doctors disagree."

Another series of experiments has been made during the past year, by Dr. WHITEHOUSE, over the subterranean wires of the "Magnetic Company," which he believes to establish the "law of resistance" as only an arithmetical ratio, instead of "inversely as the square." A report of these interesting experiments may be found at length in the Engineer of Jan. 23, 1857. The following are his conclusions, in his own words:

"There is no uniform rate at which the electric impulse is propagated in submarine conductors, even under like conditions, so far as the state of the conductor is concerned." Also, "that the effect of additional mileage in augmenting the amount of retardation has not been found to bear any strict relation to the 'square of the distance,' but has in the majority of cases been more nearly in the arithmetical ratio."

The circuit through which these results were obtained was formed by the combined subterranean wires of the "Magnetic Company," and are the same that were used in his trials with Mr. BRIGHT, on the night of October 2, 1856, through a continuous length of wire of over 2,000 miles in length. It was claimed in the latter, that they settled the question of working through the "ocean cable," and that they succeeded in transmitting one hundred and seventy signals per minute, a speed which would be "commercially advantageous."

Now although these valuable experiments would seem to [illegible] difficulty on this subject, their [illegible] to make it quite certain that they are already analogous to the single wire which is to be laid in one continuous length across the Atlantic. Mr. CLARK found that by changing his conducting wire from a straight line to a coil, the results were entirely different, although the length of the wire and the strength of the battery remained the same. Again, when he changed the conditions, by placing the coil under water, new results occurred. Also, that the condition of the wire remaining the same, any material change in the quantity, or intensity of the battery, produced again a new series of results.

In the experiments of Dr. WHITEHOUSE, we again find the conditions widely different from the "ocean line." The circuit of 2,000 miles, through which he claims to have transmitted signals so rapidly, was made up of ten wires doubled upon each other, with a separation only of the gutta-percha covering, which would leave the distance between the conducting wires about one-eighth of an inch. The electricity in this case was of high intensity, and was produced by the magneto-electric machine. It must make five successive journeys of 200 miles and back, passing in opposite directions, at a distance of only an eighth of an inch. Here then we find conditions adequate to most important results, which will be entirely removed in the case of the wire for the "ocean line."

In view of all these apparent contradictions, I may be asked, what useful hints here there been derived from all these experiments, to guide the electrician and the engineer to a successful result in the execution of this most difficult work. The first hint which seems to have been taken may be seen in the abandonment of large cables, and the adoption of a single conducting wire, thereby reducing the conditions of the electric circuit to its simplest form, and, consequently, avoiding many of the greatest difficulties in its successful prosecution. When the results of Mr. CLARK's investigations were first announced it cast a cloud over the hopes of the most sanguine believer in the feasibility of underspanning the Atlantic with the electric wire. This has now passed away, and after three years of careful consideration of the data which they furnished, it is gratifying to find that the best electricians are confident of a successful result. I have, within the last few weeks, heard the eminent Professor FARADAY express his belief that "when a well insulated wire was once safely lodged on the bottom of the ocean, between England and America, it would be possible to transmit at least thirty signals per minute, and, perhaps, many more." There is no one whose views are expressed with more caution, or received with deeper interest on everything which relates to electrical science, and there is no one who has contributed so much to determine the laws which are involved in the application of this mysterious agent to the use of man in its application to the telegraph.

The magnitude of this wonderful enterprise, and the bold temerity of its projectors, may be somewhat appreciated when we consider the questions which it is the peculiar province of the engineer to solve. After producing a cable not larger than a man's finger, with a strength adequate to all the incidents of storm, the force of counter-currents, and its own weight combined, it must also be able to preserve its integrity (at the deepest part of the ocean) under the crushing force of seventeen tons per square inch. Reflecting that it requires only nine tons of force to destroy the cohesive strength of cast iron, we may well tremble a little for the effect of nearly twice that power applied to a substance like gutta-percha, which will be the only intervening substance between the water and the conducting wire, and then, should it prove equal to this enormous pressure, and there chance to be a single imperfection in any portion of this long distance, of the size of a pin, the water would inevitably find its way to the conducting wire, establish a ground current, and cut off all possibility of its use. It can hardly be supposed that the project would be abandoned, even should the first attempt fail. It is true that the difficulties which seem to encompass it on every side might well appal the stoutest heart, if viewed in the light of the past alone. But when we look at the developments of science and the discoveries of the present generation, there is abundant ground for hope that should something be found wanting to complete this noble work, it will soon be forth coming from the great "laboratory of nature," where a beneficent Creator has gathered such rich and varied stores for the progress of his creature man.

Meantime, the enterprising Company which is engaged in the project of establishing this communication is so confident of success, that it has already established a Tariff of Charges for messages across the Ocean. We understand that it has been decided to charge one dollar a word for all communications between London and New-York. This is relatively no higher than the charges made for telegraphic communication between distant points in the United States, and is much cheaper than the average rate in England. When this line is completed, the DAILY TIMES will probably contain every morning not less than half a column—or a thousand words—of European intelligence. The Press is likely, therefore, to have added to its current expenses by this magnificent invention the comfortable sum of about a THOUSAND DOLLARS DAILY. But its position will be greatly strengthened by such an immense addition to its utility, and it is not at all improbable that this, added to the many other sources of increased expense in the publication of daily newspapers, will lead to what must come to pass sooner or later—an increase in the price of our leading journals.

Personal.

Dr. VAN CAMP, U. S. Consul at the Navigator Islands, has arrived at Nantucket. The Doctor has had his hands full of troubles. He held in charge a large amount of property, the effects of the condemned ship Rambler, belonging to citizens of Nantucket, and valued at $70,000, shipped it on board a schooner for Valparaiso, and took passage, with his family, on board the U. S. ship Independence, for the United States. After he sailed, his successor in office, Mr. JENKINS arrived at the Islands, and seized the vessel containing the Nantucket property, together with the real and personal effects of the Ex-Consul, and a report went abroad that the Doctor had tried to abscond with the property. On reaching Washington, his representations resulted in the discharge of JENKINS, the reappointment of the Doctor, and the issuing of orders for his return to the Islands on the 5th of May, in a Government vessel, accompanied by a Commissioner who is authorized to investigate the troubles. Claims against the Government for $40,000 are presented by citizens of Nantucket, which remain to be settled.

The Boston Traveller says:—"The Governor's injunction upon the Clergy not to preach political sermons on Fast Day, was just about as effectual as the command issued by Mr. BLUEBEARD to his wives, not to look into the green chamber. We hear from all quarters of political sermons preached on Thursday. Rev. Mr. HASSALL, Unitarian, of Haverhill, took one of his texts from the proclamation—"Abstain from political discussions," &c.—and another from Ezekiel—'So thou, O son of man, I have set thee a watchman unto the house of Israel.' In Essex, Rev. J. M. BACON, of the Orthodox Congregational Church, read the psalm containing the stanza beginning 'False are the men of high degree,' and in his sermon preached against the Kansas outrages, the DRED SCOTT decision, intemperance, licentiousness, and corruption, in high and low places."

The Comet—that dreadful thing which is to destroy us utterly next June—gives occasion for sport. At a recent reception at the Tuileries, the Comet was one of the subjects of conversation. The Empress, acting M. LEVERRIER, the well-known astronomer, among the guests determined to make fun of the unsuspecting savan, and, feigning great alarm at the [illegible] of the guests, consulted him, [illegible] ...rrier, to the great amusement of the guests, entered into a long refutation of this notion, and his embarrassment in endeavoring to avoid accusing Her Majesty—who ill-naturedly would not be persuaded—and his scientific enthusiasm, made the evening pass off much more merrily than is usually the case with Imperial soirées.

Professor Clark, of Amherst College, while performing the experiment of making electrical lights one day last week, was very nearly blinded by the intenseness of the light, since which he has been obliged to confine himself to a dark room. So painfully intense is the impression left upon the retina of his eyes, that though the room is so dark that his friends and attendants cannot see each other in it, to him it seems to be filled with the most dazzling light. Permanent and serious results are feared from this affection, but hopes are entertained from his present seclusion from daylight, that his excited and inflamed organs will shortly recover from the shock and be restored to their normal condition.

The pearl-fishery in Paterson has turned out to be a capital thing. One family, which dug clams from the start, has been placed in comfortable circumstances by the results of the search. The head of that interesting family pocketed some $300 last week, as the reward of his week's work. The foolish man who boiled the big clam that held the giant pearl, (as big as an "alley" marble,) is very much disgusted that he ruined the color of the gem, but has made $25 nevertheless, from somebody who wanted it as a specimen.

An ancient Finn, who sat for his portrait to BAYARD TAYLOR in Lapland, had a curious notion of the discovery of America, and mingled tradition and history together in a queer way. He claimed to know all about America; was not present when it was discovered, "but JENIE LAMPI, who lives in Kittila, was one of the crew of the ship, and he told me how it happened. JENIS LAMPI said they were going to throw the captain overboard, but he persuaded them to give him three days, and on the third day they found it."

TALBOT, the artist, is engaged on a series of landscapes, entitled, "The Sons of Noah, or the Division of the Earth." The tenth chapter of Genesis supplies the subject. Three large pictures show the different portions of the earth allotted to Shem, Ham and Japhet, and their descendants, and the progress of human civilization under the dominion of each family.

The case of Rev. W. C. VAN METER, in the Tazeville County Court in Illinois, has been dismissed at the instance of the prosecuting Attorney. So the reverend gentleman is not to be mulcted in $100 fine for venturing to provide forlorn children from the New-York gutters with responsible country homes Westward.

NEAL DOW was a passenger on board the Europa on her last trip out. On arriving at Halifax, he was visited on board the steamer by a deputation of the Temperance people in the town, and, being carried up to the public hall, made them a speech, and then turned his face once more towards Europe.

Mr. RUSKIN, author of The Stones of Venice, etc., sent a check for one hundred guineas to Mr. SPURGEON, after hearing him preach, as a donation towards the fund for building a new place of worship and as an expression of his admiration of his eloquence.

The Turkish Press.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

I read with much interest your leader in today's paper, about the Turkish press. Your information about that unfortunate country is very correct in every respect, and I can testify it, having resided for some months in Constantinople. The No. 3 Turkish newspaper of Smyrna, the name of which you did not mention, is the Impartial, being printed in the French language, and owing its existence to the Turkish Government, which pays to its editors a liberal amount of piastres, in order to praise the Sultan and his progress towards civilization, having reduced the number of females of his harem to three hundred, instead of seven hundred, which he had before the war with Russia. In Constantinople there is but one paper published in the Turkish language, the Havadish, that is to say, the news of the day. As the Turks do not understand any foreign language, they have but the Havadish, where they may learn the news. Consequently the Turkish Government takes care to publish in the Havadish the triumphs of the Imperial troops during the war with Russia, and the victories they have carried against the "ghiaours," or the infidels. It is not strange, of course, that the Turkish people believe now that Russia has been vanquished by the Sons of Mahomed, and that the European sovereigns claim the friendship of the invincible Sultan of the Ottoman Empire.

The Journal de Constantinople and La Presse d'Orient, both published in French, in Constantinople, are still worse than the Impartial, of Smyrna, in their servility in praising the Turkish Government. The rivalry between their editors is, who of them will say more about that object, but the conqueror is by no means always the editor of the Journal de Constantinople, named VOEUET, a Frenchman by birth, but more fanatical than a Turk in his political and private ideas. Fortunately for the French nation, few of his countrymen are like him.

I remain, Mr. Editor, yours very respectfully,
ONE OF YOUR REGULAR SUBSCRIBERS.

Harbor Incumbrances.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

SIR: In your Friday's number I observe an able article upon the subject of the harbor incumbrances at this port. You therein state that on an average 300 vessels of the largest size are always awaiting their turn for berths.

The crowded state of the wharves on the East River bears testimony to the correctness of that remark; but it is not generally known that the City Government itself, along with its agents, contribute, both by tardy legislation and open violation of law, to occasion the very state of things you deprecate.

One marked instance of this is to be found at Gouverneur slip, in the midst of the shipping interests—one of the most capacious in this City—which is suffered to be incumbered by the useless and dilapidated remains of the Union Ferry Company, long since abandoned by that corporation, after faithfully testing the impracticability of running boats at that place, to a pecuniary advantage.

Now there is a slip which the commercial interests of this metropolis urgently require, and which would produce a revenue of several thousand dollars to the Public Treasury, permitted to remain for months—perhaps years—in its present ruined condition, and subjecting commerce to serious loss and inconvenience!

What reason can be assigned for allowing that slip to be thus encumbered for such a length of time, entirely unavailable for any purpose whatever, and a blight upon the property by which it is surrounded; while, at the same time, it is so greatly needed, in order to mitigate the evil of which you so justly complain, is a mystery to all that behold it.

Respectfully, ARGO.

Opposition to the Quarantine Location.

A meeting was held yesterday by the Quarantine Commissioners, for the purpose of hearing and answering objections to the proposed change of the Quarantine buildings from their present site to a new one below Seguine's Point in Prince's Bay. The Staten Island and oyster interests were largely represented, and their objections warmly and forcibly urged. The discussion, which was very discursive, was conducted on one side by Mr. LOTT, C. CLARK, Judge CROPSEY, Mr. VAN NAME, Mr. BOHM and several others; the Commissioners, especially Mr. HALL and Mr. BOWEN, stated the views by which they had been influenced, the troubles they had had, the constraints under which they labored, and argued the necessity for adopting the site complained of.

On the one side it was contended that the location of the Quarantine in Prince's Bay would inevitably ruin the fortunes of the men engaged in the oyster trade, by putting an end to the business; that as a new line of railroad was about to be built, ruoning in the immediate vicinity of the proposed location, the railroad interest would be injured, and the health of the passengers endangered; that the salubrity of the locality would be destroyed; that if this spot were selected, even temporarily, as the Commissioners stated to be their intention, it would, in all probability, become a fixture, because of the comparative political weakness of the interest anxious for its removal; that, if erected there, the Staten Islanders would not stand it; that a majority of them—15 out of every 20 of them—would actually prefer to have it stay where it is; and that it was the duty, therefore, of the Commissioners, to hesitate before making the final determination, and, if another location could not be obtained this Summer, to change the present anchorage, and keep the buildings where they are now.

On the part of the Commissioners it was agreed that they had attempted to have the Quarantine located at Sandy-Hook, but failed; that they had tried to have it located at Coney Island, but failed; that they had tried to have it built in the Bay, on some shoal-water, but that would take too long a time to accomplish; that then they endeavored to have it placed at West Bank, but with the same lack of success as in the former cases, and that finally they were compelled to locate it in Prince's Bay, which, of all other available points, was in fact the least objectionable and the most convenient. It was further urged by them, that the health of the citizens of New-York, Brooklyn, and Williamsburg, imperatively demanded an immediate change; that the fund of $50,000 at their disposal, necessarily limited them in their selection to a place offering the desired facilities and with the necessary buildings obtainable at that sum; that as it had been said by the medical authorities that the danger of the spread of such diseases as yellow fever arose not from properly-constructed and well-managed hospitals, but from infected vessels at anchor, no ill results need be apprehended by the inhabitants of the shore in the neighborhood of the hospital, nor by the oystermen, inasmuch as the ships would be anchored out in the bay, and the communication with the buildings would be by steamboat, which could do no possible harm to the oyster-beds; that no such thing as a floating Quarantine could be erected, because of the agitations to which the waters of the bay are subject, and which would be enough to make a well man sick if confined to his bed on them, and that finally, the only course open to them was to select this point at Wolf's Head below Seguine's Point, as a temporary location, until Sandy Hook should be procured.

The Storm of Monday.

Our heavy rain-storm of Monday took the shape of an exceedingly mid-Winterish snow-storm along the line of the Erie Railroad. At Goshen, the snow lay a foot and a half deep on Monday night.

The snow-storm extended to Rochester. The wire suspension bridge over the Genesee River, near Carthage, gave way under the weight of the snow on Monday night, and is wrecked beyond repair. The Rochester Democrat says:

The iron towers that stood on the east bank are thrown into the river below, those on the West side appeared to have been crushed down in a heap by the weight of the cables and the strain upon them when the eastern towers fell. Six of the seven anchor-rods on the west side were drawn out, and the seventh broke off short. They were some thirty feet in length, and secured in rock. The suspension bridge was 700 feet in length. Distance between the towers, 380 feet. The principal cables were composed of one wire rope of 133 strands, 5.25 inches in circumference, capable of sustaining a weight of sixty tons.

Great destruction of fruit trees result from this fall of snow. The masses accumulating upon the branches, have broken down hundreds of fine peach, plum, cherry and ornamental trees. In many instances, where the body of the tree has been spared, large branches are broken off.

The telegraph wires and poles have been prostrated in many places.

Chinese Crackers.

Young America is in a state of terrible excitement on account of the late extraordinary rise in one of his staples. The Fourth of July is hastening on, and he has every reason to believe he must stand the enormous advance of nearly 100 per cent. on last year's prices. The supply of fire-crackers now in the market is only from one-quarter to one-half what it was a year ago, and it is not likely the stock will be materially increased before July. Thus, last year, at this time, there were from 150,000 to 175,000 boxes, containing forty packs each; the present estimated quantity on hand is 50,000 or 60,000 boxes.

For several years past the price of Chinese crackers has been nearly uniform, ranging from $1 40 to $1 50 per box; they now command about $3. The reason of the late rise is chiefly owing to the difficulties in China, which has greatly retarded shipments; though it is believed speculators and large dealers have bought up all the stock they could lay their hands on, in anticipation of a still further rise. This article is not exported with any degree of regularity, and hence cargoes frequently arrive unexpectedly, as ship masters often take it on board for ballast. Not long since a vessel arrived at this port from China, with a quantity of crackers taken in as ballast, which the Captain thought would just pay for the trouble, or perhaps return a very small profit. To his surprise, however, he sold it off for a profit of $17,000; had he delayed the sale two weeks longer, he could have realized $25,000.

Some attempts to manufacture fire-crackers in this country have been made, but not with much success. The chief obstacle encountered is the unparalleled low price of labor in China, which will probably continue to give that country a monopoly of the trade, unless we devise a plan of making them by machinery. Very fair crackers have lately been manufactured in Jersey City, but their cost has prevented any competition with the imported article.

Besides crackers, the Celestials send us a few double headers and miniature rockets, and also a material called jostic or punk, used by our lads to set off their fireworks. The total value of the imports from China in the Fourth of July line, has heretofore reached about $650,000 a year.

School Concert at the Tabernacle.

The Board of Education declines to pay for pianos in the schools, although some local boards have been fortunate enough to ring them in under the head of "furniture" and "extras," and although it is confessed that no school-house is completely provided now-a-days without them. School No. 12, (of the Seventh Ward,) of which Mr. JOHN H. FANNING is the Principal, of course has the pianos, but they were not paid for. To raise the wind for the purpose, his pupils gave a concert last night at the Tabernacle, under the lead of Prof. G. W. PETIT. It was a handsome success. The Tabernacle—new, alas! near its last—was crowded almost to suffocation. The singing was all that could be desired, the special favorite of the evening being the "Firemen's Chorus." The pleasant occasion nets them $500 above all expenses.

The New-York Nursery and Child's Hospital.

Of all the gay and happy people who delighted themselves with dressing, and dancing, and all the other little amusements proper to the occasion, at the Crocks Ball, three months ago, how many, we wonder, have ever given a thought to the simple and noble charity in behalf of which so many fair and fashionable ladies then converted themselves into ticket-distributors and floor-managers?

Not very many, we fear, or the subscription and donation lists of the Institution would show a handsomer balance on the right side than is presented in the Third Annual Report, now lying before us.

Yet the object of this charity is of just such a character, that we know not whether most to wonder at its tardy introduction among ourselves, or at the limited number of ladies who have availed themselves of an opportunity so favorable to the exercise of the finest qualities of their sex. To care for the children of the poor, whose daily occupations compel them to neglect the first duties of maternity, in order to provide for the bare existence of themselves and their offspring, is at once to serve the City in a most vital matter, and to gratify the sweetest instincts of womanhood.

Judge, then, of our amazement at reading in the report before us that some ladies who had given their support to this Institution have withdrawn their subscriptions during the past year, under an impression that the funds raised by the Nursery Balls of 1856 and 1857 had rendered their private assistance unnecessary! We certainly should have supposed that all who were able to give themselves the pleasure of aiding so worthy an object would have regarded any addition to its resources simply as an additional stimulus to their interest and their exertions. Our zeal in the prosecution of a project certainly ought not to abate as the prospect of fully accomplishing it brightens upon us, and the Institution of the Nursery surely ought not to go-a-begging for subscriptions until it begins to beg for infants to be nursed. Certainly the fact that some four hundred children, out of the thousands who need its fostering care, have been brought within its fostering fold during the last twelve months, ought not to discourage the devotion of any person seriously interested in the enterprise.

Though we should add to the funds which Mrs DUBOIS has succeeded in procuring from the treasury of the State, the receipts of one, or two, or twenty balls, per annum, the amount of the sad ring poor upon the resources of the Institution would still afford justification for ending it all by the fair and efficient women in the city for a continuance and even for an increase of their contributions to its coffers.

And we trust that in the next annual Report we may prove that not our fair fellow-citizens alone, but those of our citizens who are not fair, have much more fully appreciated the importance, and much more generously assisted in the performance of a work so unobtrusive, so laudable, and so nobly useful.

A Bankrupt Treasury.

The resolution adopted in the Board of Aldermen on Monday night, calling on the City Chamberlain to relate why he has not honored the warrants drawn on him of late, implies that the City is short of funds. And so it is. Whether because money is tight in Wall-street, or that capitalists are more than usually enamored of pet schemes promising fabulous returns, or from whatever other cause, Mr. FLAGG has been unable to raise from revenue bonds proceeds enough to meet the current expenses of the City Government. He now offers to pay seven per cent. interest for any amount of dollars not exceeding five millions, and is afraid of still being troubled with the shorts, even after the offer of that princely rate.

Back Debts for Street-Cleaning.

When the Comptroller prepared his budget of expenses for the present year, the Commissioner of Streets and Lamps furnished him with a small item of arrearages in his Department, amounting to $126,000. After the TAX Bill had been received by the Common Council, and before it was confirmed, Mr. ESLING, in looking over the musty records of his office, discovered another little matter of $11,000 due the honest street sweepers of last year, with which he hurried to the City Fathers, but as the items had not been scrutinized by Mr. FLAGG, and regularly included in his estimates, the members of the Board paid no attention to Mr. ESLING's entreaties. This is what the talk means about the back debts for street-cleaning not having been paid.

Unclaimed Goods from the Custom House.

Uncle Samuel has his godsends. For instance:—A large store of unclaimed goods from the Custom House stored in the United States Warehouse at Atlantic Dock, are to be sold at auction to-day and the proceeds go into his pocket. These sales take place once a year. The aggregate valuation of the goods to be sold to-day, is set down at about $10,000. The goods comprise every imaginable variety of merchandise from a box of clay pipes to expensive wines and crape shawls. Among the lot are two casks of Chicory, one marked "F. M.;" the other with no mark. There are two packages of pamphlets marked "Chas. B. Norton."

☞ The Albany Argus of yesterday learns that Mr. SCHELL, the newly-appointed Collector of New-York, will leave for Europe in the Persia next Saturday, to return before the first of July, the time designated for his entrance upon the duties of his post.

☞ The Palmer Marbles will be removed from the City on Saturday night.

Examination at the Mechanic's Society School.

The regular examination of the Mechanic's Society School was held on Tuesday, under the direction of the Board of Managers.

The exercises were conducted by the teachers, under the lead of Col. L. W. STEVENS, and were generally quite successful performances. The highest class graduated with credit, and its members received various tokens of regard, in the shape of books, presented by their teachers and the Board of Managers.

The school is in a flourishing condition, having a full attendance, especially in the female department.

Board of Councilmen.

The Board of Councilmen met on Wednesday—the President in the Chair. One of the first things done after the reception of the usual number of petitions, was the adoption of a resolution to meet on Thursday and Friday in this week, and every day (excepting Sunday and Saturday) in next week. This is rendered necessary by the press of business and the wish to clear the regular calendar by the 1st of May.

A resolution to increase the salary of the City Inspector to $3,000 per annum was referred.

A long and numerously signed remonstrance against widening Alleu-street was referred.

Several reports of Committees on Assessments were adopted. Also, numerous resolutions to flag sidewalks, excavate certain slips, fill vacant lots, and similar matters.

The Board concurred with the action of the Board of Aldermen, by a vote of 21 to 16, in favor of a resolution passed by that body on Tuesday evening, directing the present Police Commissioners to keep possession of the property of the Commission.

A Committee was appointed to organize the bureaux under the new Coarter.

A communication was received from Corporation Counsel, in reply to the question whether the new Charter deprives members of the Council of their pay after the 1st of May. He replies, that he has not been furnished with a copy of the law, but is of opinion that members will continue to be entitled to their pay after that date.

The Board went into Committee of the Whole.

On resuming, Councilman OTTERSON rose to a point of order. He said forty votes were necessary to enable the President to decide the question of concurrence with the Aldermen as carried. The President decided the objection to be well taken, and reversed his decision. Ultimately the paper was laid on the table.

Adjourned till Thursday.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

CONTINUATION OF THE SCATCHARD EXAMINATION.

The examination of the man Scatchard, alias Cross, arrested a few days since on a charge of conspiring to effect the escape of Huntington the forger from the State Prison, was continued yesterday before Justice CONNOLLY, at the First District Police Court. No material facts with reference to the original charge were elicited, but a telegraphic dispatch from Washington was read, stating that Scatchard had, with a travelling companion named Leavitt, obtained from Hon. B. B. French, of that place, the sum of $100 by means of a forgery and false representations. The case was adjourned until the receipt of further particulars.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY BY BOYS.

An Italian sailor named Francis J. Peorolae, was enticed into an alley-way off Baxter-street, near Park-street, on Tuesday night, by three boys, who then knocked him down and rifled his pockets of some $10 in bills and silver. Policeman SHERLOCK of the Sixth Ward, coming up at the time, saw the robbers running away, and followed in pursuit. He captured one of them, who, on being taken before Justice OSBORNE, at the Lower Police Court, yesterday morning, gave his name as Thomas Burns, and his age as 16 years. He was locked up for examination.

ANOTHER HIGHWAY ROBBERY—ASSAULT WITH A SLUNG-SHOT.

Patrick Garn, residing at No. 20 Leonard-street, was at an early hour last Tuesday morning, knocked down and robbed in Greenwich street, by (as he alleges) one Bernard McCabe, an Irish cabman, who first accosted him, and then struck him with a slung-shot, or some similar instrument, and knocked him to the pavement, after which he robbed him of $20 in Bank bills, and various small articles. Information was given to Lieutenant Dalton of the First Ward Police, who succeeded in capturing McCabe. In his possession was found a valise well filled with various and valuable articles. This property, it is claimed, belongs to a Mr. Vail, doing business at No. 17 South street, from whom it was lately stolen. The prisoner was yesterday morning brought before Justice OSBORNE, by whom he was committed for trial, in default of $2,000 bail.

MARINE MATTERS.

Disaster to the Ship American at New-London.

The ship American, Capt. SEAVEY, of Wiscasset, 80 days from Cork for New-London, struck on Watch Hill Reef, Feb. 10, and was badly injured, but got off, and was towed into New-London by the steamer Commodore. The captain, wife and children had a narrow escape, and were taken off after the ship had filled with water. She was thoroughly repaired, and on the 20th inst. sailed from New-London, but was overtaken the same night by the late heavy N. E. gale, and was obliged to anchor. The gale increasing, she dragged on to a lee shore, where the masts were cut away to save the vessel. The following letter to an officer of the Atlantic Mutual Insurance Company will explain the rest:

NEW-LONDON, Tuesday, April 21, 1857.

CHARLES DENNIS, Esq., Vice-President of the Atlantic Mutual Insurance Co., New-York:

Dear Sir: In compliance with your desire, I procured the aid of a steamer, and at 4 o'clock this morning left here to go to the ship American, and at 10½ o'clock returned with the ship in tow. Everything above the rails has been lost—sails, spars and rigging; and all gone with the exception of the bowsprit and jibboom, with the sails attached. Some damage has been done to the larboard rail, and also to the cabin deck, by the falling spars, but probably no damage has been sustained by the hull.

The American was built at Portland in 1841, rates 2½, is 396 tons burden, and is valued at $9,000.

There were in this port yesterday, 661 vessels—including 31 steamers, 142 ships, 94 barks, 97 brigs, and 297 schooners.

The wrecking schooners Norma and B. Drummond, will go to the wreck of the ship Minerva as soon as possible. The easterly gale of Tuesday, and the bad sea caused by it, made it useless to make the attempt.

Thus far this month there have arrived at this port from Europe 15,528 passengers, as follows: From Liverpool, 7,758; Bremen, 1,320; Hamburg, 683; London, 551; Havre, 2,024; Antwerp, 979; Glasgow 145.

Some half dozen ships are at anchor below.

The City of Madison, (Wis.,) now contains a population of between 10,000 and 12,000, rising up to such dimensions from about 1,200 to 1850.

The Excise Law—Action of the Liquor Dealers.

The Kings County Liquor-Dealers' Association, in compliance with a call, assembled yesterday at Sands Scott's Hotel, on Washington-street, Brooklyn, and reorganized by electing as President—P. J. MYERS.

Secretary—PETER CLEMITSON.

The special business before the meeting was to consider what course should be taken relative to the new Excise law. After much consultation, it was resolved to test the constitutionality of the act, and to this end a Committee of three was appointed to employ counsel to take charge of the matter.

The Commissioners under the act are preparing to enter upon the discharge of their duties at an early day, and there seems to be a disposition on the part of the leading Temperance men to give the law a fair trial, by seeing that it is strictly enforced.

The Liquor dealers say that the section requiring the twenty freeholders to sign the petition of each applicant, will, in fact, drive three-fourths of the present dealers out of the trade.

New-York East Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

This Conference reassembled yesterday, its seventh day, Bishop MORRIS presiding.

A resolution was adopted inquiring what proportion of the $100,000 endowment to the Wesleyan University had been raised, and what deficiency remained.

The Committee to whom was referred the case of [illegible] character, and giving him a transfer to the Genesee Conference, as he had requested. The report was adopted.

The Committee on Colonization reported that the Church continues its unabated confidence in the facility, and the means it has adopted to secure to the negro a home in Liberia.

The following resolutions were then offered:

Whereas, This Conference has declared that Slavery is a moral and social evil, and an impediment to the progress of the Gospel; and whereas, we have resolved to do what we can, consistently with our characters as ministers of Christ, to extirpate it from the world—therefore

Resolved, That a Committee of five be appointed by the President, three from New-York and two from Brooklyn, who shall meet at such time and place as they may appoint, between this and the next session of the Conference, whose duty it shall be to devise the best plan which, in their judgment, is practicable for the emancipation of the slaves in our country—said Committee to report its doings at the next session of the Conference.

They were signed N. BANGS and J. H. PERRY.

Rev. Dr. BANGS said as the subject of Slavery had again come before the Conference, he wished to inquire if there was a man present who would repeat the assertion made the other day that he (Mr. BANGS) was "a doughface and a Pro Slavery man." (He paused a moment for a reply, but none came.) He hoped it never would be reiterated—it was without qualification false.

If the person who used that language toward him (Prof. WHEDDON, who was not present while the Doctor was speaking,) would but say he was mistaken, he would give him his hand to friendship. He acknowledged, as did every one, that Slavery was a great evil and one much to be deprecated. It had been asserted in this Conference that JOHN WESLEY had said "that Slavery was the sum of all villainy." Dr. BANGS denied this most emphatically. Mr. WESLEY never said such a thing. The remark arose from a sentence published by a Quaker sometime before, which had been confounded with Mr. WESLEY'S.

Mr. J. H. PERRY proceeded to speak upon the resolutions at length. The subject was not disposed of before the evening recess took place, but was not resumed at the second session of the day.

Parties to Suits May be Witnesses.

The following is the text of the new law allowing parties to suits to be witnesses on their own behalf:

The people of the State of New-York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1.—Section three hundred and ninety-nine of the Code of Procedure is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

A party to an action or proceeding may be examined as a witness in his own behalf the same as any other witness, but such examination shall not be had, nor shall any other person for whose immediate benefit the same is prosecuted, or defended, be so examined, unless the adverse party, or person in interest, is living, nor when the opposite party shall be the assignee, administrator, executor or legal representative of a deceased person, nor unless ten days' notice of such intended examination of the party or person interested, specifying the points upon which such party or person is intended to be examined shall be given in writing to the adverse party, except that in special proceedings of a summary nature such reasonable notice of such intended examination shall be given as shall be prescribed by the Court or Judge. And when notice of such intended examination shall be given in an action, or proceeding, in which the opposite party shall reside out of the jurisdiction of the court, such party may be examined by commission issued and executed as now provided by law; and whenever a party or person in interest has been examined under the provisions of this section, the other party or person in interest may offer himself as a witness in his own behalf, and shall be so received. When an assignor of a thing in action or contract is examined as a witness on behalf of any person deriving title through or from him, the adverse party may offer himself as a witness to the same matter in his own behalf, and shall be so received, and to any matter that will discharge him from any liability that the testimony of the assignor tends to render him liable for. But such assignor shall not be admitted to be examined in behalf of any person deriving title through or from him, against an assignee, or an executor, or administrator, unless the other party to such contract or thing in action whom the defendant or plaintiff represents is living, and his testimony can be procured for such examination, nor unless at least ten days' notice of such intended examination of the assignor, specifying the points upon which he is intended to be examined, shall be given in writing to the adverse party.

SEC. 2. This act shall take effect immediately.

NEWS BY THE MAILS.

A novel suit is before the Hunterdon County (N. J.) Circuit Court, brought by the Union Bank of Frenchtown against HUDNUT and SNYDER, for maliciously conspiring to draw specie from the said bank by presenting its notes for redemption, with the object of breaking the bank! The damages are laid at $5,000! We shall next hear of some debtor bringing an action for damages against his creditor for presenting a bill for payment at a time when it is inconvenient for the debtor to be troubled with such little remembrances of the obligation he owes to others.

Three hundred and fifty stages running in Philadelphia require the services of five hundred and ninety drivers and attendants, at an average wages of $7 per week, making a total of $214,760. To this add interest on real estate and buildings, valued at $500,000, and we have $30,000; and wear and tear of stock and material, for which 50 cents a day for each stage and horses is a fair estimate. This further deducts $54,720 from the aggregate of profit.

The Hamilton (Canada) Banner statee that a few days ago a man named TANNOCK, who had seduced his niece at Aberfoyle, in the township of Puslinch, was seized by the mob and daubed with tar and feathers. The Massachusetts House of Representatives adhere to its determination to pass the Kansas Aid Resolves, without reference to the people. The House even refused leave to introduced it, by a vote of 102 yeas to 156 nays.

A respectable lady of Rock Island, Ill., stepped into a hardware store in that city, a few days since, and walking up to a young man, presented a pistol at his breast and fired. The ball struck a steel rule, and his life was thus saved. She was arrested. This was the mode adopted for wiping out a slander against her fair fame.

The freight depot at Caledonia, on the Buffalo and Lake Huron Railway, with its contents, and the Custom-House which adjoinedit, were destroyed by fire on Monday. It is said to have been the work of an incendiary. There were several thousand dollars worth of flour and merchandize in the depot, all of which was consumed.

Citizens of Albany have taken legal steps to test the constitutionality and obligation of the bonds issued by the city to the Albany and Northern Railroad Company. The bonds amount to $300,000, at 6 per cent., payable in 1879; and interest has been paid semi-annually since 1856, and another payment falls due in May.

There is a vast amount of business done in limeburning within a circuit of a few miles of Norristown, Penn. Twenty-three draw kilns are in operation. They all face the Schuylkill, and are perpetually on fire, the work, however, being so arranged that the hands rest on the Sabbath.

Near Baton Rouge, a fissure has opened in the earth, to the extent of several hundred yards in length, and about twenty feet in depth. Smoke, impregnated with a sulphurous smell, issues from the fissure in cloude.

Preparations for Summer travel are already commencing at Niagara. The Cataract House opened on the 20th instant, and the International opens on the 5th of May.

The house of Mr. WELLS, two miles from Wauconda, Illinois, was struck by lightning a week ago last Sunday. The electric shock followed the stovepipe into the house, and exploded in the room in which the family were sitting. One of the men was struck and burned in several places, and the sole of [illegible] was burned, and [illegible] was very badly injured, and has not yet recovered from the effects.

WEDNESDAY, April 22—P. M.

There was a dull and easy Money market to-day. The Street demand light, and Discounts, on this of Bank, convenient to be had on prime paper, at 8@8¾ ₰ cent. 60 days to four months, and at 9 ₰ cent. four to six months. The applications at Bank are less pressing than at any time the two or three months past. Since the closing of the Boston steamer's mail, nothing has been done in Exchange. The rates closed yesterday 109¼@¾ on London, 5.20@5.17½ on Paris. The Sub-Treasury received to-day $392,602, disbursed $398,367, and held at the close $14,908,168.

The Bears on the Stock Exchange resumed complete ascendancy over the market this forenoon, and sold nearly all the Railroad list, right and left, for a further decline. After paying 84¼ for Reading yesterday, to meet their deliveries on previous contracts, they renewed their sales ahead to-day at 82¾@82@82¼. They sold Michigan Southern down to 62 per cent., and New-York and Erie to 44¾, both for the reopening of the transfers. At the close there was a steadier feeling in the market generally. The party who have produced, by the boldness of their operations, and their systematic and unscrupulous attacks upon corporate credit, (through the Press as well as on the Street,) the present low range of prices, have undoubtedly collected in large differances on their contracts at command, and have, for the moment, both the nerve and power to resist any tendency which the market may manifest towards a recovery. But this being done solely by renewing and increasing the magnitude of sales for delivery ahead, the ascendancy is, of course, of donhtful continuance; particularly so, as nearly every transfer book in the Street shows that the real public are taking up more Stock than they are putting within the control of these parties. Thus, for a single example, after the four or six months' eavage warfare upon the Cleveland and Toledo Company, the amount of Stock within the control of the Brokers, which stood in January about 21,000 shares, is now reduced to 13,300 shares, of the value, at market rate, of about $438,000, the par of the shares being only $50. The Illinois Central stock on the Street is reduced to-day to 2,700 shares, out of a capital issued of 140,000 shares. The principal fluctuations to-day, starting from the closing of Tuesday afternoon, are:

VOL. VI.....NO. 1746 NEW-YORK, FRIDAY, APRIL 24, 1857. PRICE TWO CENTS.

DINNER OF THE ST. GEORGE'S SOCIETY.

Speech of Lord Napier, the British Minister at Washington.

The 71st anniversary celebration of the St George's Society took place last evening, in Delmonico's, Broadway. The festival possessed unusual interest from the fact that the newly-appointed British Minister, Lord NAPIER, came on invitation from Washington to lend to it the influence of his presence. As might naturally have been expected, an attendance almost unprecedented in point of numbers was the consequence. The demand for tickets is said to have been so great that, several days ago, none could be procured under a premium more than equal to the price originally fixed. The large dining-hall of the establishment was crowded to excess.

At the cross-table was seated the President, Mr. HENRY EYRE, supported on the right by the guest of the evening, Lord NAPIER. On the same side of the presiding officer we observed Mr. AARON NORRIS, President of the St. Andrew's Society; Mr. DEPEYSTER OGDEN, of the St. Nicholas; Dr. BEALE, Mr. RUSHMUT, Mr. YOUNG, Mr. FILLMORE, (of the London Times,) and Mr. BATES, the Treasurer of the St. George's Society.

To the left were Mr. BELL, of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick; Mr. GARRIGUE, of the German Benevolent Society; Judge DAVIES, of the St. David's; Rev. Mr. OGILBY; Mr. JOSEPH FOWLER, acting British Consul at this port; Major-General SANDFORD, and several others.

The room was decorated with the flags of Great Britain, America, France, Scotland and Ireland, which were draped around the walls. Behind the President stood the beautiful painting of Queen VICTORIA, which on several former occasions has been similarly appropriated. Pendant from the top of the frame was a massive gilt crown, supported by ribbons, which were fastened to the sceptre and sword of state that formed part of the ornaments of the entourage. The music was supplied by an admirable Band, and a Glee Club from the Harmonic Society, consisting of Messrs. GEORGE BRISTOW, F. H. NASH, R. M. PERKINS, WASHINGTON M. SMITH and G. W. WOOSTER.

At the close of the repast, Non Nobis Domine was sung by the Glee Club.

Mr. EYRE (who acted as President in place of Mr. CROOK, the Incumbent, who was inevitably absent,) then rose and said:

BROTHERS OF ST. GEORGE: You are, most of you, aware how unexpected to myself is my presence in the chair this evening. And in the absence of your worthy President I must own, though I am very sensible of the honor you have done me, that I could have wished that my lot had fallen into better and more experienced hands. And yet, if you will kindly assist me and bear with my short-comings, I, on my part, will endeavor to do justice to your distinguished honor, and to promote the hilarity of the evening. Gentlemen, since we last had the pleasure of meeting together on this festive day nothing strikingly prominent, as I think, has occurred. Our own dear native island has been blessed by a kind Providence with a large share of commercial prosperity, agricultural plenty, domestic peace and happiness—[cheers]—blessings which I rejoice to say have also been graciously vouchsafed in a more or less degree to the land in which we live. [Cries of "hear, hear."] The treaty of Peace with Russia, thanks to the energy and determination of Her Majesty's Ministers—[loud cheers]—has been carried out both in the spirit and to the letter. The dispute with Persia, by a display of similar energy, has been happily ended, and I trust that the present difficulty with China will likewise soon be brought to an honorable and satisfactory termination, as well as all other minor differences that exist among the nations of the earth. [Hear.] I should also, perhaps, refer to the general election which has lately taken place. [Cheers.] And I must own, gentlemen, that I cannot but congratulate you upon its results. [Loud cheers.] For whatever, gentlemen, may be the differences of opinion in politics that exist among us, we must all, as true-hearted men, set our faces against "factious opposition." [Great cheering.] And though you may not be disposed to agree with me that Lord PALMERSTON is "the right man in the right place," yet I think you must admire his "pluck," and do honor to his English feelings and sentiments. [Loud cheers.]

But, gentlemen, our Society was not formed solely for the purpose of social intercourse or to cherish a love of country, but to devise means for the benefit and welfare of our fellows. And, therefore, it will not be out of place if I call your attention for a few minutes to the charity attached to our Society. [Cheers.] Many of you, perhaps, are not aware that the charitable fund of your Society is mainly dependent for its support upon the number and liberality of the brothers of St. George, assisted by the extraneous aid of an annual appeal in the shape of a concert or a lecture; and that during the most inclement period of last Winter its funds would have been exhausted but for the energy and efforts of your Committee. Should such a state of things exist, brother Englishmen and brothers of St. George? I appeal with confidence to your liberality. Will you not come to the rescue? Will you not rally round your time-honored institution and devise some means by which a little meal in the barrel and a little oil in the cruse may always be found, so that you may continue to enjoy the privilege of dispensing, through the instrumentality of this your Society, to the wants and necessities of your less fortunate fellow-countrymen.

Gentlemen, I thank you again for the honor you have done me and for the patience with which you have listened to me.

The President resumed his seat amid loud and prolonged cheering. In rising to read the first toast he said:

Gentlemen: The first regular toast that I have to propose this evening is

The day and all who honor it—St. George and merry England. [Rapturous applause.] Music—"Hearts of Oak."

In proposing the next toast he said he had intended to speak to the first, but would now pass it. The second toast was one very dear to the heart of every true Englishman; nay, it caused a thrill to run through his very bones and marrow. He would give

The Queen. [Vehement and prolonged cheering.] Music by the band and chorus by the company, standing—"God save the Queen."

who, he said, entered on his arduous duties under circumstances of no ordinary interest and importance, and he (Mr. EYRE) trusted that when he (the President) should be called upon to retire from his high office he might have the satisfaction of feeling within himself that he had done whatever within him lay, not only to promote the best interests of his countrymen, but the best interests of mankind at large. [Loud applause.]

Music—"Hail Columbia."

4. Her Majesty's Ministers and Representatives on this Continent.—[Enthusiastic cheering.]

The President, after proposing the sentiment, said:

GENTLEMEN: Among our distinguished guests here this evening we have a noble personage, the representative of Her Majesty. [Cheers.] And we accordingly welcome him as such. [Cheers.] And not only as Her Majesty's Minister, but individually. [Cheers.] I am sure, gentlemen, that I only echo your sentiments when I say that I trust that as long as he resides among us our festive board will always be graced with his presence. [Lond cheers.]

My lord, (turning to Lord NAPIER,) you have the privilege of bearing a great name—[cheers]—a name not only consecrated in the high ranks of science and familiar to us in the glowing pages of history—[cheers]—but endeared to us by deeds of chivalry and valor, blended with acts of mercy and kindness; whilst the crowning characteristic of your race has been an unswerving sense of duty in the man supported by honesty and manly independence. [Cheers.] And lest I should be thought to be using the words of empty panegyric, I would refer to the work which has just emanated from the press, the Life of Napier, written by his brother. It is the life of that true-hearted Englishman and glorious soldier, Sir CHARLES NAPIER. [Cheers.] May your residence, my lord, at Washington, not only be agreeable to Lady NAPIER and yourself, but may it also afford you opportunities of adding fresh lustre to your great name by cementing closer and closer together those feelings of friendship and goodwill that should always exist between two nations bound together not only by the ties of mutual kindred but of common interest. [Cheers.] My lord, in behalf of your friends, my fellow-countrymen, and the brothers of St. George, and, I may add in behalf of this whole assemblage—[cheers]—I most cordially bid you welcome, and your mission God speed. [Great cheering.]

The Chairman concluded by introducing, amid a perfect tempest or applause, the British Minister, Lord NAPIER.

When silence had been restored the Right Honorable gentleman addressed the assemblage in words which as well as they could be heard in the absurdly remote and injudicious position assigned to the representatives of the Press, were as follows:

GENTLEMEN: I beg to offer you my very sincere and cordial thanks for the honor which you have done me in associating my name with the toast, and with the health of "Her Majesty's Ministers." Her Majesty's Ministers will be highly gratified when they learn that their names and their offices are held in such esteem, regard and memory by their fellow-countrymen residing in the United States. I, myself, gentlemen, in my own personal capacity, am sensible that I am undeserving of the acclamations which you have designed to bestow upon my name; but I see in the manner in which you have received it, a warm revulsion of these feelings of sympathy and regard which may be suspended or obscured for o time, and by accident between America and England, but which are ever deeply founded on the affections and the interests of the two countries. [Loud cheers.]

Gentlemen: The office which I have the happiness to fill, and in which you have done me the honor to wish me well, is one which has been familiar to my hopes and wishes from a very early period of my life and services.

Gentlemen: I may still maintain that there is not a more grateful, or a more glorious, and a more useful employment than this employment, which I share with my venerable friend, the United States Minister in London—the employment of holding aloft the ensigns of peace and friendship between the two great branches of the English race. [Loud cheers.]

Gentlemen: I feel that I have entered upon that employment here at a most auspicious period. I can assure you that I have met, upon the part of the President of the United States, upon the part of General CASS, upon the part of all the ministers and functionaries of the United States with whom I have been brought into contact, every manifestation of that cordial and friendly disposition which animates the Government and the community of Great Britain. [Cheers.]

There are no questions involving any degree of anxiety or apprehension pending between the two countries. [Cheers.] And I am sometimes disposed to hope that the time may soon come when there will scarcely be any subjects of official correspondence at all. [Cheers.] If I may not flatter myself with this agreeable prospect of official vacuity—[laughter]—if I must look forward to my fair and natural share of discussions and debates, surely, gentlemen, we have in the experience of the past the best grounds for believing that there can never be a question so difficult or so complicated that it may not meet with a prompt, with a peaceful, and with an honorable solution. [Loud cheers.]

There are many questions at once envenomed and alarming, which have been settled in a pacific manner in our recent negotiations. Our Eastern boundaries have been defined by one treaty. Our Western boundaries have been settled by another. The disputed Fisheries which at one time threatened to embroil us, have been converted by the salutary engagements of reciprocity, into a source of mutual wealth. Finally, gentlemen, the question of the privilege of neutral trade in time of war—that question which, for so long, was the constant cause of complaints and recriminations, has now obtained by the spontaneous declarations of Her Majesty's ministers during the late hostilities, that liberal interpretation so long desired by the United States, and which no Government of England hereafter will ever be inclined to revoke or to repeal. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen: I am justified, then, in saying that by an easy exercise of frankness, of mutual forbearance and indulgence, no question can arise between our countries which will not admit of an easy and an amicable settlement. But, gentlemen, I desire more than cordiality—I desire coöperation. [Cheers.]

Now, gentlemen, I do not wish to alarm the citizens of the United States who are here present by raising before their averted eyes the phantom of "entangling alliances." [Laughter and cheers.] Entangling alliances, gentlemen, are a kind of political spectre, which seems to have descended with undiminished terrors from the period of the Revolution to the present day. [Cheers and laughter.]

There may be mutual coöperation where there are no written engagements; and, gentlemen, where the heart is wanting, there may be written engagements without mutual coöperation. [Cheers.] All then, gentlemen, that I wish to say is, that our respective Governments should perpetually make an early and sincere declaration and avowal to each other of their views and intentions with respect to all subjects which involve the common interests of the two countries—[Cheers.]—whereby they will have the benefit of mutual good offices and mutual counsel, and whereby they will be able to avoid those one-sided resolutions and those startling announcements which are apt to disturb the confidence of commerce and calculated to excite the sensibilities and jealousies of too high-spirited nations. [Cheers.] Gentlemen, the only entangling alliance which I shall venture to recommend to your adoption is the submarine cable between this country and England. [Great laughter and cheering.]

My friend, the honorable Chairman, has been so kind as to allude in terms of glowing eulogy and encomium to the services which members of my family have been enabled, in former times and generations, to offer to the sovereign and their country either in the departments of science or in those of war. The sincerity, gentlemen, in which that encomium was pronounced, and the manner in which those observations were received, are certainly exceedingly gratifying to my own pride. And all this is certainly an additional incentive to me to endeavor to render myself not unworthy of those services which have been performed by members of my family upon previous occasions. [Cheers.]

I cannot flatter myself that I possess any peculiar fitness or any local experience which could enable me to perform the duties of Her Majesty's Minister in a distinguished manner. But, gentlemen, this I can assure you, that I undertake those duties with the highest satisfaction and with the happiest anticipations. [Cheers.] Gentlemen, it was some time ago observed in England, and it was repeated in some quarters in America, that the members of the regular diplomatic profession of Great Britain were not qualified by their previous education and experience to contend with the stubborn and masculine elements of American politics. [Cheers.]

It was supposed, gentlemen, that we were so inured in the petty arts and in the dark practices of "cabinet intrigue"—that we were so accustomed to humble ourselves in the twilight of military courts that we were not qualified nor disposed to meet a free people in the light of day. [Loud cheers.] Gentlemen: did you observe any symptoms of this intellectual decrepitude in Sir RICHARD PAKENHAM, or in Sir HENRY BULWER. I have not the honor of having ever served with those distinguished personages, but, in honor to the profession to which I belong, I am justified in alleging that in my friend and my former chief, Sir H. SEYMOUR, I never observed any want of vigor or capacity. And, gentlemen, I never observed any want of vigor and independence in my later master, Viscount STRATFORD DE REDCLIFFE, who has passed thirty years of his indefatigable life in contending against the ambition of arbitrary power in one country and in mitigating its abuses in another.

Gentlemen, I do not wish to say anything unduly and ungratefully depreciatory of any country or of any Government. I have had some experience of despotic Governments. I have lived in Naples, in Turkey and in Russia. Gentlemen, there are elements of happiness in them all. Fortunately, I say, there are elements of kindness, of culture and of happiness which no political system whatever can exclude from the face of nature and from the hearts of men. [Loud cheers.] But, gentlemen, neither the retrospective glories of the Italian scene, nor the ancient repose and the picturesque associations of oriental life, nor the splendid enchantments of social life which have arisen in their most agreeable form upon the margin of the Neva, can ever make an Englishman undervalue or forget those principles of freedom which have been cherished by our common fathers at home, and which by them were sown broadcast upon the soil of the great American continent. [Cheers.]

Gentlemen, I have since my arrival sometimes observed an impression in the United States that the development of this country is regarded with jealousy by England. Gentlemen, this is an erroneous opinion. [Cheers.] You will hear me out in the assertion that the last vestiges of former prejudices founded on the animosities of two unhappy wars are being very rapidly extinguished. The peaceful and legitimate expansion of the United States forms a matter of satisfaction and pride of every reasonable Englishman. That expansion forms the best resort and relief for our superabundant population; it forms the best market for our increasing industry; it is the triumph of our labor and our arts, of our language, our religion and our blood. [Loud cheering.] No thoughtful Englishman can contemplate this unparalled spectacle of future predominance without emotions of thankfulness and praise.

No thoughtful foreigner can regard it without a sigh, because Providence has not reserved the future empire of the world for his own tongue and his own race. [Cheers.] Gentlemen: these sentiments of sympathy and good-will to which I give a feeble utterance, are, believe me, not rare or partial in our country, nor do I derive them from obscure authority. [Hear, hear.]

Gentlemen, I have gathered these sentiments in the benevolent pages of a Carlisle, in the wise conclusions of an Aberdeen, and in the eloquent declarations of an Elgin. Gentlemen, I have heard these sentiments declared and enforced from the bench of the Government, and I have heard them echoed back from the benches of the opposition. Gentlemen, these sentiments have been inculcated upon me with sincere and careful emphasis by the Earl of CLARENDON, and by that noble Viscount who is first in the councils and in the hearts of the British people. [Immense Applause.]

Finally, gentlemen, I have received these sentiments as a fruitful trust from the hands of my sovereign, and I will not lay up this profitable talent in a diplomatic napkin.

(Vehement and continued cheering amid which the noble Lord sat down.)

The next toast in order was "Our Sister Societies."

Mr. ADAM NORRIE responded for the St. Andrew's Society, and proposed as a sentiment, "The Crosses St. George and St. Andrew. May they ever mark the faith, but never the love, of our children."

For the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, Mr. RICHARD BELL responded, in a vein of peculiar humor. He gave as a toast, "The four-leaved British Shamrock, Englaud, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, engrafted upou one stem." Drank with loud cheers.

Hon. Judge DAVIES, of the Supreme Court, responded for the St. David's Society. His sentiment was, "A cordial welcome and complete success to the mission of the distinguished Minister of the British Government."

Lord NAPIER briefly returned thanks, when Mr. GARRIGUE responded for the German Society. He praised England highly for her business faculties. He had occasion to apply to the British Government for assistance in some business affairs, and he volunteered as a sentiment, "The noble qualities of the Englishman, always regulated by his business-like habits."

Mr. DE PEYSTER OGDEN was the next speaker. He replied for the St. Nicholas Society, in a graphic and lively manner.

Mr. WM. M. EVARTS responded eloquently for the New-England Society. A tribute which he paid to Lord NAPIER was, however, somewhat equivocal. He said that, "We Yankees being a very calculating people, told it as a special compliment that the British sovereign has sent us a representative whose name and fame are inseparably connected with the noble science of logarithms." He would trust that there was no danger of ever confounding logarithms with loggerheads. For a sentiment, he gave "England,—Old England or New England,—always England in its love of liberty and its allegiance to law." Drank with enthusiasm.

The sixth regular toast was "The Army and Navy of Great Britain and the United States. May they never meet but as friends."

Col. DAWKINS, of the Coldstream Guards responded for the English Army. Major General SANDFORD replied for the United States Army.

The last toast was "Woman," to which the band responded in some appropriate music.

ARRIVAL OF THE AMERICA AT HALIFAX

SACKVILLE, Thursday, April 23—Midnight.

The severe snow-storm with which we have been visited prostrated the telegraphic wires between Truro and Halifax, and communication with the latter place has been entirely suspended. This evening, however, we received the bare announcement that the steamship America has just arrived at Halifax, but, although, several hours have been spent in endeavoring to get over a few words of her news, we have not been able to accomplish it. There is now no current whatever on the lines, and as a raw storm prevails the prospect of getting anything to-night is entirely hopeless.

The Disputed Mayoralty of Albany.

ALBANY, Thursday, April 23.

The question of the disputed Mayoralty between ELI PERRY, American, and Dr. QUACKENBUSH, Democrat, was set down for trial to-day. Mr. PERRY attended, but Dr. QUACKENBUSH did not appear in Court, and an application was made for judgment in Mr. PERRY's favor, but it was refused, on the ground that though the parties were bound in honor by private contract to come to trial to-day, no official stipulation was before the Court. Mayor PERRY expressed a determination to take his seat as President of the Common Council at its next meeting. As the Council is largely Democratic, some trouble is anticipated.

THE TARGET PARADE.

The Regular and the Irregular Forces—The Review in the Park—Muskets, Music and Banners.

When New-York awoke yesterday morning, its first thought was to leap out of bed, and look at the weather. Was it favorable for the Great Parade? With a lively reminiscence of last Monday, and the fate of the suspension bridge over the Genesee, broken down with the weight of snow, fresh in its recollection, the question was a momentous one. But a single glance at the azure vault dispelled all evil forebodings. It was fair. There would be no further postponement. The parade would come off.

For it had been so much talked about, so much commented on in the newspapers, for several months past, and Mayor WOOD and the Sachems of Tammany, political capital, Democratic wire-pulling, and all the ramifications and twistifications of party, had had, according to popular opinion, so much to do with it, that New-York, male and female, (the ladies of course only for the music and the holiday,) wondered what was going to happen, and visions of from 12,000 to 30,000 men, indefinitely stated, parading the streets in uniform, with muskets either bought and paid for, or loaned by GEORGE LAW, floated before their dazzled imaginations. It was generally supposed that it would be six or seven hours passing through any street, Broadway, for instance, and so nobody was surprised when the companies were notified to assemble and fall into order at Fourteenth-street, as early as 9½ o'clock A. M., and that the march was to commence at 10½ o'clock precisely.

At 9½ o'clock there were but few signs of a parade. An hour later several companies had arrived. The First Division, Major-General WILLIAM WILSON, was formed on the north side of Fourteenth street; the Second Division, Major General CREIGHTON, on the south side. All the other regiments were formed according to the order of their Wards. The visiting companies, among whom were the Scottish American Light Guard, and the Arcade Guard, both from Sing Sing, the Independent Guard from Hastings, the Isaac Edge, Jr., Guard from Jersey City, and the Forty Acres Guard, and Union Ferry Guard, from Brooklyn, were formed into a division on Washington Parade Ground. The latter company made a very good appearance. A neat model of an East River ferry-boat was borne in advance of them, and attracted much attention.

It was past 12 o'clock before the procession started. First went the Commander-in-Chief, HENRY WILSON, the originator of the whole parade. He was attended by his Aids and Staff. Among the latter were WM. H. DIARROW, the Adjutant-General; SAMUEL C. THOMPSON, Inspector-General; LLOYD ASPINWALL, Commissary-General; B. F. CHAMBERLIN, Engineer-in-Chief; J. MANSFIELD DAVIE, Quartermaster-General; GEORGE P. ANDROUS, Judge Advocate General; CHARLES W. DARLING, Paymaster, and H. E. DAVIS, Jr., Military Secretary. Next came the visiting companies in order, and then the New-York companies—the First Division, Major-General WILLIAM WILSON, his Aids and Staff, and nine regiments of that Division, the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Eighth, Ninth, and Eleventh. These regiments included the First Ward Musketeers, the Fulton Guard, the Protection Volunteers, the Taylor Guard, the Tarrant Guard, the Washington Grenadiers, the Donovan Musketeers, the Continental Blues, the Frontier Guard, the Frontier Musketeers, the Brougham Light Guard, the Empire City Guard, the Roche Guard, the Harrison Guard, the Henry Lux Guard, the Harrington Guard, the Red Rover Guard, the Atlantic Guard, and the Fernando Wood Guard.

In the Second Division, Major-General CREIGHTON, were ten regiments, the Thirteenth to the Twenty-Second. Among the staff we noticed S. A. SUYDAM, as Judge-Advocate, and Ex-Councilman WILD—not looking very reverent—as Chaplain. The Ex-Councilman's horse was somewhat restive, bringing his rider rather prominently into notice. In this Division were, among others, the Suffolk Light Guard, the Mulligan Guard, the Stephen Hughes Guard, the Social Guard, the Bradhury Guard, the Fifteenth Ward Independent Guard, the Carroll Guard, the Brennan Guard, the United Guard, the Seventeenth Ward Democratic Guard, the Thomas Davis Guard, the Friendly Guard, the Citizen Guard, the Atlantic Blues, the Eagan Guard, the Mazeppa Guard, the Keanedy Guard, the Cochrane Guard, the Tierney Guard, the Taylor Guard, the United Musketeers, the Murray Guard, the Iodex Guard, the Empire Guard, and the Coghlan Guard. In the two Divisions there were no less than twenty-four bands. Musicians, officers and men, all included, there were twenty-five or twenty-seven hundred in the parade. Of muskets there were not more than thirteen hundred. The whole procession was considerably less than an hour passing any one point, and disappointment was generally felt that it had fallen so far short of the expectations of its originators.

What there was of it, however, was very good. The companies, it is true, might have marched better, but of course they did not assume to compete with regiments regularly drilled. It was a very creditable display, indeed, and the circumstance most to be regretted about it was that the companies were not more numerous. The streets were well lined with spectators during its progress, and as the flags were streaming from all the hotels on Broadway, that thoroughfare presented a very gay appearance, the varied, and occasionally brilliant uniforms of the companies eliciting much attention and applause.

The front of the City Hall, where the line was to be reviewed by the Mayor and Common Council, was thronged at an early hour. It was past one o'clock when the procession, having passed through Chambers-street, entered the East gate of the Park, and marched before the Chief Magistrate of the City, who was regarded in the light of a sort of step-father to every full-blown or budding military man in the parade. That there might be no mistake, among so large a crowd, as to which was the Mayor, a Policeman waved over his Honor's head a flag of immaculate white silk, emblematic of purity, with the word "Mayor" inscribed thereon, surmounted by a semi-circle of gold stars. After the review was ended, the procession passed out of the Park into Broadway, thence to Park-row, and down Beekman-street to William, thence up Chatham-street to East Broadway, thence to Grand-street and the Bowery, and so to Fourteenth-street, where the companies were dismissed.

But there was another parade yet to come. At the first organization of the affair some months ago, it was suspected by a few Companies of the City that it was intended to have a political bearing, and that Mayor WOOD was to be glorified thereby. Consequently there were some bolters who resolved to get up an independent parade on their own account. Several attempts were made from time to time to unite them with the regular body, but without success, and yesterday the Independent Companies, under the command of Grand Marshal THOMAS BENNETT, formed into line in East Broadway, and marched down Broadway and around Park-row, up Chatham-street and the Bowery to Fourteenth-street, where they dismissed. They comprised the Frontier Guards, the Madison Light Guards, the Hoffaire Guards, the Dupignac Musketeers, and three companies of the Peterson Light Guards. They had four Bands, including one of DONWORTH's. It was generally remarked that they marched better, and presented a more soldierly appearance than any portion of the "regular" parade. Mayor WOOD did not wait to review these companies, who were generally designated as the Anti-WOOD party.

Such was the parade of yesterday. It was not all that was expected of it, after the loud and long flourish of trumpets that had heralded it for many weeks. If it had come off last Monday, as intended, it would doubtless have been much better. As it was, it gave a large number of sight-seers considerable enjoyment, and therefore cannot be classed as a failure.

But a few words about this volunteer citizen soldiery—these target companies as they are called—which are entirely independent and distinct from the New-York State militia, which is a force existing by law. Those who made Union-square, Washington Parade ground and Broadway noisy yesterday, with sounds of martial music, were made up of companies of firemen, and of another large force with which our residents are familiar, namely, the workmen of various factories, founderies, ship-yards, in companies of Guards, for the most part taking the names severally of the proprietors of the establishments at which they are employed. This class, as well as the companies of firemen who display themselves as soldiers, equip themselves, engage tuition in military exercises, hire their drill room, and, in a word, provide everything needful for their organization, at their own cost. They find their remuneration for the outlay in the enjoyment of a day's target-shooting, which carries with it an excursion into the country, and a "good time" generally.

We believe that this precise description of soldiers is peculiar to New-York. No other city of the Union has a similar force in sufficient numbers to invite description. In Europe there are organizations which in some respects resemble this. Berlin has its Burgher Garde, in which is enrolled the whole number of burghers—perhaps twenty-five thousand. Every September some five or six thousands of this force enjoy encampment, of from two days to two weeks in length, on the banks of the Spree, when the good burghers of Prussia's capital turn out generally, and make a gala-day among their soldier brethren. But this is a municipal force, and is under direction of the burgomaster—or, as we should say, the mayor—of the city. It will be understood, of course, that this force has no connection with the Landwehr, or militia, of Prussia, which embodies the entire male population of the kingdom, under the age of forty-five. For this force, when called into actual service, four hundred thousand stand of arms repose in the Zenghaus, or Arsenal, at Berlin.

The plain of Waterloo annually witnesses a review and encampment of the citizen military of Belgium—the Garde Nationale—under the direction of the Commandant-General. This force elects its own officers, and is independent of the State. It sprang up in 1830, when Belgium won its freedom. The Garde Nationale of Paris has ceased to exist. It expired of the coup d'etat of the Second of December, 1851, after which the citizens were disarmed. It had its day in the revolutions of 1830 and 1848, was born of the Revolution of 1789, and died of the empire of 1852, after an existence under Bourbon kings of two stripes, the consulate and empire of Napoleon, divers Directories and Republics of several hues from Mirabeau to Marrast. Austria had once its National Guard, the Burger-militz, which was a force made up of the citizens of the various cities of the empire. The peasants, Bauer, were never allowed to bear arms. This latter class has taken, since 1848, the name of Economes, given to it by some admirer of Greek and liberty, and repudiates the term boor, or Bauer. In the good time of 1848, the day of liberté, solidarité and fraternité, the Burger-militz took the name of the Garde Nationale. The Emperor, in 1849, as soon as his troubles were over, repaid this assumption by extinguishing the force.

In Norway has its citizen force, Stortheing, composed of burghers of the various towns, and of peasants as well, who enjoy their annual reviews. Holland has also a volunteer militia—a burgher force, and Holstein has one also. The Free Cities, Lubeck, Hamburg, Bremen and Frankfort, have a burgher militia. Every citizen is compelled to bear arms and to provide and keep uniform, and even ammunition.

This year is the first time in which the target and fire companies have undertaken to appear under brigade and division organization. They have elected Major-Generals, who have appointed full Staffs, and issue their general orders in regular military style and with all the "pomp and circumstance" of war. Next year the admirers of the new organization say they shall have twenty thousand troops "in the field"—if such a term can be applied to the peaceful streets of this money-making metropolis. We wait to see whether, in succeeding years, the new organization will come to be a power in the State.

THE POLICE COMMISSION.

Motion to Render Perpetual the Injunction Against the Police Commissioners—Power of the Mayor to Bring the Suit.

Before Hon. Justice DAVIES

Fernando Wood vs. James W. Nye, et al.—At 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the argument in this case was taken up pursuant to the modification granted late yesterday afternoon. His Honor the Mayor was present, together with several of the Police Commissioners, and a number of spectators. After some discussion as to upon whom devolved the affirmative, Judge DAVIES remarked that as this was a case of great importance he thought that perhaps it would be best to have it argued first at the General Term.

Judge Edmonds—We are ready to submit to any order your Honor may make.

Mr. Evarts stated that he would consent to this arrangement if the temporary injunction against the Commissioners were removed, but otherwise he could not properly do so; the deposing of the new Commissioners from office did not necessarily reinstate the previous power, and much confusion would therefore ensue.

Judge Edmonds said that he had no objection as to the mode or manner in which the cause was decided. Notwithstanding the change of time from Saturday to to-day, they were ready to go on; but he could not consent to withdraw the injunction, because it would deprive the City of a legal police, and subject it to all the confusion attending such a state of affairs. It was a well-established law, that a person in office, until discharged or others were appointed in his place, continued to possess his power. The Mayor had the power over the Police Department de facto. He was ready to have the cause laid over to some other day, or refer it to the General Term, but not to withdraw the injunction.

His Honor remarked that he would sit for a couple of hours this evening, but he must then adjourn the case until Saturday.

Mr. Field inquired of His Honor if this was not the most important case that could be tried.

His Honor stated that he had the Circuit to attend to, which would occupy him until Saturday.

Finally it was decided to proceed, and Mr. Edmonds read the complaint, a very full abstract of which was published in yesterday's TIMES.

Mr. Evarts read an affidavit of Simeon Draper testifying to the meeting of the new board and mentioning that he was chosen President, and stating the various officers elected.

Mr. Edmonds stated that the question was distinctly, and merely, a question of the constitutionality of the act. In the first place, what was due to the public good for the Mayor to do under the very extraordinary circumstances surrounding him? He saw the dangers of pursuing any course; confusion on the one hand, the involving the whole peace and public good of the City on the other.

If he consulted his own case, he would have taken no action whatever. For the public good, however, he saw no alternative but to arrest the impending conflict in its outset. If His Honor decided that the law is constitutional, &c., and interposes no injunction, and the law is finally decided to be unconstitutional, the evil resulting would be almost incalculable. This would be saved in the other case, by the Mayor's ability to rule de facto.

He admitted that he was asking his Honor to decide a very delicate matter; to step in, a single judge, between the Legislature and the people, but it was not the first time that the courts had done the same thing, and in this connection he called attention to the following authorities: 1 Kent, 453; 4 Hill, 141; 3 Selden, 97, 99, 109, 119; 1 Story, chapt. 4; 3 Kernon, 388.

Mr. Field—Did you ever hear of any direct appeal to the Court to pronounce a law unconstitutional?

Mr. O'Conor—This is not such a case.

Mr. Field—Yes, it is.

Mr. O'Conor—No, it is not.

His Honor—(rapping)—Gentlemen must speak one at a time, and not interrupt each other.

Mr. O'Conor—I only came to the rescue of my friend. I will not interrupt.

Mr. Edmonds continued: He referred to Sec. 2, Art. 10, of the Constitution, which, after providing for the appointment of City officers, provided for County, Town, or District officers, and this was one of the provisions which he claimed was violated by the bill in question. Nothing was more desired by the framers of the Constitution than the decentralization of the power of the State, and this was a point important to be viewed. By the Constitution of 1830 the power was much centralized. The Governor had the command, almost entirely, of appointing even the sub-officers.

The progress of dispersion of power advanced step by step among the people—the multiplication of the election districts, the change from the appointment of our judiciary, &c. If he was right in this supposition as to the intention of the framers of the Constitution, then the law in question must be viewed but as an invasion. Did the law come from inability on the part of the people of this Metropolitan Police district to choose their own municipal officers?

So far as the police of this City and county were concerned, up to 1847 it was an entirely local matter, confined to this City and county. The Police Department was in existence, and it was a question whether this new law establishes any new office at all; whether it was an office created by this law. The Commissioners of Police, by the new law, have different powers from those given to the old Board of Commissioners by the various laws from 1629 to 1846. In this bill there was no repeal or repeals of any law; it only, by a general clause, repealed so much of any other laws as might conflict with this.

He considered that the act took from the City the control of its own property—one of the clauses of the bill, in fact, dedicated public property to private uses. It was true that they attempted to get around this by inserting a clause saying that the property taken by the Commissioners still vested in the City; but it also said that it was for the use of the Metropolitan Police district.

Mr. Wm. M. Evarts then opened for the defence, claiming that the injunction ought to be dissolved.

He stated that the complaint was filed by Mr. Wood against five gentlemen, to have the act in question declared unconstitutional, and these gentlemen restrained by injunction. He appears simply as Fernando Wood, and stated that he acted in accordance with the approbation of a large majority of the Board of Police Commissioners, but he cannot bring in a part of a Corporation with him. He came in the simple majesty of a man, to have a law declared unconstitutional, and its proceedings stayed. If this had ever been done it had escaped his ability to discover it. If Mr. Wood could maintain his action every citizen could file just such a bill, and the affair could never be res adjudicata until all the tax

PARIS GOSSIP.

What is the Use of Landlords?—New Suggestions for Marriage—Alarming Scarcity of Blondes in Paris—Reform in the Fashions—The Comet—Table-Turning—New Plays.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

PARIS, Thursday, March, 19, 1857.

Recently a pamphlet gained great notoriety in Paris, entitled Pourquoi des Propriétaires? ("What is the Use of Landlords?") The book proposed nothing more nor less than that the Government sponge should be wiped over this vampire class of human beings, that they should be expropriated or suppressed, and the Government put in their place. Instead of expropriating the City in detail, as the Government is now doing, for the erection of palaces, and the opening of wide streets and squares, the author proposed an expropriation en masse, and for the same cause, l'utilité publique. Every house should have a fixed rent, and concierges should become public functionaries, whose nominations would appear in the official columns of the Moniteur! And would you believe that this monstrosity has arrived at its fourth edition, that it has made a great noise, and that the Government gives a sort of acquiescence to its official socialism by remaining silent?

M. PAUL DE MONTEARIN, another pamphleteer, astonishes the Parisians with a proposition of another character, but still in the category of expropriation—the expropriation of marriageable girls. M. DE MONTSABIN (whose mental condition we are assured has been submitted to the inspection of three known doctors) tries to establish the fact that the greater part of the social evils of the day are to be attributed to the fortuitous manner in which marriages are contracted. The object of his book is to induce the government to interfere and in a measure guarantee these high acts of social life. He believes that the deceptions as to character, state of fortune, morality, the disproportion of ages, the intermediation of match-makers, will all disappear with his system. Extending the duties of the concierge or porter of each house (and here he falls in unison with the landlord-hater) the author proposes that this person shall be held to keep a correct journal of the conduct of all his lodgers, with a column for observations where shall be recorded with fidelity all acts that may have a bearing upon marriage; the hour at which they enter at night, the persons they receive, whether there are any constable's visits; the cards, journals, letters, eatibles, medicaments, they receive. All these facts are to be deposed in a central special dépôt at each mayory for the inspection of those concerned. No one should marry past the age of thirty-five, neither should a blonde complexion be married to a dark one; he anticipates great results from an intelligent mingling of temperaments. For instance, a dark complexioned man pays his addresses to a blonde, and they agree to get married. They start to the altar with a firm and confident step. But they are stopped. The marriage is not possible; all the disposible blondes are inscribed for a month past. A recruit has been demanded from the Rhine; he must wait the next arrival. The author also occupies himself with the question of the fusion of ranks. The girls must subscribe their names when they wish a marquis; and wait their turns when they are rare, or else fall back on a count. But M. DE MONTSABIN forgets an important consideration; he does not tell us how is to be charged with the grave responsibility of standing as guarantee for the girls.

I spoke just now of blondes. The admirers of blondes in France are alarmed at the growing scarcity of this species of female beauty, and they, too, are adopting means to arrest the rapid extinction of the race. Of three or four hundred actresses in Paris, there are but two blondes—Mlle. BELLECOURT, of the Vaudeville, changed lately to Madame LAGRANGE, and Mlle. DUBOIS, of the Théâtre Français. Two meetings of a Society, formed ostensibly for the conservation and propagation of this type of female beauty, have been held in Paris. The members of the Society are of the golden youth of the Boulevard, each of whom is bound never to marry, neither with the right hand nor the left, other than a blonde. An effort was made at the dinner which followed the last meeting, at the Trois Frères, to muster a respectable number of ladies of this complexion; but the result only proved the destitution of the country in this respect, and the need of the Society in question.

Some time ago I, and perhaps others, announced that the Empress had set an example in the article of dress, which, it was hoped, would be followed by a complete revolution in some of the present exaggerations. That announcement seemed to make some sensation across the water, which shows that the evil must be a great one with you, or so insignificant a circumstance in itself could not have attracted so much attention. I am, therefore, held to give a history of the reform.

The Empress and the ladies of the Court did appear on the occasion of the ball referred to with a very appreciable diminution in the circumference of their robes. But, it appears, that this was only an experiment; for, at the two subsequent balls, the former dimensions were resumed again. Within a fortnight, however, a new movement has been put on foot, which is destined, sooner or later, to bring the crinoline down to sufferable dimensions. This is a movement inaugurated by a club of noble dames of the Faubourg St. Germain, to bring the style of dress back to the elegant simplicity of the time of Louis XV. and Louis XVI. It is in effect an open war against the extravagance of lace and other kinds of profuse trimmings, and secondarily a war on crinoline; for with a plain-trimmed dress the present dimensions of the skirt would be more apparent, and, consequently, more ridiculous. The movement has taken hold, and I heard a celebrated dressmaker say a day or two ago that in two weeks she had not put an inch of lace on a dress, and that she made all her dresses with one breadth less of silk in the skirt. But in return the jackets are made long, so as to fall on the hips, and the sleeves are still very large, so that the same quantity of silk is used as before. This is the real state of the crinoline question I believe.

The Comet continues the great preoccupation of the moment. Never before, notwithstanding the advanced state of the science of astronomy, and its general diffusion among the people, was any superstition in regard to the end of the world more firmly fixed than this. The ridicule of the caricaturists will go a great way in dispelling the fears of the populace, but it is a fact that many, very many people in France, are making self-reserves in contracts and other business affairs, in view of this eventuality! Fortunately the theatre has seized upon this subject as a pretext for a number of amusing vaudevilles, and of pièces de circonstance, which will aid the caricaturists. To begin at the first, the little Folies Nouvelles has already produced a piece in five tableaux for the pantomimist PAUL LEGRAND, entitled "The 13th of June, or the End of the World."

Paris, the great table-turning humbug, contributes not a little to this unsettled state of the superstitious. The game this man is playing is a deep and dangerous one. He lives retired, makes of himself a great secret, and refuses nine out of ten invitations to dine or to evening soirées. He goes only to the houses of the highest officials of the Government. The journals, glad to find so good a subject for developing a feuilleton upon, give startling details of this man's performances, his antecedents and his personal habits—all of which are coined in the several authors' brains and are as devoid of truth as that HUME is an American, or a frail young man of twenty years of age, who tries to shun the spirits that pursue him. HUME allows the journals to talk, for he is making money and is satisfied.

A play has just been brought out at the Palais Royal, entitled "What becomes of the Roses." The principal characters are Marguerite Gauthier, of the "Dame aux Camelias;" Marco, of the "Filles de Marbre;" and the Baronne d'Ange, of the "Demi-Monde." These three characters are filled by RAVEL, GRASSOT and HYACINTHE, and the piece has had a great success. As a commentary on the title of the piece, the police reports offer us this week, in the shape of a suicide, a very striking proof of what becomes of the roses. The cadavre of a woman was found in the bottom of a well, whom the Commissary of Police found, after an inquest, had stated nothing but the truth in the following lines found in her pocket: "I am, to-day, forty-six years old; my name is F * * *. When I was young I was handsome; I shone at Paris, where I was known by the name of LA PETITE MARQUISE. I had a city and a country house, domestics, carriages, &c. Arrived a horrible malady. A year later I was ugly. Another year, and all I possessed was sold. Then commenced for me a frightful existence, living on public charity, dragging myself from hospital to hospital, for they would not long keep me—I was incurable! Day before yesterday they again drove me from the hospital. What could I do? I have but one resource—suicide! You who find my body, pray for me."

The candidates for the Chair of the late M. DE SALVANDY at the Institute of France are M. EMILE AUGIER, M. DE LAPRADE, M. DE MARCELLUS, M. PHILARÈTE CHASLES, and M. THÉOPHILE GAUTIER. But the chances are about evenly divided between the first two named.

M. PHILARÈTE CHASLES, the well-known linguist, Member of the Academy of Sciences, has it in contemplation to found a monthly review at Paris, devoted to American interests and American news. The plan, however, is not yet organized.

The great theatrical success of the day, since the appearance of the Question d'Argent is that of La Fiammina, a comedy in four acts, at His Majesty's theatre, the Comédie Française, by M. MARIO UCHARD. It has been so long since the first French theatre has had a success, that this one has taken the town by surprise. What is more remarkable still, to the literary part of the town especially, M. UCHARD is a banker, or rather a speculator at the Bourse, and this is his first literary attempt. He knows nothing of the theatre other than his experience with M'lle MADELEINE BROHAN, a distinguished actress of the French theatre, who was formerly his wife, and who is now playing at St. Petersburg. La Fiammina would play well on a New-York stage.

A new piece at the Ambigu, entitled the "Orphans of Charity" is founded upon a history so singular that I cannot abstain from giving it to you. It is the history of a young girl of Amsterdam who has the executioner for guardian, for, according to the author, M. DANERY, there is a law in Holland which condemns to marriage or death every seducer of an orphan adopted by the State. Thus the heroine of the piece, Francis, is ambitious, and she has conceived the idea of marrying a nobleman, and of becoming a great lady. So she lays a trap for a foreigner who does not know the law, Count D'Albret, a Frenchman, who finds after having embraced too warmly his new acquaintance, that his retreat is cut off by the scaffold. "You must marry my lord," she says, "or mount the scaffold! Your hand or your life!" But the Count d'Albret loves Frederika Van del Berg, the daughter of the grand Pensionnaire. He refuses, and accepts death rather than betray his affianced for this perfidious intriguant. Then commences the struggles, plots and counter-plots of the play, till it is discovered that Francis is the illegitimate daughter of Madam Van del Berg, the sister of the one of whom she threatened to destroy the happiness. Then she repents, cries, and wants to die; and, as the State only cares for its children, it is found that, since Francis is the child of some one, she is no longer an orphan, and M. d'Albret has no longer anything to fear from the Draconian code of the Netherlands. It would, indeed, have been cruel for a Dutch executioner to have cut off the head of a French nobleman for so thin a sin.

The Italian Opera closes here on the 31st of the month, and LA RISTORI succeeds the 2d of April. "I Puritani" has been put on the bill, to bring STEFANONI, and another artist known to you, M. CUTURI, before the public. The success of STEFANONI, as usual, was up to any of her successes of the early part of the season, while that of M. CUTURI was only mediocre.

The Shocks of Puritanism—Kalloch—The New Paper—Greene & Co.'s Failure—The Affair of Willis, the Spiritualistic Student—The Affidavit of Rev. Mr. Higginson—The Governor Comfortable but Undignified—The Suffolk Bank—Mr. Barry's Mistake—A New Play.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

BOSTON, Monday, April 20, 1857.

There has been a long interval between my last missive to you and the date of this present epistle, which, Heaven forbid that I should review. We have suffered many and rude shocks from discoveries and trials of very carnal crimes, and I prefer to leave time to work the necessary disinfection, rather than to stir the dirty heap anew. People, however, still "talk Kalloch," and will continue to do so, I presume, so long as that reverend gentleman continues in the pastoral charge of his flock of three thousand lambs at the Tremont Temple. He has succeeded, certainly, in pulling the wool over their eyes completely, and no Charles Honeyman ever drew fuller houses or more sympathizing tears. They gave him a "donation party" the other night, at which DONALD MCKAY, the ship builder, indorsed his character for chastity, and the sum of $1,000 was collected. In the vast desert of the world's hard heartedness and unbelief, it is refreshing to stumble on such a verdant oasis of simplicity as the donors must have occupied when they were thanked for their benefaction by Mr. KALLOCH. Personally, Mr. KALLOCH is said to be a very agreeable man, fluent in conversation, and possessed of original ideas and powers of expression. He is quite a young man, and very good looking. Photographs of him are on exhibition at many print-stores, and still attract crowds to the windows within which they lie—principally of women. It is also noticeable that his congregations at the Tremont Temple are three-fourths feminine.

The new Boston paper, the Traveller, enters to-day upon its second week. The kind notices with which it was heralded by the rest of the Boston press have been succeeded by quite virulent and vinegary paragraphs, for it has begun to cut deeply into the subscription and advertising lists of all the other two cent papers. It is, as you of course have observed, rather a medley at present, but when it has sailed a little further on its voyage, and has got its sea-legs on, you can judge better of its merit. It was appointed the official journal of the State on Saturday.

In some of the notices of the failure of the American Banking-house of GREENE & Co., in Paris, I have observed it stated that it was a Boston house. Its founder was SAMUEL WELLES, a Bostonian. Many years after its establishment, JOHN B. GREENE became his partner, and upon his death, his successor. Mr. GREENE, himself, died six years ago, and the business has been conducted since 1851 by his sons-in-law.

The affair of Mr. WILLIS, a divinity student at Cambridge, who has been suspended by the Faculty of the Theological School, for participation in "spiritualistic" performances, attracted much attention here a fortnight ago, and is now exciting indignation against the Faculty. I have heard accounts of his spiritualistic exploits in Roxbury, Salem, Worcester and Cambridge, as well as in Boston, of a most wonderful character; and Rev. THOMAS WENTWORTH HIGGINSON, of Worcester, has just published an affidavit, attested by oath, narrating a variety of his performances which are equally extraordinary—such as causing a tune to be played by an accordeon, which he held in one hand only; causing also a guitar to play, without the touch of hands, an accompaniment to a difficult Portuguese air which Mr. HIGGINSON sang, and which he was confident could not be known to a dozen persons in the country besides himself; tipping heavy marble slabs on the tops of tables, &c. Mr. HIGGINSON's reputation as a man of veracity is above suspicion, although since his participation in the Worcester Disunion Convention, I have doubted his common sense.

The case of Mr. WILLIS came before the Faculty on the complaint of Professor EUSTIS of the scientific school, who is a violent man, led often by eccentric impulses. He was present at a "gathering" at which Mr. WILLIS was to perform, and intercepted WILLIS' leg beneath the table in a position in which he thought it possible that it might be used to tap on a drum on which the "spirits" were expected to beat a tune. He seized him immediately and proclaimed him a cheat. WILLIS offered to give the Theological Faculty opportunity to test in the most thorough manner the phenomena which he produced, with a view to establishing his honesty. They declined his offer, and have suspended him from the school. I have no donbt, from what I have heard of the case, that both they and Prof. EUSTIS had acted unjustifiably. Prof. EUSTIS himself violated the condition on which he was allowed a seat at the table, when he seized WILLIS' leg.

The result of the affair must be that a thorough and scientific examination will be made by competent persons into the nature of the phenomena which are sworn to be produced. Many of our most respectable citizens are determined that such an investigation shall be made, and this case of Mr. WILLIS has been discussed in all our scientific and literary circles.

In politics there is nothing going on which would interest you. A call for a Republican State Convention has been withdrawn for reasons of policy. Our Legislature bids fair to sit through the Spring far into the Summer. It has done very little since it met in January, and complaints of its dilly-dallying are arising everywhere. As a bit of gossip which illustrates the free and easy manners which have become popular at the State-House, I may mention that a gentleman of my acquaintance called in business hours a day or two ago on Governor GARDNER at the Council Chamber, and found him situated as follows: His legs were propped against the chimney higher than his head, he held in his mouth a lighted cigar, and had practised on the carpet the vile and American habit of expectoration. A well known politician sat side by side with His Excellency in a similar position. The gentleman transacted his business as speedily as possible and retired. Oh, shades of our venerable, departed Excellencies, and spirit of the still subsisting EVERETT, how must you have frowned upon the scene, especially upon the attitude!

The alteration of the Suffolk Bank building, in State-street, is progressing rapidly. The heavy granite pillars have all been removed.

Mr. BARRY, the manager of our Boston Theatre, has certainly run a Don Quixote tilt against a windmill, in the letter in which he assails FANNY KEMBLE for her fancied defamation of the stage, for, I see, Rev. Mr. BELLOWS, of your City, states that she never wrote such a letter. Considering the spicy character of Mr. BARRY's letter, enthusiastic people here whisper of a "cowhiding," but surely such people must be sarcastic.

A new play, or rather an old one entirely remodeled, is to be brought out at the Museum to-night, entitled "The Duchess."

FROM KANSAS.

The New Governor—Political Movements—Progress of Emigration.

WYANDOT, K. T., Monday, April 6, 1857.

The great item of political interest in Kansas at present is the change of Territorial Governors. The resignation of Governor GEARY took the country by surprise, but it was believed that he would be reappointed and return armed with full powers to administer the Government which the United States claims as its right over the Territory. The appointment of Mr. WALKER was of course a most startling one, and was the cause of much apprehension among the conservative citizens here. The regret that GEARY had not been sustained was general, and his abandonment by the Executive was a bad sign with which to indicate the policy of his successor. It was known that for weeks before GEARY's departure East, all military power had been taken from his hands by PIERCE; and it was a knowledge of this fact on the part of SHERRARD and his friends which emboldened them to pursue the reckless course which had so fatal a result. The complicity of the Administration with the ultra Pro-Slavery Party was as evident here as in any part of its preceding history. It was hoped and believed, even by ardent Republicans, that Mr. BUCHANAN would hold himself above such degrading factional alliances, and pursue a course consonant at once with true policy and justice. This hope may not prove groundless, but the reported instructions of Mr. WALKER have given it a tremendous shock. If it is true that he is to administer the Government on the basis that the bogus laws are valid, and accept the scandalous act for the formation of a Pro-Slavery constitution as just, and sustain it in the face of the adverse sentiments of the population, then if is true that the policy of the present Administration tallies precisely with that of ATCHISON and his co-operators here. This is to prove his Administration a continuation of that of JEFF. DAVIS, and to verify, even sooner than was expected, the forebodings of the Republicans during the Presidential canvass.

Notwithstanding these ominous indications, the belief is general on all sides, that no more civil strife is possible here. All parties concur in this. In Missouri, a powerful conservative party is resolved that there shall be no repetition of the outrageous invasions of the past. A strong Anti-Slavery feeling has been evolved there from the agitation of the last two years, and the question of emancipation is already conceded to be debatable; a great admission on the part of the ultraists, who have lately exercised dominion with an iron rod. And in St. Louis, the focus of these liberal ideas, the question of emancipation is discussed with a warmth which promises almost to disturb the peace of the City.

Meantime the emigration is immense. Boats come up the Missouri laden with four to five hundred emigrants, the great bulk of whom are Free-State in principle. The roads through Missouri and Iowa are black with wagons, whose occupants are evidently coming to Kansas to stay. Many bring teams to break the prairie, and drive in their own cows and young stock; and not unfrequently we can see a large hen-coop rigged on the rear of the wagon, containing enough feathered occupants to make a respectable poultry yard one of the fixed institutions of the "claim." The emigration at present must exceed a thousand per day; and it is believed this is but trifling compared with that which will loom up in May and June. With this movement no sane man can doubt that the destiny of Kansas is inevitably to be Free-dom—and this in spite of all efforts at Washington or otherwheres to the contrary.

LITERAL.

Things in Kansas.

Mr. BROWN, editor of the Herald of Freedom, at Lawrence, publishes an elaborate apology for the temporary discontinuance of that paper during his absence, all hands having been infected with the claim-speculating mania. Very little else besides land speculations is now talked of in Kansas.

JONATHAN LYMAN, publisher of the Kane County Journal in Illinois, has sold out, and will start a new free soil paper in Kansas.

A letter from Lawrence declares that a large majority of the men who are numbered in the new census lists as voters, have not the remotest idea of removing to Kansas, and without the shadow of a doubt scores have never seen the claims made in their names. The manner of making these claims, in place of complying with the law, is proof positive that the whole plan is nothing else than a scare crow operation. In hundreds of instances there is no house built, no land plowed, no fencing completed or commenced, in a word nothing done, save a stick thrust into the ground, or four poles thrown together. I state what I know from personal observation, having ridden over the Reserve in all directions. I have the statement of an unimpeachable witness who has examined the census returns, that not over one-fourth of the voters in this county are registered.

A Company in Lawrence have purchased a portion of the lands contiguous to Delaware, on the Missouri River, five miles below Leavenworth, and have laid it out into town lots.

Another outrage was committed near Easton, on Sunday, by the Deputy Sheriff of Leavenworth County, MERRITT SMITH. He had a warrant for the arrest of Mr. MARTIN KLINE, on the charge of horse stealing. The affair occurred at the house of a Pro-Slavery man, where church service was held at the time. The Sheriff produced his warrant and read it. Mr. KLINE refused to go at the time, but said he would go next day, (Monday.) The Sheriff then drew his revolver and fired five times at KLINE, three balls taking effect. This occurred in the house, full of people during the service. Mr. KLINE is known to be innocent of the charge against him.

FROM NEBRASKA.

Abandonment of Forts Pierre, Laramie and Kearney by the United States Troops—Its Effect upon Emigration and the Frontier—Pawnee Indians and the White Settlers—Immense Emigration to Nebraska—General News, &c.

OMAHA CITY, NEBRASKA TERRITORY, Tuesday, April 7, 1857.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

There is a general feeling of dissatisfaction prevalent amongst frontier settlers at the recent orders from the War Department, in which it is ordered that the only military posts, Forts Pierre, Kearney and Laramie, of Nebraska, are this season to be abandoned by the United States troops. Those stationed at Forts Laramie and Kearney at present are ordered to the Pacific and those at Fort Pierre are ordered down the river. After the goods or provisions are removed from Forts Kearney and Laramie, then those posts are to be deserted. What the effect will be upon the frontier it seems not difficult to predict.

Fort Pierre station is some 700 miles north of this place on the west bank of the Missouri River. Fort Kearney is some 115 miles west of this place, upon or near the trail of the emigration to Salt Lake, California and Oregon, and Fort Laramie is some 350 miles further. The former protects the upper Missouri Country from any inroad by savages in that section, whilst the two latter stations not only give assurance of protection to our frontier settlers, but is an efficient assistance and protection to the overland emigration. Were it not for the two latter posts, the Pawnees, Ogallahs, Brulé Sioux, and numbers of other warlike Indians, would control the entire country to the west of us, and the emigrant train that could run the gauntlet of the horde that infest the plains would be a curiosity.

The effect of an abandonment of the two latter posts, particularly, cannot but be regarded as an unfortunate move for emigrants and frontier settlers. What the abandonment is ordered for I cannot conceive. Were it at a time when the intervening country was sufficiently settled by whites to afford a "home" protection against savage tribes, it would not appear as bad; but, just now, they are most needed, when frontier settlers require at least a shadow of military force to protect them from insult and rapine at the hands of their red brethren.

A short time since some danger was apprehended by our settlers back upon the Platte River from the Pawnee Indians, who had threatened them with annihilation unless they desisted from improving in that vicinity. I apprehend, however, no direct trouble from them so far as the settlers are concerned. Upon the plains, and particularly upon the emigrant trail, they are a thieving, ugly set of highwaymen; at home they are a dirty, filthy, lewd and thievish set of miserable beings. Why does not our Government take some prompt steps towards removing them from their present location upon the Omaha purchase, and amongst the white settlers, and locate them upon their own lands "farther west?" The interest of the Territory demands their immediate removal.

Already hundreds of emigrants are pouring into Nebraska from the States. Boats and stages come heavily laden, and hundreds more are on their way. There will be the largest emigration hither this season than perhaps to any other section of our Union—yet "there's room enough for all." The land office here is daily visited by numbers of pre-emption claimants, who are proving up and paying for their land. Farmers throughout the Territory are preparing for large crops this season. A great many of them are preparing to raise a crop of the Chinese sugar cane. The weather is pleasant, and boats are constantly arriving.

Indian Depredations in Minnesota—Rumored Burning of Mankato—Butchery of the Inhabitants.

From the Dubuque Herald.

We learn from Mr. SHERMAN, of Red Wing, that intelligence had been received at that point on Wednesday last that a band of Indians, about 600 in number, had been committing depredations in the vicinity of Mankato. The rumor said that Mankato was burned and the inhabitants murdered. There can be no donbt that several families have been destroyed. The Indians are a dissatisfied band of Sioux, and are doubtless the same who attacked the settlement at Spirit Lake, of which the readers of the Express and Herald have already received the full particulars. The inhabitants in the valley are crowding into St. Peters for protection. Troops from Fort Ridgely were in pursuit of the marauding Indians, and cavalry had been ordered from Fort Snelling. No little panic existed through the country, and active measures were being taken to drive the hostile band from the country. We also learn from our informant that the settlers murdered at Spirit Lake were originally from Red Wing; Mankato about eighty miles from Red Wing, and about twelve from St. Peters.

Collision in the East River.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT—April 23.

Before Judge Nelson.

DECISIONS IN ADMIRALTY.

Dennis Fagan and others vs. the steam-tug Pluto.—NELSON, C. J.—This libel was filed by the owners of the schooner Charles Hopkins against the Pluto, to recover damages for a collision in the East River. The wind was southwest and the tide ebb; the schooner was beating down the river on her larboard tack, and was crossing from the Brooklyn to the New-York side, towards the foot of Jackson-street; the Pluto was coming up the river on the New-York side, with a heavy tow on her larboard quarter; she was ascending against the tide at a rate of speed not to exceed a quarter or a half a mile an hour. The schooner came about nearly ahead of the tug, and sagged down upon her, causing the damage that occurred. The person in charge of her did not see the Pluto until he had come about, or was in the act of coming about. He might have run nearer the New-York shore with safety before he tacked, and thus have avoided the collision. The tug stopped immediately, and seems to have done everything, under the circumstances, in her power to prevent the injury.—It is apparent that the cause of it is attributed to the want of a proper look-out on the schooner. If the hands had seen the tug in time, the collision could have been easily avoided.

It is said that the Pluto was in fault in not being in the middle of the river, or as near as might be, regard being had to other vessels navigating it, as directed by the State law. But it does not appear that this omission led to the collision, or in any way contributed to it. It furnished no reason for the schooner's unnecessarily tacking about ahead of the steamer. This was gross inattention to duty on the part of the person in charge of the vessel. The schooner at the time was not in command of its ordinary master, but in charge of one temporarily engaged, and who was manifestly incompetent to navigate her at a place where skill and attention were indispensable.

The decree of the Court below, dismissing the libel, we think is right, and should be affirmed.

For appellant, Mr. Benedict and Mr. Malcolm.

For appellee, Mr. Bryan.

Thomas Bell vs. Thomas Hunt.—NELSON, C. J.—This is a libel filed by Bell to recover a balance due for raising and removing the steamboat Cricket off and from a sand-bar, at the mouth of Shrewsbury Inlet, N. J., where she had been stranded. It appears that Hunt owned the steamboat Confidence, which ran between the port of New York and Shrewsbury Inlet, and that her engine having failed he employed and chartered the Cricket on the 4th July, 1840, of Peck, the owner, to take her place, and that, while thus employed, she was stranded, as above stated.

The libelant, Bell, was engaged to get her off the sand bar for $2,150, of which sum a balance of $250 remains unpaid. The Court below decreed for the respondent and dismissed the libel.

There is no sufficient evidence that the contract was made by Hunt with the libellant for the service in question. On the contrary, the weight of it is that it was made by Peck, the owner. Hunt was present when it was made, but for aught that appears, took no part in the negotiation. Peck did. Indeed, the libellant was given to understand by Hunt, according to the proof, that Peck was the responsible man at the time the contract was made.

It is supposed that Hunt may be made liable as charterer to the libellant. But, aside from the consideration that the contract was made with Peck, and not with him, it does not appear upon what terms the Cricket was chartered. She may have been navigated by the master and hands of the owner, and hence the charterer not at all responsible for the safety of the ship. There is no foundation, therefore, laid for the inference sought to be raised of the liability of the respondent on this ground.

We think the decree below should be affirmed.

For appellant, Messrs. Owen and Vose. For appellee, Mr. Stoughton.

In the case of Alexander Cross vs. George Law, Mr. Lord concluded his summing up for the plaintiff this morning, and Judge NELSON then charged them. His charge was favorable to the plaintiff. The Jury were directed to bring in a sealed verdict to-morrow morning.

The United States vs. Jeremiah Towle.—Counsel in this case commenced summing up this morning, but the procession in the streets made such a noise that the Court was compelled to adjourn. There are but two items of dispute in the accounts. Mr. Towle was appointed naval officer during the recess of Congress by President Tyler, on March 19, 1843. The statute giving him $5,000 a year as salary and his accounts being closed on Dec. 31, 1843, he deducted that sum from the fees received by him at that time. In July, 1844, his nomination was sent in to the Senate and by them confirmed, and Mr. Towle claims another $5,000 up to that time. He then claims another $5,000 from that time till Dec. 31, 1844, and another $5 000 from that date till May 21, 1845, when he was suspended by President Polk. He also claims $1,600, being $400 a year as extra compensation for keeping the accounts of the lighthouse and the hospital moneys.

This item of $1,600 the Government disallow entirely, and they disallow one of the items of $5,000.

Mr. Towle, also, claims to recover against the Government the sum of $250, paid by him to John B. Murray, in 1845, to redeem certain valuable books sent as a present by the Government of France to our Government, under the auspices of Mr. Vattemare, and which, on arrival here, were put in store, and by neglect allowed to be sold at auction for storage fees, and which were bought by Mr Murray. This $250 the Government had never repaid to Mr. Towle, although the books were at once forwarded to Washington.

Mr. Towle also claims to recover at the rate of $3,000 a year for services rendered by himas one of the Commissioners appointed by the Government to determine and pass upon packages that were destroyed in the great fire in 1835.

It is claimed by defendant's counsel that, as the accounts were rendered to the Government containing the disputed items, and as no action was taken upon them for years, they must be considered to have been passed upon by the accounting officers and cannot be reopened for investigation now.

Important Decisions in Admiralty.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT—April 23.

CHARTER PARTY—TIMBER—PLEADING—WITNESS.

Charles H. Hayward vs. A Quantity of Timber, &c.—This libel was filed by the owner of the brig A. H. Wass to recover the amount of charter-money on a charter of the brig executed by the master for a voyage from this port to the port of Cambridge in Maryland with privilege of another port, the charterer agreeing to furnish a full cargo of timber and lumber. The vessel went to Cambridge, but there was not a full cargo there, and at the other port the master was informed that he could have the balance of his cargo if he would take certain timber. Deeming the timber too large to go on the brig, he declined to take it, and brought the part cargo to this port and claimed the full charter-money.

Held by the Court—That under the ruling of the Circuit Court of this District in the case of Beecher vs. Bechtel, decided in September, 1853, the freighter violated his contract if he failed to supply the cargo stipulated, and of a size and shape, and at the sides of the ship in a condition fitted for being taken or stowed on board.

That the master is a competent witness, unless it is proved he has other interest in the cause than that of charterer. He gave the charter party as master and agent.

That the full cargo stipulated was not supplied at Cambridge; that the charterer having the "privilege of one landing place on the river," it devolves upon him to prove that he pointed out such landing place to the master, and that sufficient timber was provided for her alongside the ship to complete the cargo.

That if the case is decided upon the issue as shaped by the pleadings, the claimant fails to prove that he produced his timber alongside of the vessel within reach of her tackles so as to constitute a performance of his contract, and the libelant would accordingly be justified in returning to his home-port and demanding damages consequent upon the breach of the charter-party.

That the claimant is estopped by the pleadings from denying that the charter party was fulfilled in respect to Cambridge, and that the libelant establishes his right to freight for a full cargo according to the charter party.

Decree for libelant with a reference.

For libelant, Messrs. Beebe, Dean and Donohue; for claimant, Messrs. Platt, Gerard and Buckley.

TOWING CONTRACT—NEGLIGENCE.

Charles A. Heckscher vs. The Steamboat Boston.—The libel was filed in this case by the owner of the canal boat Union, setting up that in December, 1854, the Philadelphia Steam-tug and Navigation Company, owners of the Boston, agreed to tow the Union with her cargo of coal from Philadelphia to Bordentown, and from New clothes drop down; she asked me for a cape, that she had taken off, to throw on her shoulders; the doctor then examined the lower part of her body from her waist down; he then told her to step out of her clothes and sit down on the chair; she sat down and took off her shoes and stockings; he then examined her limbs and feet; he then took hold of her arms and hands and examined them again, as she sat in the chair; he then told her to step back in her clothes, and she did so; there is one statement I made that I wish to correct—she was stripped of all her clothing, except a fine merino under garment, which hung about her waist, which covered nothing but what had been already examined. [Resuming]—I then assisted her in dressing herself, pulling her clothes partly up; that is all I heard, and all I have to say that I recollect; allow me to make one more remark—when she said "Don't expose me so," the Doctor answered—"Never mind—I'm a physician."

Q.—Were Mr. John Connery and the policeman present through the whole of the examination. A.—Yes; they were in the room.

Q.—For what purpose were you present at No. 31 Bond-street upon the occasion referred to. [Objected to and withdrawn.]

Q.—Were you a witness in the case? A.—I was.

Q.—Were you detained or imprisoned at No. 31 Bond-street or elsewhere. [Objected to.]

The case before the Judge having been concluded, the examination was continued before him.

Mr. Jordan objected to the question and to the testimony of the witness on the stand, and to that of any other witness of what Dr. Woodward or any other person did, beyond the direction of the Coroner.

Question allowed.

Mr. Sedgwick—Begin at the beginning, and tell your story.

Witness—I went to No. 31 Bond-street on the Sunday after the murder; the Policeman refused to let me see the body of Dr. Burdell; he told me to wait until 2½ o'clock, when the Coroner would be present; I then went to my sister's in Great Jones-street, and returned at 3 o'clock; a Policeman and Mrs. Howell stood at the foot of the stairs; I asked the Policeman if I could go up; he said not without an order from the Coroner; I staid there (No. 31 Bond-street,) Sunday night voluntarily; I went home on Thursday; I did not go home sooner, because I was detained.

Q.—Did you make application to go home, and to whom, and if so, when? A.—I made application to one of the policemen on Monday, to go home; he said I would have to wait until the Coroner got through.

Q.—Did you make application again for such permission, if so, please state when and to whom, and if more than one application? A.—I waited until towards night, and then asked one of the policemen again, if I could go home, and he said no; I made other applications, one was made in the morning of Monday, another in the evening, when he told me the Coroner had left orders that I could not leave the house; I then told him I must go, for I had a family of children, or else I must send for my little one and have him brought over to me; the next application was on Wednesday night to Captain Dilks; he told me that the Coroner had given orders that I must be taken to the Station-house; I told him if he would let me go home he might send a Policeman with me, and I would come back next morning at nine o'clock; he told me no, it was out of the County, and he could not do it; I then wanted him to let me go to my sister's in Great Jones-street and stay, and that he might lock the door and take the key with him; he told me no, he could not do that; he said the Coroner left orders that I should be taken to the Fifteenth Ward Station-house with the rest of the witnesses; I then begged of him to let me stay in the parlors there all night; but he refused me that; he then told officer Davis to take me home with him; I went and staid with his family all night; on Thursday morning I returned to Bond street, and my testimony was taken that day, after being confined one day in the basement, on Tuesday I was taken to the Seventeenth Ward Station-house; I was brought to No. 31 Bond-street on Wednesday; the Deputy Coroner opened the front door and came out; he said to the Policeman who was with him, "Take those women back to the Station-House, and lock them up, immediately, in the cells;" we went into the house, down in the basement, and staid there till night, till the Coroner had gone; that was the night I was ordered to be taken to the Fifteenth Ward Station-House, and the night I staid with Officer Davis' family.

The counsel for the Coroner stated to the Judge the testimony of this witness regarding what took place on the examination by the physician, and regarding her own detention and imprisonment, having been allowed on account of the difficulty or impossibility of separating what might be proper from that which was improper, and moved that all her testimony in regard to those points be struck out, except as to facts which took place by the special and express direction of the Coroner, or in his presence, or with his knowledge previous, or his assent subsequently.

Motion denied. The Judge said he could not separate the evidence so as to distinguish what acts of Dr. Woodward were in conformity to the direction given to him by the Coroner, and what were not. That the witnesses present, when Mrs. Cunningham was examined by Dr. Woodward, might testify to what took place in their presence, and that it would be for the Governor to approve how far what occurred was or was not in pursuance of the order given by the Coroner. [Exception taken.]

Q.—Did you enter into any bail bond to appear as a witness? A.—I did not.

Q.—How large is your family? [Question overruled.]

Cross-examined by Mr. Jordan—Q.—Mrs. Denison, how were you related to Dr. Burdell; by marriage? A.—He was an own cousin to my husband.

Q.—Was there any relationship between you or your husband and Mrs. Cunningham? A.—Not that I know of.

Q.—When did you first become acquainted with Dr. Emerell? A.—Over twenty years ago.

Q.—Were you or your husband, or either of you, in the habit of visiting him during those twenty years, or any part thereof. A.—We were; I visited him frequently.

Q.—For what purpose. A.—Both in a friendly and professional way.

Q.—How long have you been a married lady? A.—Over twenty years.

Q.—Were you taken into any station-house during that investigation. A.—I was; I was taken into the Seventeenth Ward Station-house on Tuesday, at about one or two o'clock.

Q.—How long were you kept there on that occasion? A.—Until Wednesday about ten A. M.

Q.—Where did you stay over night—in what part of the building? A.—In the Captain and Lieutenant's room.

Q.—Were you furnished with a bed, and did you sleep in it that night? A.—I did.

Q.—Were there any other ladies who slept with you? A.—There was another lady slept in the same room by the name of Mrs. Seymour.

Q.—Were you kindly and hospitably treated while there, or otherwise? A.—I was kindly treated by the Captain and Lieutenant.

Q.—Were the room and bed comfortable in which you slept? A.—Yes.

Q.—How far was that Station House from No. 31 Bond street—in what street and what number? A.—I cannot tell; it was not very near by; [It is corner of Fifth-street and First-avenue.—Rep.]

Q.—How did you go, and with whom, to the Seventeenth Ward Station House, that day? A.—I walked with an officer and a crowd behind us. They followed us to the door.

Q.—Did you or the officer walk or mingle with the crowd behind you? A.—I walked with the officer and the crowd was behind us; the officer stopped several times and tried to drive them back. (Counsel for the Coroner objected, moved that it be stricken out and that the witness be compelled to answer the questions propounded.)

The Judge ruled that the nature of the question, as to her mingling with the crowd, the witness might state all that occurred. Motion to strike out overruled.

Witness—Further answered. We did not mingle with them, they mingled with us; they touched my cape.

Q.—Did the officer use efforts to keep the crowd away or disperse them? A.—He did; he told me not to look around, but he turned himself several times and tried to keep them back.

Q.—On which story was the room where Mrs. Cunningham was examined by the Doctor? A.—Third story hell, front bedroom.

Q.—How large was it? A.—It was a small bedroom, about the usual size of hall bedrooms.

At this point the case was adjourned to Monday next at 10 o'clock A. M.

The plaintiff went to the premises of the defendant in the beginning of April to serve an injunction on the plaintiff partner, issued by the Supreme Court in the case of Champlen vs. Hill and Boyd. The defendant came up to him and asked him what he wanted, to which question the plaintiff replied that he had some legal papers to serve, whereupon it was alleged the defendant seized him by the collar, kicked him and violently ejected him from the premises. Plaintiff had him arrested and taken to the Station-house, but nothing further ever came of it. The jury found a verdict for plaintiff for $50.

THE ELVES,
Lauren.—The mountain forests of Pasteria are inhabited, it is said, by Pixies, Sprites and Elves, who, like the Phantom Dancers of Germany, delight to entrap travelers into their realms and torment them with their mischievous antics. Having the power of transferring the spirit, they often, in their malicious gambols, give life to the newly dead. Statues, rocks and trees are seen fantastically moving in the forest, but it is only during the DAY they retain their fictitious existence; at the approach of NIGHT they resume their immobility.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Royal Mail Steamship America, which left Liverpool on the 11th inst., arrived at Halifax last evening, but owing to a continuance of the storm in Nova Scotia, and a disarrangement of the lines east of Portland, it was found impossible to telegraph her news. Efforts to get dispatches from Halifax by way of Quebec have also failed. We shall doubtless receive a summary of her advices in time for our First Evening Edition.

A dispatch from Washington to the Philadelphia Ledger states, on what purports to be reliable authority, that the action of our Government in increasing our naval force in the Isthmus waters meets the approval of Lord NAPIER, the British Minister, who was officially informed of the fact by a note from the State Department, as was also the Count DE SARTIGES, Minister from France. The latter, however, has not signified either his assent or dissent to the movement. The total number of vessels ordered to the Isthmus is ten—seven of which will be stationed at Aspinwall, and three at Panama. With so important a force, our Government is confident of effecting an early arrangement of the dispute.

We learn from Washington that the Department of the Interior has completed the organization of the Wagon-Road Corps, and that operations will be commenced with the least possible delay.

The rumored massacre by the Indians in Blue Earth County, Minnesota, is confirmed. Forty settlers were murdered at Big Bend, and several women were carried off. The greatest alarm is felt. It is stated that all the Indians beyond the Minnesota River have assumed a hostile attitude.

In the Board of Alderman last evening an indignant report was received from the Special Committee on the new Charter, and ordered printed. A communication was also received from Mr. STOUT, the City Chamberlain, in answer to a resolution demanding to know why warrants drawn on the treasury had not been paid, together with the amount of overdraft, &c.

In the Supreme Court, yesterday, the case of FERNANDO WOOD vs. JAMES W. NYE and others, was commenced on an order to show cause why the temporary injunction granted against the defendants restraining them from acting as Police Commissioners under the new Metropolitan Police bill, should not be dissolved. Ex-Judge EDMONDS opened for the Mayor, and claimed that the law was unconstitutional. Mr. EVARTS, for the defendants, claimed that it was not, and attempted to show that His Honor the Mayor had no power to bring the suit, and no standing in Court. Neither party has finished his plea, and the case was adjourned until to day at 4 o'clock.

The case of Coroner CONNERY, charged with having conducted himself improperly during the BURDELL inquest, was continued yesterday before Judge DALY. Two witnesses were examined. Mrs. DENISON, for the prosecution, described the personal examination of Mrs. CUNNINGHAM by Dr. WOODWARD, with womanly minuteness. Her testimony was not as favorable to the Doctor's delicacy as the account given by himself a few days ago. Mr. HENNESSEE was examined for the respondent, with reference to the expressions used by the Coroner to MARY DONOHUE. He testified, in substance, that in Ireland, and among Irishmen here, who knew the story about Teddy Brady's cow, that the remark would be considered as complimentary to the honesty and integrity of any lady concerning whom it might be used. The examination will be resumed on Monday next.

The case of CROSS vs. LAW, in the United States Circuit Court, was submitted to the Jury yesterday with directions to bring in a sealed verdict to-morrow morning.

In the United States District Court the case of the United States vs JEREMIAH TOWLE, was put over till to-day, in consequence of the military in Chambers-street making so much noise that counsel could not be heard.

Yesterday in the Court of General Sessions, the trial of Dr. ELIJAH HUNT, for procuring an abortion on Mrs. LAWSON, thereby causing her death, was concluded. The jury found him guilty of manslaughter in the second degree. The charge against PETER DAWSON for keeping a disorderly house in the Fourth Ward, was called up for trial. PETER was out on bail, and not appearing to answer the charge, his recognizances were declared forfeited.

The long-talked of parade of Target Companies, which was to have taken place on Monday last, but which the unpropitious weather prevented, took place yesterday. It was not altogether what our citizens had been led to expect, and some disappointment was expressed in consequence. Still it was a very respectable display, and would have been even imposing, if there had been no bolters, who by forming themselves into an independent parade, lessened by so much the effect which harmony in the ranks would have produced. As it was there was a broken chain, stretching down Broadway for an hour or two, whose links would not unite.

The anniversary of St. George's Day was observed with the usual honors, and a dinner, yesterday evening, at Delmonico's. The principal feature of the occasion was the presence of Lord NAPIER, the newly accredited British Minister, who made a speech, expressive of the most fraternal feelings between this country and Great Britain.

JAMES CONNERY, while serving as a juror in the Circuit Court, yesterday, obtained leave to go out and get a shilling's worth on the half shell. Before returning to his duties he thought he would try a penny shot at the stand of the pop-gun man. Just as he was about to pull the trigger, he felt a finger in the vicinity of his valuable watch. He suffered the thief to get a short distance from him, when he put down the pop-gun and "put" after the man who had his watch. Catching him he gave him in charge to officer GILLFILAN. The arrested man gave his name as JOSEPH LEE.

A gentleman from Pennsylvania, while halting a few moments during a stroll in the rear of the City Hall, on Wednesday night, was embraced by a gentleman and lady, who were also strolling there, and by them relieved of $2,600. He has not yet recovered his money.

The New-York East Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which has been in session at the Fleet-street Church, Brooklyn, for a week past, closed its proceedings yesterday and adjourned sine die. The Slavery resolutions, which caused such a warm discussion Thursday, were not called up again, and consequently no vote was taken.

The Press Again.

We do not see any reasonable pretext for postponing the millennium any longer. The signs of the times seem propitious for its immediate advent. The Independent joins the Tribune in extending fraternal sympathy to the Herald in its sufferings under what those journals are pleased to style the personal invective of the TIMES. When papers which enjoy the distinction universally conceded to those two journals, begin to deprecate personalities, and insist upon courtesy and personal civility in newspaper discussions, the golden age must be close at hand. When the lion and the lamb lie down together, and both evince such an affectionate solicitude to protect the "hole of the asp" and the "cockatrice's den" from unseemly and inconvenient molestation, there is certainly reason to look for the millennial dawn. Redeunt Saturnia regna.

The symptoms, we must confess, would be a little more pronounced, to use a technical term, if this singular development of brotherly love were a little less spasmodic in its character, and accompanied somewhat more largely by the cardinal virtues of justice and fair play. When the TIMES, some months ago, remonstrated against the personal invective which was the only reply with which sundry journals met its views and arguments upon topics of public interest, the Independent saw no occasion for commending these sentiments to public favor. On the contrary, it resorted to what savored very essentially of personality by presenting the Editor of the TIMES as having disgraced the cause of journalism by charging members of Congress with corruption;—and when the results of the Investigating Committee had established the truth of those charges, even to the Independent's satisfaction, that high-toned journal could find no word of acknowledgment for the injustice it had done us. Indeed, even now,—in this very article commending civility and courtesy, it takes occasion to repeat the sneer at the "moral conviction" which led the TIMES to make the charge referred to, and which the Committee had no difficulty in fully vindicating by the conviction of individual members.

But the Independent is guilty of a much grosser wrong than this. It says that the TIMES and Herald have had a "fierce war of words about the financial operations of their respective Editors." It was quite superfluous for the Independent, after such a statement, to add that it "knows nothing of the merits of the quarrel." But the best way, when you know nothing, is to say nothing. The TIMES, as its readers know, has waged no such warfare as the one described. The Herald saw fit some time since to make a vehement attack upon the private business of one of the proprietors of the TIMES; it did all in its power to break down the title to certain real estate which he had bought and paid for,—to prevent the Common Council from perfecting the contract made for it,—to deter the Government from purchasing it as the site for a Post-office, and generally to involve him in as much pecuniary difficulty as possible. During all this time,—when the Herald was assailing with the utmost malignity and venom the private business and the personal character of this gentleman, neither the Tribune nor the Independent felt called upon to express the slightest discontent with this abuse of journalism. Their sensibilities were torpid, until the TIMES, in reply to this crusade, took occasion to copy from the Herald's own files column after column of puffs of fancy stock, which proved conclusively that the Money Article of the Herald was used systematically and constantly by the most desperate and unprincipled stock-gamblers in the country as the instrument and tool of their transactions; that instead of being an independent and reliable record of facts,—for the guidance and information of the public, it was nothing but the weapon by which the Fancy Stock Swindlers push their worthless schemes upon public favor, and rob their dupes of their money. We did not assert this—we demonstrated it. Then the Tribune and the Independent were suddenly aroused to the shocking character of these personalities! Then they discovered all at once how very improper and unseemly it was for editors to engage in such a "war of words," and became profuse in their recommendations of charity and the most polished courtesy in the intercourse of the press!

Now we desire the Independent to do us justice before it overwhelms us with advice. We should like to know from that journal, which devotes a good deal of its space to exposing and regulating the financial dishonesties of the day, whether it really thinks our exposure of the real character of the Herald's money articles injurious to the public;—whether that exposure has not been perfectly legitimate and in the line of a journalist's duty; and whether it would have advised us to suppress it, lest we should trespass upon the dignity, or lead the community to distrust the courtesy, of the Press. When it will answer these queries, after informing itself of the merits of the "financial quarrel," then we will listen with all patience and docility to its advice.

It is only just to say that the principal object of the Independent's interference in this matter seems to have been a desire to puff itself, and to recommend the "impersonal" style of editing a newspaper, which it has copied from the English press. It consels an imitation of its example in this respect, and especially advises the TIMES to "withdraw the name" of a particular person as its Editor,—and then, it thinks, "these offensive personalities will cease." The Independent seems to suppose that somebody's name is presented in the TIMES as its Editor. This is only another instance of the liability of that journal to write in utter ignorance of facts. The TIMES has never had anybody's name presented in its columns as its Editor. It has an Editor, who endeavors to prevent half-a-dozen articles appearing in its columns at the same time, each clashing with every other,—and judging from past experience the Independent might profitably imitate its example in this particular. But its course for years in regard to its Editorial department, has been, and still is, precisely that which is now so earnestly urged upon its adoption.

Public Opinion.

The London Times, in an article on the Clarendon and Dallas Treaty, recently said:

"It is singular that while in England public opinion becomes stronger every day, and no set of politicians dare even to be suspected of postponing the national good to their own, yet in America, a Democratic Republic, the professional politicians have things entirely their own way, and enjoy a latitude of factiousness unknown in these islands. Whether it be that politics are falling into the hands of a lower class, or whether the extent of the country and the diversity of interests and character between the several States be the cause of the phenomenon, certain it is that an enlightened public opinion, all-powerful in the direction of national affairs, seems hardly to exist across the Atlantic."

There is, unquestionably, too much truth in what our English cotemporary says of public opinion in this Country. That there is hardly such an element as public opinion manifested in the direction of our national affairs is very easily accounted for. We are not a homogeneous people, politically speaking; the affairs of the nation are directed, not by the representatives of the people, but by the representatives of a party, and our parties are becoming, unhappily, every day, more and more sectional. It is the public opinion of the South, or of the North, that influences the direction of our national affairs, and not the opinion of the people. Though our Government is a Republic, yet it is composed of the representatives of two separate people whose opinions are always in direct opposition. The present administration is the representative of the Southern slave-holding States, and the whole policy of the Government is made to conform to Southern interests. If Colonel FREMONT had been elected President instead of Mr. BUCHANAN, the case would have been reversed; the opinion of the North would have been the controlling element in his administration; but still the direction of affairs, so far as our intercourse with foreign governments is concerned, would not differ much, whether the North or the South were in the ascendency at Washington. It is in our domestic affairs that we need the influence of a powerful public opinion most; and where we feel the want of it most seriously, is precisely where it ought to be the most powerful.

In municipal matters we are not distracted by any sectional prejudices, traditions or policy; here we are a united people, having all the same objects in view, with very trifling differences of opinion as to the best means of obtaining them, and no constitutional laws to prevent the execution of whatever plans may be devised to secure the public good. In this City public sentiment is homogeneous, and public opinion ought to be all-powerful in influencing the action of the public servants. But it has no weight with them whatever. The men who are elected to look after the public interests are perfectly reckless of the wishes or opinions of their constituents. No attention whatever is paid to the desires of the people, and the Jack in office looks to nothing but his own personal profit and convenience. The people groan under the impositions of the city authorities; there has been a continued shriek of indignation arising from all classes, parties, and conditions of people during the past five years, against the wretched condition of the streets; yet the functionaries—whose business it is to attend to such matters; who have money, means and opportunities afforded to them to comply with the public demands—are as deaf to the loudly-expressed opinion of the people as the wooden Justice on the balcony of the City Hall.

We are not willing to confess that the indifference to public opinion, on the part of the administrators of public affairs, is the legitimate result of Democratic institutions; on the contrary, we believe that it is the inevitable consequence of a free representative system like ours, to give to public opinion greater influence than in any other form of government. But, for the present, we cannot deny that the practical working of our system, in this City at least, is not favorable to such a conclusion. But we are as yet in a transition state, and while we are perfecting the machinery of government some inconveniences and anomalies are unavoidable.

The New City Hall and Post-Office.

The bill creating a Board of Commissioners to superintend the erection of a new City Hall in the Park, which will be found in another part of our paper this morning, is more comprehensive in the powers it confers than we had supposed from the reports which have heretofore been published respecting it. The bill authorizes the City to borrow two millions of dollars for the purpose of erecting the building, and gives full power to the Commissioners named in the bill to select the designs, plans, to employ architects, and choose the materials of which the Hall shall be constructed; the only restriction imposed upon them is that they shall place the building "in the rear of the present City Hall bounded by Broadway, Chambers and Centre streets," and that before deciding upon a plan they "shall offer to the proper authorities of the United States Government," to conform any portion of the new City Hall for the purposes of a Post-Office, and the accommodation of the United States Courts, that the Government may require. The City is also authorized to sell to the United States any part of the Park that it may choose to purchase, for the purpose of erecting a Post-Office and United States Court-rooms. We can hardly doubt the readiness of the Government to avail itself of this offer.

As to the propriety, and, in fact, the necessity, of grouping all our great law Courts together in the same building, there can be no question. Whoever has had to transact any business with the officers of the United States Courts in this City must have experienced the great inconvenience and loss of time necessarily occasioned by running about from Dan to Beersheba in search of their rooms. The District Judge's chambers and the Marshal's office are in an old house down in College-place among the dry goods jobbers; the office of the District-Attorney is over a grocery in Beekman-street; and the United States Court-room is in the brown building in the Park, on Chambers-street. It will be a very great convenience to business men when all these offices, as well as all the offices of our City Government, and the various law Courts are all centred in one spot.

The Commissioners named in the bill are all gentlemen of respectability, who will doubtless discharge their duties in a conscientious manner; but a great responsibility rests upon them, for it is not merely the duty of economically expending two millions of dollars that they are charged with, but the selecting of the best design for a great civic monument which is to be the boast or the contempt of the people of this Metropolis for many generations to come. Of course there will be no undue haste in making such a selection, and the freest competition will be allowed to our architects in offering their designs.

The President of the United States is authorized by a law of the last Congress to purchase a site for a new City Post-Office at a cost not to exceed $500,000:—and by this bill the City Government has full authority to sell any part of the Park which the Government may desire to purchase for that purpose. It is scarcely possible that the Post-Office should be in the same building with the Law Courts—as the extensive and peculiar character of its business requires a large building devoted exclusively to its convenience. We trust the President will cause the lower angle of the Park to be carefully examined by practical and discreet men, with reference to its fitness as a site for the new Post-Office. We are confident that it will be found by far the best location on the Island. We have no doubt that it might be purchased for the sum which the President is authorized to pay.

Collisions at Sea—The Case of the "Lyonnais" before a French Tribunal.

We find in the French journals received by the last steamer, reports of a judicial investigation into the collision that occurred off our coast in November last, between the French steamship Lyonnais and the American bark Adriatic, which throws new light upon the causes of that dreadful disaster, and which, we are glad to see, exonerates Captain DURHAM of the Adriatic from the charges of recklessness and inhumanity that, at the time, were generally proffered by the American and English Press. The magnitude of this disaster, which is yet fresh in the public memory, the great number of lives lost by it, and the important questions involved in it, entitled it to an investigation before a judicial tribunal; an investigation which, probably, would never have been instituted in this country, where the public sensibility has been so thoroughly blunted by the frequency of shipwrecks and disasters, that even the wail from the steamship Arctic, as, with her precious freight, she reeled down into the depths of the ocean, could arouse it only for the passing moment.

For the investigation into the causes of the Lyonnais disaster, by the Tribunal of Commerce at Marseilles, we are indebted to the owners of that steamer, who, believing that the disaster was to be attributed entirely to the Adriatic, caught Capt. DURHAM at the French port of La Ciotat, where he had arrived with a cargo from Savannah, and made a claim of damages for the loss of their vessels. Captain DURHAM denied the claim and submitted it to the legal tribunal. The testimony taken before the tribunal gives the only correct history of the disaster, and materially differs from the statement made by LUGUIERE, the second officer of the Lyonnais, who escaped and landed at this port shortly after the event. It not only exonerates the American ship, but shows that the disaster was caused entirely by the reckless management of the steamer that was lost.

The collision between these vessels occurred on the 2d of November, 1856, about 11 o'clock of a hazy and starlit night, and at about seventy miles from New-York. The wind was southwest. The Adriatic was standing northwest by west, under double-reefed topsails, the topgallant sails furled, and showing no light. Capt. DURHAM and the watch were on deck. As soon as Capt. DURHAM saw the lights of the Lyonnais, which was about twenty minutes before the collision, he swung a lantern in his mizzen rigging, some fifteen feet above the deck, and kept on his course, having the right of way, steering close by the wind until the moment when the collision became imminent. The Lyonnais, when Capt. DURHAM caught sight of her, was steering east northeast, with all steam on, all sail set, and a full wind on the starboard tack. Capt. DEVAUX and his Second Officer LUQUIERE, were on deck, and two men were in the bow. The steamer did not see the Adriatic, and did not alter her course until a few moments before the collision; when she put her helm hard-a-starboard, blew her steam-whistle and, 'bonting to port, stood on to cross the bows of the Adriatic without slacking speed! At the same moment, Capt. DURHAM, perceiving that the steamer was altering her course and trying to cross his bow, put his helm hard-a-starboard, thus bringing his vessel up into the wind and checking her headway. It was during these manœuvres that the two ships came in contact—the bows of the Adriatic striking the Lyonnais heavily amidships. The Court, after a minute review of the testimony, decided that Capt. DURHAM was not to blame, and that the collision must be considered merely as an accidental occurrence, so far as he was concerned.

In regard to the complaint that the Adriatic left the place of disaster without offering any aid to the distressed steamer, it was proved that from the moment of the collision, the steamer continued her course at full speed, which led Capt. DURHAM, who had hove-to to repair his own damages, to suppose that the steamer had not suffered any serious injury. Indeed, the Captain of the steamer did not think that his own ship had been injured until some time after, when the water, pouring in at the fracture, revealed his dangerous situation. Then the Adriatic was so far astern and to windward, that the steamer's signals of distress could neither be seen or heard on board of her. The charge of inhumanity, as well as of culpable recklessness in navigation, may therefore be justly preferred against the French Captain, who was not only swift to run down the American bark, but appeared to be eager to get as far from her as possible after he had been in collision. Capt. DURHAM has suffered the odium of these charges until this investigation, which, we are gratified to see, has entirely removed them, and laid them upon those who were really responsible for this disaster—the navigators of the Lyonnais.

The facts elicited by this investigation show the necessity of some legislation which shall compel all navigators to sail with more caution. The recklessness with which ships carrying passengers are sailed now-a-days, especially on dark nights and in thick weather, is notorious, and has frequently been commented upon in the TIMES. Nearly every collision that occurs is, like that under consideration, the natural result of this recklessness. A sailing ship shows no light at sea, because the law does not compel it; and a steamer, relying upon the lights which the law compels it to display, keeps no suitable lookout for the vessel whose unseen and stealthy approach threatens a disastrous collision; a collision which, under the circumstances, becomes an unavoidable accident. The number of these collisions is increasing every year, with the growth of our commerce, and there will be no end to them until a law be enacted and enforced, compelling all sailing ships to display a bright and conspicuous light every night at sea, and all vessels, whether steamers or sailers, to keep a sharp lookout ahead.

FREE WOOL BENEFITING THE FARMERS.—During the tariff discussions of the last Congress, it was constantly affirmed, by those who opposed the reduction of the duty on imported wool, that free wool would ruin the American wool-grower; and that, should the proposed tariff be enacted, we might expect not only that domestic wool would be sold, this Spring, at prices lower than ever before, but that the competition of foreign wool in our markets would compel our farmers to sacrifice their flocks for the benefit of the woolen manufacturers; who, it was said, were the only parties to be benefited by a free trade in wool. This view of the subject was shown, by the TIMES, to be not only contrary to the experience of those countries in which foreign wool has long been imported free of duty, but to be unnatural; since an unrestricted trade in the raw material has always tended to increase its consumption by the manufacturer, and thus to create a steady and profitable demand for its production.

We are much gratified to observe that our opinions are now corroborated by facts. Though the new tariff, which admits all foreign wool, costing less than 20 cents per pound, free of duty, does not go into operation until the 1st of July next, our wool market already begins to feel its beneficial effects, and prices are now more steady than they have been for some time past. We noticed in the report of wool sales, a day or two since, 30,000 pounds of fleece at 50 to 60 cents, and 30,000 pounds of pulled at 42 to 47 cents, which are remunerative prices to the farmer, and afford him good encouragement to increase his flocks.

But, notwithstanding these encouraging signs in the market, we observe that the "protection" speculators are continuing their prophetic lamentations over the prospective ruins of the wool-grower. While bartering for the incoming clip of wool, they are busily endeavoring to make our farmers believe that the new Tariff will certainly reduce the price of domestic wool far below the present market rates. We caution our country friends against the plausible representations of these speculators. Their prophecies are not reliable; for there is every reason to believe that the prices of domestic wool will increase, rather than diminish, under the stimulus which the new Tariff will impart to the manufacturing industry of the country. The latest advices from Europe are favorable to high prices for wool. The London auction sales of Colonial wools, which commenced on the 26th of February last, have been firmly sustained at an advance, upon the sales in November last, of 2½d. to 3d. per pound in Australia, and 2d. to 2½d. per pound in Cape wools. As the stock of wool in the principal European markets is unusually light at the present time, a further advance in prices may be expected, which will of course benefit the wool-growers of this country. These facts, however, should not induce our farmers to hold back their wool crops, in the expectation of realizing exorbitant prices. They should only make them cautious about yielding to the persuasions of speculators and granting concessions which are unnecessary. If our farmers will read reliable newspapers attentively, they may always know what their wool is worth; and they will soon ascertain that the Tariff of 1857 is destined to operate as much to their advantage as to the advantage of any other industrial class of our community.

REMOVAL OF STEAMBOAT LANDINGS.—There is to be a very important meeting this evening, of the Committee of the Common Council on Wharves and Piers, to discuss the propriety of removing the landings of the Sound and Hudson River steamers up town. The location selected for the Hudson River boats is at the foot of Spring-street, and a location nearly opposite on the other side of the City is required for the Sound boats. The proposed change involves so many important interests, that we do not suppose it will be resolved on rashly. All the steamboat proprietors have been invited to be present at the discussion, but they are not the parties who are most interested in the change. The proprietors of the down-town hotels, the owners of warehouses, and the great commission houses doing business with the East and the West, are more likely to be affected by the change than the owners of the boats. It would greatly facilitate business, beyond a question, if there were two great steamboat landings on both sides of the City; and the commerce of the port has become so extensive as to render the passage of the great steamers through the East River, between Corlaer's Hook and the Battery, really dangerous to the immense fleet of sailing vessels and ferry-boats with which that strait is crowded. The great argument in favor of retaining the present landings is that by being so near together they greatly facilitate the transhipment of merchandise, great quantities of which are merely passed from boat to boat, or carried across the street to the warehouses that have been built near the landings expressly for storage. Much of this merchandise would have to be carted through the streets if the landings were changed, and the crowd and confusion of Broadway and the cross streets greatly increased in consequence. That the proposed change must inevitably be made, sooner or later, cannot be doubted; the only question is whether the present is the proper time for making it.

WHAT IS HIGH LIFE?—One of our exemplary cotemporaries the other day gave a long description, in the style of Jenkins of the Morning Post, of a wedding which recently "came off in High Life." We know what high life means in Europe, where there are privileged classes and constitutional aristocrats, but we must confess our ignorance of what constitutes high life in New-York. The coachman who described a "real lady" as a woman who wore feathers, had his own standard of gentility, and our Jenkinses may have an equally positive way of distinguishing high life from low life. A party that rides to church to be married, with bridemaids and bouquets, doubtless would be considered "high life," while one that went to the clergyman's, like Miss PETRONELLA BOWER and JOHN DEAN, and were married in the basement, would come under the head of low life. High life is a very equivocal term, and it would be immensely convenient if some standard could be determined upon, by which the public would at once know, when they see an announcement of an occurrence in high life, what sort of life it is that is indicated by that term.

STREET PAGEANTS.—We do not object to street shows, nor to street music, nor to anything else that tends to enliven our thoroughfares and make them more cheerful and attractive. But "business before pleasure" is a business community is a safe aphorism for week-day uses. The lower part of the City is devoted exclusively to the purposes of business; there are but few dwelling houses below Canal-street, and the occupants of the over-crowded buildings have no time to bestow upon the passing pageants which ever and anon flank past their doors; and an army with banners and brazen trumpets and kettle drums, coming down among the busy denizens of the lower Wards to make an idle parade, let it be ever so brilliant and terrible, is an absolute nuisance. Yesterday, at noon, the great turn-out of the Target Companies marched down Broadway, stopping omnibuses, impeding travel of all kinds, and then filed down through Beekman-street, causing an interruption of the business of the street for nearly an hour in the very busiest part of the day. Drays, wagons, omnibuses, carts, harrows, coaches and pedestrians were all brought to a dead stand-still while the army of target shooters were passing, and all work was suspended by the noise and music. It was a very grand turn-out, we do not doubt, and highly creditable to our citizen soldiery; but the parade might better have taken place in some of the wide streets up town, where it could have been seen to better advantage and been enjoyed by those who had leisure to bestow upon it. It would be a great benefit to the business community of all similar parades were to take place in the avenues, or at least not come below Canal-street.

MORE HONORS TO PRESIDENT PIERCE'S CABINET.—It must be mortifying to General PIERCE to hear of the honors paid to the members of his Cabinet on their return home to their constituents, while he is permitted to slip quietly back to his native hills without the least show of public welcome from his fellow-citizens. Yesterday CALEB CUSHING was received by the people of his native town like a victorious general returning to Rome with his trophies. In all the changes of his chameleon political career CALEB has always maintained his personal popularity among his own people. Even when they vote against him they give him unbounded proofs of their respect and affection for him personally, and feel proud of his successes. But General PIERCE does not appear to have been so fortunate, and his fellow-citizens resent his not having done more credit to the exalted office which he had the singular fortune to occupy. He is not the favorite son of New-Hampshire it is very clear. We learn from one of our cotemporaries that Mr. MARCY is to be complimented by the merchants of New-York with a service of silver, costing ten thousand dollars. General PIERCE's sole compliment has been the six pieces of silver sent to him by the City of Savannah.

HISTORICAL SOCIETIES.—The Historical Societies in the West are gaining ground, adding new treasures to their collections, and laying out enlarged plans of usefulness. The young State of Wisconsin, never backward in favoring the development of Wisconsin products, whether agricultural or literary, makes an annual appropriation in aid of her Historical Society. The Secretary of that body is a hard-working gentleman, who drives through the world in a hurry, labors much and collects assiduously, adoring autographs, hoarding relics, and traveling hundreds of miles up into the wilds of the State to get narratives of old battles from ancient Indians. By this gentleman's aid, and the State's assistance, the Wisconsin Society, which was nothing three years ago, is picking up a valuable library and choice collections. The Tennessee Society is asking like aid from the State, and seems to need it, its means being sadly crippled. That State is behind-hand in the matter of preserving her early records. The New-York Society will presently occupy their new building, and with their wide-awake Librarian, are doing well.

BOSTON NEWSPAPERS IN A VERY BAD WAY.—Our Boston neighbors have a hard time with their newspapers. The Traveller gorged itself with the Atlas and the Chronicle and Telegraph, and wiped them out of existence, and now the Times dies, absorbed into the Herald. Mr. GEORGE ROBERTS announces the death of the paper in its last number, issued yesterday, and gives public notice of its sale to the Herald, good-will, types and all. The Times was started in February, 1836, and was, consequently, twenty-one years old. The only dailies now left in Boston are the Traveller, Journal, Courier, Advertiser, Post, Transcript and Herald,—seven, in place of the ten which flourished when the year began.

Personal.

At a ball recently given at the Hotel de Ville, Paris, a group, among which was the Secretary of FERUK KHAN, were discussing the merits of the Euphrates Valley Railroad. "Your country," said a lady to the Secretary, "will then be very near to us." "Yes, if the project should be accomplished." "Do you doubt its accomplishment?" "The difficulties of execution are very great and numerous." "Certainly, but the English engineers will surmount them." "Oh!" replied the young Persian with an air of cunning, "there is one against which their science must fail; all these deserts are peopled with ostriches." "Well?" "Well, these birds, you know, digest iron; they will eat the road up!" General exclamation, in which the Persian was declared a spiritual farceur!

Miss ALICE MANN, a Chicago lady, and a candidate for histrionic honors, is creating a sensation in Mobile. At her benefit in that city, a fortnight ago, the stockholders of the theatre presented her a diamond ring, valued at $200, and the audience exerted itself to carpet the stage with flowers. The lady is a niece to HARRY PLACIDE.

Rev. Miss ANTOINETTE BROWN, Woman's Rights advocate and reformer, essayed to become a preacher, but after a few months trial, gives it up. Her church at South Butler, N. Y., has been dissolved, and the house closed.

The venerable Father O'NEIL, of Savannah, has met with a serious accident by being thrown from a carriage.

EMILE DE GIRARDIN, it is said, contemplates buying the monthly periodical, La Revue des Deux Mondes. The price is 600,000 francs.

The minds of Friends are disturbed by a vigorous dispute now going on between the Willmites and Gurneyites—two branches of the Orthodox section.

Amusements.

ITALIAN OPERA.—The third performance of the "Traviata," on Wednesday evening, attracted a slim attendance—numerically better than on the two previous occasions, but still quite bad. We are certain, however, that those who were present will influence others by their favorable report. The performance was in some respects the finest we have ever witnessed. Madame GASSANIGA proved herself unquestionably a great artist—faulty in vocalisation, but surpassingly grand in declamatory inspiration. She gives to music what it too often lacks—pure womanly pathos and intensity. As an actress, she is better than GRISI. With these characteristics, and a charming personal appearance, she is destined, we are sure, to create a profound impression on our musical public, if, indeed, we have one, which seems doubtful. At one time we fancied that the habitués of the Academy of Music were sincerely attached to art and disposed to support it. But we recognise but few of the old faces at Niblo's Garden. It is certain, therefore, that their affection was for the building, or (what is possible in this wicked world) their free admissions to the same. The Academy of Music, by the way, is being endued in a beautiful robe of white, to be in readiness like the wise virgins for the coming bridegroom—the gay and gallant ULLMANN. The painters are making it look very beautiful.

To night Mme. GAZZANIGA appears in "Il Trovatore." Let us hope that there will be a creditable attendance.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—The most perfect comedy performance of the day—the "Rivals," at this theatre—will be repeated to-night. We direct attention to the fact, assured that those who go to witness the play will thank us for so doing.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.—A very large class of juveniles will be delighted to hear that the famous RAVELS have consented to give four Saturday-afternoon performances at this popular place of amusement, commencing a week from Saturday next. They are wanted and will succeed.

NEW MUSIC.—Messrs. WM. HALL & Co. have favored us with copies of

1. Grand fantasie from "I Lombardi," by VERDI, for two performers, by W. V. WALLACE.

2 Grand fantasie brillanti, on themes from VERDI'S "Traviata," by the same composer.

The duet is a transcription from VIEUXTEMP'S celebrated solo, with orchestral accompaniments. It is arranged in a thoroughly musician like way, and will improve the taste as well as instruct the fingers of the performers. The two principal melodies, especially popular at the present time, are two of the best VERDI ever wrote. Suitable for moderate players.

The fantasie from the "Traviata," is by far the most effective yet made. Mr. WALLACE has a happy faculty of introducing the best piano effects in the simplest way, the result of a thorough knowledge of the natural position of the hands. In the present instance he has produced a work of great merit, needing only careful study to become a brilliant solo for the drawing-room. Suitable for advanced players.

Where the Anniversaries will be Held.

As the Broadway Tabernacle will not live to see another "Anniversary week," the religious and other Societies that usually have enjoyed its accommodations in May are busy looking up other quarters. The Presbyterian (O. S.) Missionary Society and the Sunday School Society will have their meetings in the Broome-street Presbyterian Church. The Home Missionary Society sermon will be preached in Dr. ADAMS' (Madison-avenue) Church. The American and Foreign Christian Union sermon, and the Seamen's Friends' Society's Anniversary will enjoy the Fourteenth-street Presbyterian Church—Dr. ASA D. SMITH'S.

The Female Guardian Society will have (Dr. GILLETT'S) Calvary Baptist Church. The Colored Girls' Institute Association, the Congregational Union, the Home Missionary, the Bible Society, and the A. B. C. F. M., will have the use of Dr. CHEEVER'S Church on Union-square. The Anti-Slavery meetings and the Congregational Collation will be attended in the City Assembly-rooms.

Closing of the Carlton House.

The guests of this hotel have been notified that the establishment will close on Monday next, when the building will be consigned to chaos preliminary to the erection of a new warehouse on its site. The Carlton has been occupied as a hotel for more than 19 years. It was first opened in 1838 by a Mr. MILFORD, who kept it only a few months, when it passed into the hands of Messrs. HODGES & BENSON, the former of whom is its present host. Mr. BENSON, who was formerly a steamboat captain on the North River, died abont ten years ago, and Mr. HODGES has conducted it since. CHARLES DICKENS "put up" at the Carlton House, it will be remembered, during his visit to this country, and from it strayed as far down as the Five Points.

Fatal Leap of an Insane Woman.

An inquest was held yesterday by Coroner GAMBLE, at the Bellevue Hospital, upon the body of MARY MALONEY, a native of Ireland, and aged 43 years, who came to her death the previous day from a fracture of the sternum and internal hemorrhage, the result of jumping from a fourth-story window of house No. 926 Second-avenue, on the 19th instant, while laboring under temporary aberration of mind. The deceased was a woman of very intemperate habits. She was married, had one child, but her husband had not lived with her lately on account of her dissipated conduct.

Juvenile Remains.

Health Warden HOVEY, in passing through portions of his Ward, at a very early hour yesterday morning, discovered at the corner of Bowery and Delancy-street, the body of a young child. The Warden placed it in charge of the Coroner. Coroner CONNERY, on examination, pronounced the remains to be that of a still-born male child.

The narrative on the state of religion showed an interesting progress in spiritual things during the past Winter.

The Presbytery licensed Mr. MARINUS WILLETT, a candidate under their charge, as a Minister of the Goepel.

YELLOW FEVER AT RIO.—A correspondent in Rio Janeiro, writing on the 15th of February, reports the weather as very warm, with yellow fever rather prevalent amongst the shipping. The deaths averaged ten a day on board of vessels, but the health of the city was good. Captain DEARBORN, of the American bark Fame, and Captain HOBSON, of the bark Wheatland, had died of the disease. The high export duty on coffee was complained of by the local press. Twenty thousand bags, mostly inferior, remained in first hands for shipment to the United States. Freights were low and scarce.

☞ THE ACCIDENT IN THE BALTIMORE BAY.—The vessel mentioned yesterday as having sunk in a gale, on the 15th inst., in the bay, near the mouth of Sassafras River, was the schooner Eliza Jane McGee, Captain WILSON, with a cargo of 125 tons of Cumberland coal, from Baltimore to Philadelphia. The Captain and crew were saved with nothing but the clothes they had on. They were lashed to the mast-heads until the next morning, when they were taken off and brought to Baltimore by one of Shrivers line of steamers. They have since gone on to Philadelphia to make arrangements to raise the vessel.—Baltimore Sun.

Ticket Swindling—How the Sale of California Tickets is Managed.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

I beg to refer to a communication in your issue of this morning, signed "Jonathan Harris" of Pekin, Ill.

I am well pleased at his statement, and your reports of cases of swindling in passage tickets, as I see they have more effect in warning passengers than my two years' advertising has had.

Your "John Chinaman" has a good opinion of his own shrewdness, and, doubtless, thinks that he has been] "peeking" about our crowded City to good effect, and that he will be the means of saving his fellow-countrymen from cruel frands. As he and I have the same object in view, I will not quarrel with him; but, as I have somewhat better opportunities to know "how it works," I wish to show him and you that articles written with a partial knowledge of all the facts only serve to throw our country friends into the hands of the sharpers.

It is my endeavor to so conduct the business of my office that intelligent men of business capacity will feel the fullest confidence in the integrity of all their transactions there, and that any apparent error will bear investigation. Dealing as we do with hundreds of ignorant and many dishonest parties, it can hardly be expected that we give universal satisfaction or never make mistakes. Any business man can see how absurd is the suspicion that our interest could tempt us to any collusion with outside operators. On the contrary we suffer as much loss and annoyance as our passengers do. It may be well for you to know that the Panama Railroad Company, the U. S. Mail Steamship Company and the Pacific Mail Steamship Company compose the "mail line" to California. Their united capital is twelve millions of dollars. Their respective Boards of Directors are composed of men of the highest standing in New-York. As the heaviest part of their cash receipts pass through my office, and the fixing of prices is entirely confided there, it is hardly to be supposed they would commit such important matters into the hands of clerks who could be suspected of any shade of dishonesty.

Each Company sends to my office the tickets for its part of the route, signed by its own officers, and numbered in rotation.

No ticket is issued until it is paid for, entered on the books, and the passenger's name inserted on the face of the steamer tickets.

Every day a responsible and authorized person receives the proceeds on behalf of the three Companies, and balances the sales-book wherein the tickets sold are entered in their numerical order.

That any tickets are given to runners in blank, or unless paid for by them, is wholly untrue.

In fact, they seldom buy until they have first sold and got the money and name of the passenger, when they apply for tickets to be issued in that name. We are common carriers, and must sell to any person who demands a ticket and tenders the money, and it is not our business to ask questions as to the private affairs of any applicant, whatever we may suspect. We take every pains to caution passengers, but with our "cautions" and directions to the office in their hands, they seem to prefer giving credence to the bogus men (who promise agreeably to their wishes) rather than believe us.

I estimate that about 150 passengers by every steamer are "taken in," and that one-third to one-half of that number have previously been in my office, and of course know well where it is, and what are the prices. These are the "smart men" who "know what" they are about. Fully convinced that all business in New York is a complicated piece of machinery contrived to entrap and fleece the country folks, they keep a sharp lookout to discover how the steamship company are "playing their game," intending when they do discover the "trick" to profit by it themselves, and leave the "greenhorns" to suffer. The bogus men take much pains to encourage such a state of mind, and if the "papers" who are thought "to know everything," and always speak the truth," will intimate that the public is not safe in the Company's office, they only "play into the hands" of the "outside offices. They take much pains to make the impressions that "they are in our employ," are "Branch offices," or that they buy at wholesale, at cheaper rates;" that the "Head Office must keep up its price, but the "Branch" will divide the profits, &c.

At the dépôts and wharves, runners professing to be in our employ distribute our "cautions" and furnish passengers with much valuable information and advice, so that when they find they have been duped, they are more ready to blame the "rascally company" than their own stupidity, for not following our advertisements. We do not employ any runners or any one ontside of my counter, and persons relying on anything but my advertisements must look to themselves. Like other merchants, we claim the right to fix and change our prices as we think our interest and the market will justify. But to prevent disappointment and distress we never advertise them. The case of Mr. RECTOR referred to, if true, is contrary to our practice, but as in this way we are subject to frequent imposition we try to have positive proof that the case is as represented—and possibly the evidence offered by a stranger was not satisfactory.

Respectfully, J. W. RAYMOND.

Cruel Treatment of Sailors—Arrest of the Officers—Statements of the Seamen.

A case of alleged cruel treatment of sailors, of peculiar interest, came to the knowledge of the United States Marshal yesterday, and soon afterwards the Captain and the first and second mates of the ship Cultivator, were arrested. The third mate escaped. The sailors bear unmistakable marks of abuse.

PATRICK MCCOY, an Irishman, 21 years of age, made the following statement;

I was first whipped about the 22d of March. I was down in the hold shifting passengers' boxes. There was one box which had been broken, and when I moved it, the lid bounced off. The second mate came down and ordered all the passengers on deck. The passenger that owned this box, said he would not go, but would stay and look to his box. The mate told him there was no fear for his box, and he said one of the sailors had broken it. The mate asked who it was, and he said it was me. Then he took me by the comforter I had on my neck, and hauled me up on deck, and locked me up in a water closet. Then he came in and said, "It was you who broke that box open;" and I says, No, sir, I did'nt break it open. He says "I'll whip you, you son of a b—h." Then he hauled off and struck me three times with his fist in my face; then took out steel knuckles and struck me on back of my head and cut me twice. [There is a sore on McCOY's head, which he says is the effect of these blows.]

He then locked me up in the water-closet and kept me there till half-past five the next morning, as near as I can recollect; it was between ten and twelve in the day time when I was locked up; during that time he did not give me anything to eat or to drink, and nobody came nigh me; my wound bled all over the closet; the next morning about five and half o'clock, the second mate took me out and put me to work on the windlass without anything to eat, and I didn't have anything till between seven and eight o'clock.

About fifteen days after this, I was watch on deck, and about 12 o'clock I came forward to get a drink of water. The men wanted to brace the yards forward, and the third mate came forward and found me in the forecastle; this was between 12 and 2 o'clock at night. As I was coming to the after house he struck me in the face and cut me, because I was forward. He then cut my head again with some sharp instrument, which seemed to be steel

About a week ago I was painting mastheads, coming in, and the second mate called me down from the loft between 5 and 6 o'clock in the evening. He ordered me to put away my paint pot and brushes. As I was coming forward he stood at the end of the forward house; he hauled out a "crown-cracker" and struck me over the head as I was coming forward. He never told me what it was for, but I suppose it was because he thought I hadn't painted enough. I ran forward on the topgallant forecastle and he followed me; then he bit me again with it and knocked me down senseless; he almost knocked me overboard; I don't know how many times he then struck me; when I could get up I came into the forecastle bleeding.

JOHN JOHNSON presents a frightful appearance. His hands and head are covered with bruises and sores, and he is so lame and stiff from constant beatings, as he alleges, by the officers, that he can scarcely walk. He gave the following statement: When we were about ten days out, the first mate came along as I was raising the fore-top stanchel, and called me a son of a b—h, and knocked me down with a belaying pin, and gave me a mauling with a belaying pin on deck; another time he knocked me down with a belaying pin, and cut my head; I don't know how many times I have been knocked down and mauled; my coat was almost cut off of me with a dirk.

WILLIAM SMITH, another of the sailors, interrupting, said:—"It was nothing but knock-down and knock-down and maul with that fellow. And none of the men couldn't look at one of them officers without getting knocked down. I have been eight years on the sea, and I never seen such rascality in my life."

WILLIAM THOMAS said:—"Two days before we came in, that is, on Saturday, the first mate ordered JOHN JOHNSON to be taken forward, to shave his whiskers, and disfigure him. I was ordered to get grease and slush him down till the mate shaved him. I dasn't do any other way, or have it done to me. Then he sent the boy Jim to get a bucket of tar. While I slushed him down with grease, the mate shaved all the whiskers off his left side and part off of his right, but left some on the right. He then ordered me to rub tar on the whiskers that was left, and I took and covered it over with tar. After that I was ordered to bring the carpenter up and serve him in the same way.—I am the only man that was not whipped. Just before we came in, I had a mallet in my hand, and the mate said: 'D—n you, you don't get off without a mark; I'll break your skull with that mallet.' But seven of us got into a boat and escaped, so that I made him lie."

WILLIAM CAAN and WILLIAM SMITH make similar statements of their experience. There are twenty-four sailors in all, and it is said that all of them will testify to abuse similar to that related.

MARINE MATTERS.

The following disclosures, which we are assured upon good authority are correct, exhibits a most astounding case of attempt at fraud upon the Underwriters at Lloyds; a timely exposure of the conspiracy defeated the plot.

ALLEGED COMMERCIAL FRAUD.

From the Colonial (Jamaica) Standard, Jan. 26.

Some time in the Autumn of last year an American vessel of about 800 tons burthen, arrived at Falmouth from the United States, consigned, we believe, to ——, of that port. The ——, it appears, had been originally a Bremen or Hamburg vessel, and under a different name had performed a trip to New-York, where she was surveyed, condemned, and sold as unseaworthy. She was bought, however, at a very small cost; some temporary repairs put upon her, and under the name of ——, dispatched to this island. The character of the vessel was perfectly well known to ——, who found it precisely the sort of craft best adapted to the venture on which they were about to coocign it. We shall not trace the operations of the firm during this period of the ship's presence in the port of Falmouth. Suffice it to say, that she cleared out with a cargo, principally logwood, there being, however, according to the Customs' records, some miscellaneous articles of island produce and a few bales of tobacco. The next intelligence received of the ship was that she had been lost somewhere near Behamas, and that the master and crew had arrived safely at New York. Meanwhile reports had begun to circulate privately that all was not right with the ——. It was said that she was notoriously unseaworthy, and that the Underwritors were to be in some measure victimized, although no one imagined the actual extent to which the ship was to be made subservient to the fraudulent views of those who had been commercially connected with her in this country. It is said that so great was the distrust in reference to the entire trauseaction generally felt in Falmouth, that the Underwriters at Lloyds were anonymously cautioned to be watchful of their risk, and to pay nothing in case of reported loss without inquiry.

The firm in Jamaica was composed of Mr. ——, resident at Falmouth, and of Mr. ——, in London; whilet the same individuals constituted a mercantile firm in London under the style of ——. It was at the instance of the latter firm that insurances were effected in London on the —— on her voyage to Europe, with the cargo shipped at Falmouth in this island. The insurances which were thus effected, exclusively of any insurance on the logwood, which formed the great body of the cargo, amounted within a trifle to £10,000.

The actual risks taken at Lloyd's on the cargo amounted to £9,880; but, as if this were insufficient, on the very day that the loss of the vessel and of such cargo as she actually carried became publicly known in London, the London house applied to the Underwriters to extend the risk £1,000; which, for good reasons at that time known to them, they peremptorily refused. Indeed, the suspicions previously entertained with respect to the good faith of the parties were so strongly confirmed by the loss of the vessel, that the Underwriters not only refused to make good the alleged loss, but resolved at once on dispatching a Commissioner to this island for the purpose of inquiring into the facts, and Captain ——, long known as a trader to this and other south-side ports, was selected for the performance of this delicate and important duty. What the results of his inquiries may have been, he have obviously no means of ascertaining. His report, as a matter of course, will be made only to those who commissioned him. From such sources, however, we have been enabled to acquire sufficient information, which enables us at once to designate this transaction as one of the most deeply-laid conspiracy and fraud. For instance, there were insured on the ship as part of her actual cargo 229 casks of ginger. Casks, as a matter of course, constitute an indefinite quantity. They may be hogsheads, tierces, or barrels. The quantity of ginger shipped was 65 barrels. There were 25 casks of arrowroot insured; the actual quantity shipped was one barrel. Insurance was effected on nine casks wax; there were actually shipped 8 cwt. Among the true and genuine cargo there were 34 bales of tobacco, which some time previously had been saved from a wreck and were purchased at a nominal value—it is said, 20s. per bale. The policy, however, comprehended 68 bales of tobacco, which were valued at upwards of £100. Fourteen puncheons, said to contain rum, appear by the Custom House records to have been shipped by the same vessel, 22 puncheons were insured at a value exceeding £25 per puncheon. We have given a statement of the insurances effected. We cannot do better than supply one of the actual cargo, as it is traced at the Customs and from the wharf books: "65 bales ginger, 1 barrel arrowroot, 8 cwt. beeswax, 34 bales tobacco, and 14 puncheons rum."

Contrasting the two statements, one arrives at the extent of the fraud contemplated. The 250 lbs. of Havana Segars, valued at £1,000; the cutlass-blades, preserved fruits, casks of wine and cases of champagne, bales of wool, packages of returned silks, valued at £2,200: pimento, coffee, turtle-shell and liqueurs, were pure fiction,—nothing of the kind existed. It was not a mere overvalue: it was a fictitious manifest, intended to secure to the Insurer, out of the pockets of the Underwriters, an enormous sum of money without any actual risk.

In a subsequent article, the Colonial Standard withdraws its allegation of the unseaworthiness of the ship, and says, so far from being overinsured, she was not insured to within £400 of her real value, and adds:

"It is stated that the Master received in New-York a sum of £300 sterling for his services in foundering the vessel, and as conclusive evidence of his participation in it, we may state that he wrote from Savanna la-Mar to the owners in New-York, expressing 'a hope that the vessel was fully insured.' The letter, which was sent by way of St. Thomas, only reached New-York some four or five days after the Captain had arrived there with the news of the vessel's wreck."

The accused parties have fled, it is reported, to Cuba.

The Greek Government had abolished the Quarantine regulations established by the Royal Ordinance of Aug. 12, 1853, together with the fifth article of the Sanitary regulations; by this action on the part of the Greek Government the Greek consular visé of bills of health for vessels coming from any port in the Ottoman Empire is no longer required, but simply a bill of health, or certificate from the Sanitary authorities of the place from which they come. The new regulation is considered as applying not only to vessels coming from any port in the Ottoman Empire, but from any other port.

The schooner Merchant, STONE, for Corsica, Africa, left this port to-day, and after proceeding some six miles outside of Sandy Hook, was overhauled by the steam-tug Satellite, having on board the United States Marshal's Deputies, who seized her as a slaver. She was towed back to the City, and now lies in Buttermilk Channel, under the guns of the United States Revenue Cutter.

BERLIN, MARYLAND, Tuesday, April 21.—The schooner Volant, Captain MOON, came ashore on this beach on the 19th, with an assorted cargo, bound to Norfolk; the vessel is full of water, and cargo all in a damaged state.

From New Mexico.

From the St. Louis Republican.

There was very considerable excitement in Santa Fe, growing out of a collision of the United States troops and a Mexican. A soldier was in the store of a citizen named GRUBER, an apothecary, and having some difficulty with him, he advanced on GRUBER with an iron cane. G. fired at, and wounded the soldier, who was carried off, and GRUBER gave himself up and was taken to jail. The soldier belonged to the Third Infantry, the members of which were much incensed. Capt. BROOKS gave strict orders to his men not to leave their quarters, but in the evening, in his absence, they rushed to the jail to kill GRUBER. When they effected an entrance they fired, without much reference to their position, some forty shots. One prisoner was killed instantly, two others were wounded, and GRUBER received five balls. GRUBER died next day, and was buried by the order of Odd Fellows. So soon as the conduct of the soldiers was known, the officers of the Regiment drew them off and ordered them to the barracks. GRUBER was a Mexican, and there was much excitement in the town against the soldiers, but it was subsiding. Some of the soldiers had been identified, and would be brought to trial for the offence.

A court-martial was being held in Santa Fe for the trial of chargee against Capt. GEORGE MCLEAN.

The Democratic Convention nominated JAS. L. COLLING, Esq., for Governor, and OTERO, late Delegate to Congress, for re-election.

No Indians were seen on the plains. The weather was very disagreeable.

THE FLORIDA WAR.—The Spring campaign is now fairly open; if the Seminoles are not subdued before the close, we have falsely estimated their powers of endurance.

Companies or detachments of regular soldiers are exploring the "Indian country." Here and there is discovered a trail, but as yet they have not succeeded in effecting anything of note, save that the Indians are kept on the alert to evade them, and per consequence, are being weakened daily.

On the 10th inst., the volunteer force is to commence a simultaneous movement, each company having a defined section of country to scout, furnished with wagons and supplies for about thirty days. This scout will cover all that section of country between the line of ports established for frontier protection, and Lake Okeechobee—the Istapoga country, the Kissimmee, the coast, &c., &c.

Never, in the history of Florida War No. 2, has so many troops been employed in scouting at one time, and great hope is entertained that the foe will be forrested ont and captured, or so harassed as to surrender and remove to the West.—Tampa Peninsular, April 4.

The number of the Episcopal clergy in this City has increased one hundred per cent. since 1842. There are now 86 ministers of that faith here.

Ward, the Wife Murderer—Curious Revelations.

We published a few days ago the confession of B. J. M. WARD, convicted at Toledo, OHIO, of the murder of his wife. Those who read the horrid account cannot fail to remember it. The Blade gives the following stories which have obtained currency in relation to the cold-blooded butcher:

A young man named HALL, who boarded with him, suddenly disappeared, and suspicions are entertained that WARD murdered him. Mrs. WARD became deranged soon after, and it is said that she often made dark and mysterious allusions to the circumstance in her ravings. We also find in the Plymouth papers a statement that a young man, now a resident near Shelby, but then in the employ of WARD as help, says, that some time previous to the murder of HALL, a peddlar stopped at WARD'S. He was on foot and carried his packs with him. Early in the evening WARD told the girl to go home as she would not be needed that night. She did so, and on returning next morning, asked where was the peddlar? WARD said he had gone long ago. The girl then started to go up stairs to make the beds, and was told by Mrs. W. that she need not make them; she proceeded up stairs and went into the room the peddlar had occupied, and was alarmed at the sight of blood upon the floor and upon the bed. She quickly descended the stairs, put on her bonnet and shawl, and left the premises. She told the story to her mother, but it was never divulged to any one until since WARD'S arrest for the murder of his wife at Sylvania, for fear of incurring the malignity of WARD, who, it seems, was feared and dreaded by all who knew him. The pedlar was never seen afterwards, and it was thought that his body was secreted in a cistern, which was subsequently filled by WARD.

TWO MEN HANGED BY MOBS IN IOWA.—On Saturday, the 11th inst., ELI GRIFFORD, a half breed, was hung by a mob in Jackson County, Iowa, for killing JOHN INGALLS. On the same day a mob at Bellevue, Iowa, forcibly entered the jail there, and taking a prisoner, charged him with murder and counterfeiting, and hung him. Great excitement prevails in the vicinity.

It appears that GRIFFORD, when he was forcibly seized by the mob, (who broke into the jail,) declared his innocence, but, when he found that they were determined upon hanging him, and there was no probability of escape, he made a clean breast of it, confessing that he shot INGALLS in the woods, where his body was found. The weapon used was the rifle, and he approached his victim from behind to within fifteen feet, and shot him in the head, the ball passing through and lodging against the skull over the left eye. He further stated that he was instigated to the murder, and paid for doing it by his uncle, a man named JARRETT, and another named DAVID MCDONALD, neighbors of INGALLS. GRIFFORD also confessed that he had attempted to kill two other persons in the same vicinity—one a man, at whom he shot three times, and the other a woman.

When told the fatal moment was approaching, he acknowledged the justice of his punishment, but said his "uncle ought to suffer also." From 300 to 500 persons witnessed the hanging. A prayer was offered up by a Methodist clergyman, Rev. Mr. BABCOCK, the guilty wretch kneeling and crossing himself, the surrounding crowd standing in respectful silence. When the last moment arrived, the leader of the party tied a handkerchief over the eyes of GRIFFORD, who remained standing, and twenty four men took hold of the rope together, suspending him in the air, about eight feet from the earth. As soon as the execution was over, two men were dispatched in pursuit of JARRETT, the uncle, and MCDONALD, his accomplice, and it is said to be the determination to hang them both if taken. GRIFFORD was a native of Missouri.

ARREST OF AN IMPORTANT WITNESS IN THE BURDELL MURDER CASE FOR ILLEGAL VOTING.—JOHN L. FARRELL, the man who swore before the Coroner's jury in New-York at the examination of the Burdell murder case that he sat upon BURDELL'S stoop adjusting his shoe when a man came to the door and ordered him off, was yesterday arrested in New-York by Officer KERP for illegal voting in the Eighth Ward last Fall, and this morning brought to this city. Soon after the election he was arrested and held to bail. He was subsequently indicted, but failing to appear, a bench warrant was issued, upon which he was arrested. While on his way up the river he told Officer KERP that he was advised by a well-known citizen of that Ward to run away. We state this fact simply for the purpose of proving that "all that glitters is not gold;" and that those who pretend to be more honest than others need as much watching as those they speak ill of. This FARRELL is an important witness for the people in the Burdell murder case, if his testimony can be relied upon. But we learn from Officer KERP that the District Attorney of New-York indorsed the bench warrant for his arrest, and made no objection to his being brought to this city.—Albany Journal, Thursday.

REASSESSMENT IN VIRGINIA.—The result of the reassessment of the lands of the commonwealth has been ascertained, and is given by the Richmond Examiner. The assessment of 1850 made the aggregate value of the real estate of Virginia $274,690,236. The assessment of 1856 makes this value $373,424,095, and shows an increase of $98,743,869. The Dispatch says the real value of the lands of the State is nearer $450,000,000 than $375,000,000.

NEW-YORK CITY.

There shall be no more Shad.

Buy a shad to-day, reader, at any price, for hereafter we reckon they will be scarce. Of the Port Bill, passed by the late Legislature, the 12th section reads as follows:

"It shall not be lawful, except in cases now provided by law, for any person to erect, or drive in the soil under water in the harbor of New-York, any poles for the purpose of fishing, where the water is of greater depth than six feet at mean low tide, under the penalty of $5 for each pole erected or driven contrary to the provisions of this section; and it shall be the duty of the said Commissioners to cause the same to be removed."

The Commissioners of Pilots are made, by the same Port Bill, Commissioners of this act; and they, we understand, are going to work at once to put section 12 into operation. Of course, then, the shad-poles in the North River are to come up at once! Hundreds of jolly fishermen will go without a job, hundreds who now stand in the fish-markets, or go blowing tin-horns through the streets, crying "Shad-oh," will be hushed, and we, the people, must turn to porgies, black-fish, flounders, or go abroad for our shad. It seems as if the millennium ought to hurry up, or it will meet an injunction before it sets foot this way, for prices of every thing we buy go up perpetually, and of all we have to sell go down. Our oysters, they say, are to be poisoned by yellow-fever, if Quarantine goes below; our meats already scarcely weigh down their value in the precious metals, and now the shad-poles are to come up. Save our harbor at all events, but may the "Shad-oh," of the fish-peddlers never be less in the streets.

Post-Office Dispatch.

The Washington Star says that "the last quarter's returns of the New-York City Post-Office, making more than a cart load of papers, reached the Department on the 4th inst., the quarter ending on the 31st ult. The law allows ten days for their receipt here. By the 18th they were duly examined, verified, stated, and the general account based on them was sent back to the Postmaster there. On the 21st inst., his acknowledgment of the correctness of the Department's adjustment reached the Auditor for the Post-Office Department. The gross postages, for delivery and distribution at that office, in that quarter, were $433,880 69.

Police Candidates.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

In your paper of to-day my name is mentioned as a candidate for a position under the Board of Police Commissioners. Permit me to say that the statement is not correct. I am not, nor is it my intention to be, a candidate for any office or position.

GUY R. PELTON.

NEW-YORK, Thursday, April 23, 1857.

Police.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

SIR: I notice in your paper of yesterday that I am set down as a candidate for Chief Clark of the new Board of Police Commissioners. Please do me tha jus tice to say that I am not a candidate for that office having some time ago expressly stated to the Commissioners that I did not wish to be named in connection with any office in their gift. Wishing the new Commission an early and successful administration,

I am, Sir, yours, &c., F. J. OTTARSON.

MUNICIPAL.

Board of Aldermen.

The Board met yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock —Aldermen CLANCY in the Chair.

Several petitions were received and referred of individuals for the remission of taxes and assessments.

REPORT CONCERNING THE NEW CHARTER.

The following report of the Special Committee on the subject of a new charter, was presented and read:

The Special Committee of the Board of Aldermen, appointed by a resolution of the Board of Aldermen to proceed to Albany and lay before the Legislature the draft of an amended charter for the City of New-York, approved by the Common Council, respectfully submit the following report:

The Committee proceeded to the city of Albany in accordance with their instructions, and presented themselves before the Assembly Committee on Cities and Villages, for the purpose of making known the wishes of the City of New-York. Your Committee was then and there informed that said Committee on Cities and Villages had already in their possession an amended charter for the City of New-York, and said Committee received, but took no notice in any way, of the papers presented by your Committee. This gross insult to the people of New-York through their representatives, developed to your Committee the real designs of these men, and they therefore felt it due to themselves that they should hold no more official intercourse with said Committee; nevertheless, the chairman of your Committee sought to obtain from a member of the Committee on Cities and Villages (Mr. Pomeroy,) some information with regard to the source from whence was obtained the draft of an amended charter which was in the hands of said Committee. In answer to a question to that effect, said Pomeroy stated that the bill was handed to him in his seat and he declined to state the source from whence it came, yet this Committee did report a bill thus obtained to the Legislature and recommended that it become a law. If there can be found in the whole history of legislation a more reckless transaction, your Committee are at a loss where to look for it. In a subsequent conversation with the said member of the Committee, (Pomeroy,) and while remonstrating against such high-handed legislation your Committee were informed by said Pomeroy that the matter had been decided upon in a Republican caucus, and that the bill would positively become a law. Said Pomeroy stated, at the same time, that the said Republican Party was a new party, that it had no patronage in the General Government, and must make places for its friends!! Thus acknowledging in the most unblushing manner the iniquitous designs of these conspirators against order and good government. This same Pomeroy had the baseness afterwards to deny upon the floor of the House the words by which he had committed himself and his party. It is not the purpose of the Committee to enter at this time upon a discussion as to the legality of these measures which reckless partisans have attempted to foist upon the people of this City. Their sole design is to lay before this Board a report of their action under tha instructions which they received. The proper steps have already been taken to test the constitutionality of these acts, and the Committee rely with confidence upon the result. They know that the people will reject with scorn and indignation this attempt upon their rights by the enactment of laws not asked for by them, but conceived and carried through the Legislature by a few designing men, among them some whose previous attempts at fraud upon the ballot box had met with the infamy they deserved, and who had secured the coöperation of well-known political intriguers at Albany. The sole intent and purpose of those laws is to annul the will of the majority of the citizens of New-York. It remains for the Courts to determine whether they are or are not constitutional, and it remains for the people to determine whether they will or will not submit to them. It would appear strange that representatives from one section of the State, owing their position to the simple will of the majority, should thus defy the expressed will of the majority of another section, were it not for the notorious character of the men by whom they are controlled. It is well known that there exists in this State an organization of men who, for a series of years, have been banded together by bonds of a common infamy for the purpose of obtaining place and power, assuming by turns various names for the purpose of deceiving the people as to the real character of their organization.

They have succeeded in a few instances, in times of political excitement, and under false cries of reform, in obtaining power, for brief periods only, to be hurled indignantly from their places by reaction of feeling when their real motives were discovered. Having at length exhausted every other name which could deceive the people, and finding their party despised in every section of the country, they at length assumed the sacred name of Freedom, and under a mock sympathy for a race which they, of all others, despise as their inferiors, they basely announced themselves as the sole exponents of Liberty, and by the most unblushing falsehoods, the most incendiary appeals, and a lavish expenditure of money, they boldly attempted, by coöperating with all the elements of disunion and disaffection which existed in various portions of the country, to obtain possession of the general Government; purchasing or stultifying the press of the rural districts, and abandoning the larger cities where their falsehoods and baseness would be exposed, they confined their incendiary harangues to the interior of the State; and not until after the result of the late election was made known, was it conceived how adroitly they had laid their plans. The patriotism of the Union triumphed, they were defeated in their real designs, but they succeeded in returning to the Legislature from the interior counties the most shameless set of political hacks who have ever disgraced the numerous parties to which they had in turn belonged, but which in turn they had traitorously betrayed. A list of their names with the various schemes of public plunder with which they have been connected would be a sufficient history of these men. Their familiarity with legislation had taught them the power of a majority, and they had sought an opportunity to exercise it. Having already exhausted the Treasury of the State and plunged it into an enormous and inextricable indebtedness they turned their venal eyes towards this devoted City. Here was wealth in abundance from which to fill the pockets of these unscrupulous leaders. Here too was the citadel of a Union-loving Democracy, here the tide of fanaticism and corruption had been stayed. Here their base designs had been checked. Here their vile falsehoods exposed. Hence revenge and cupidity joined their foul hands and united in enacting these most infamous laws which we are now called upon to submit to. Nine offices of every description have been created, with large, extravagant salaries, and filled with shameless partisans intrusted with the disbursement of millions wrung from the tax payers of the City—and having power to create a mercenary force of police by which they hope to override and overawe the free expression of our will. No man can read these laws and mistake their purport. They might run through Cain's vocabulary in blood, for they may not be executed without it. And we now call upon the people to prepare for the issue!

"We may suffer, but we shall not suffer long:
We may suffer—but we will not suffer wrong."

All of which is respectfully submitted.

PETER MONEGHAN,
MORGAN L. HARRIS.

The report was ordered to be printed.

WHY THE COMPTROLLER'S WARRANTS HAVE NOT BEEN PAID.

The following communication was received from the City Chamberlain, in reply to a resolution calling on him to explain why warrants drawn on the Treasury have not been paid:

CHAMBERLAIN'S OFFICE, SHOE AND LEATHER BANK, NEW YORK, April 23, 1857.

To the Honorable the Board of Aldermen of the City of New-York:

GENTS.—In compliance with a resolution of your Board, passed the 20th inst., "requiring the City Chamberlain to report his reasons for refusing to pay the City warrants lately drawn on him, with a general statement of the amount of funds in his possession to the credit of the several City accounts," &c.

I beg to report that the City funds are kept by the Chamberlain under two heads: one the City Treasury account, and the other the account with the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund.

On the 11th of March last the City Treasury had to its credit one million two hundred and ten thousand four hundred dollars; on the 12th of March, the next day, the account was overdrawn two hundred and thirty-six thousand eight hundred dollars. This overdraft continued to increase daily until the 17th of April, when the City Treasury was overdrawn one million one hundred and thirty-two thousand six hundred dollars, ($1,132,600.)

In addition, the Shoe and Leather Bank has taken from the Comptroller, on its own account, revenue bonds for three hundred thousand dollars, ($300,000,) making a total overdraft of the City Treasury account, including bonds held by the bank, $1,432,600.

On the 17th day of April the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund had to their credit eight hundred and eighty-three thousand one hundred dollars, ($883,100.)

Leaving a net overdraft over and above all accounts, City Treasury and Sinking Fund, of five hundred and forty-nine thousand five hundred dollars ($549,500.)

I beg further to state that the total amount of checks that have been refused payment are about two hundred thousand dollars, which amount would have been paid by the Chamberlain, in addition to the overdraft above-mentioned, if he had been assured that that amount would have been the extent of the overdraft, or would have saved the City warrants going to protest.

I would also advise the Board that revenue bonds are now being issued, bearing an interest of seven per cent., which, being a very desirable investment, will, undoubtedly, in a few days, replenish the City Treasury, when all demands will be met.

(Signed) A. V. STOUT, Chamberlain.

Alderman BLUNT moved that the communication be referred to the Committee on Finances.

Alderman MOSPEDON remarked that the banks in which the City deposits were formerly placed always advanced enough to meet all drafts presented; but there never had been so large an over-draft as at present. The fact was, the City credit has suffered much of late, and that is chiefly the reason it is so difficult to raise money at the usual rate of interest. He remembered when all the funds desired could be had from 4½ to 6 per cent.

Alderman BLUNT stated that there was an unusual number of claims pressing upon the Treasury for payment: the new Reservoir, the Central Park and other large expenditures had aided in making the City short. He deprecated the practice of paying contractors for work before the assessments are collected; it was not so formerly.

Alderman TUCKER took exception to the giving out that the City is bankrupt, which report will go forth on the wings of the wind, to the great detriment of its credit. The Treasury is not bankrupt; it has merely suspended payment.

Alderman FULMER alluded to the assessment business, and said that there were revenue bonds issued, in anticipation of assessments, and now lying back, to an amount that, in a few days, when they are made public, will startle the community. He recommended the repeal of the ordinance requiring money to be paid on contracts, before the assessments are collected.

Alderman CLANCY admitted that there was an extraordinary pressure on the City Treasury, on account of the Central Park and other improvements, but he claimed that there was some fault in the matter. He charged that the Comptroller's Department was conducted in a loose and irregular manner. Mr. FLAGG, he said, was recently urged by the Managers of Savings Banks, and others, to put up the interest on Revenue Bonds to 7 per cent., and then refused. Since then he has been compelled to advance the rate to 7.

The communication was referred to the Finance Committee.

On motion the Board then adjourned to Monday at the usual hour.

Board of Councilmen.

The Board of Councilmen met on Thursday. The President J. N. PHILLIPS, Esq., in the Chair.

After the reading of several petitions a resolution was submitted that the Clerk of the Board be authorized to advertise the meetings of the Standing and Special Committees of the Board in the Daily TIMES, News, Tribune, Sun, and Herald. The resolution was adopted without discussion.

A resolution, submitted by Councilman OTTARSON, for the revision of the Rules by a Committee to be appointed for that purpose, so as to cause them to be conformable to the new Charter, was laid on the table.

A report of the Committee on Fire Department was accepted; and a resolution to make the Post-office bell, a district bell, was adopted.

THE VALIDITY OF THE POLICE BILL.

Councilman BOOLE moved to take from the table the resolution relative to the validity of the new Police Bill. Delay arose in consequence of the original document not being forthcoming. Councilman BOOLE, for that reason, would have withdrawn the motion, but Councilman HASWELL objected. Some confusion arose in consequence of the impossibility of determining whether the board could proceed. Several members spoke. At last, a copy, certified by the Clerk of the Board of Aldermen, was produced.

The President, in answer to a question, stated that the resolution involved no expenditure, but only the protection of property.

Councilman OTTARSON said, that for the Board to come in at the third hour when an injunction was already issued, was quite unnecessary and highly improper; the Board had the assurance of the Mayor that he would disobey the law. One member of the Police Commission would not go with him. If the majority of the Council choose needlessly to show their teeth, they might do so; but he would advise the measure to be laid on the table.

Councilman WARNER said resistance to law was the very principle of action of those with whom the last speaker uniformly acted. He (the speaker) did not want to resist, but to contest the law, to ascertain its sense in Courts of law.

Councilman OTTARSON said there was great excitement a few years ago among the Democratic party in reference to a certain measure, but the times are changed,—laws are passed by a different party. He would return the same doctrine to his opponents they had so loudly advocated, namely—that they should obey the law until it was constitutionally changed.

On vote—32 affirmative, 14 in the negative—the Board concurred with the action of the Board of Aldermen.

The Board then went into Committee on the regular calender, and a number of resolutions were passed to a third reading.

Among the matters which came before the Committee was a resolution appropriating $5,000 for the celebration of the Fourth of July.

The report of the Special Committee on organizing the various bureaux under the new charter, was made the special order for the next meeting, directly after the presentation of petitions and resolutions.

The Board, on the rising of the Committee of the Whole, adjourned.

Board of Supervisors.

The Board met yesterday at 4 o'clock, Supervisor CLANCY in the Chair.

The only business transacted was the reception and reference to the Committee on Annual Taxes, of a communication from the Commissioners of Taxes and Assessments, requesting the Board to furnish additional room in connection with their office for the Assessors, who by a late act have been attached to the department of Taxes and Assessments.

The Board adjourned to meet on Monday next at 4 o'clock.

Special Partners.

The following law, which is interesting and important to a very large class of our business community is among those enacted at the late session of the Legislature:—

AN ACT to amend the revised statutes in relation to limited partnerships.

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SEC. 1. Section three, article one, title one, chapter four, part second of the Revised Statutes, is hereby amended, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 3. The general partners only shall be authorized to transact business for the partnership, except as provided in section seventeen, and no special partner shall be authorized to sign for the partnership, or to bind the same.

SEC. 2. Section twelve of said article is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

SEC. 12. Every alteration which shall be made in the names of the partners, in the nature of the business, or in the capital or shares thereof, or in any other matter specified in the original certificate, and the death of any partner, whether general or special, shall be deemed a dissolution of the partnership, and every such partnership, which shall in any manner be carried on after such alteration shall have been made, or such death shall have occurred, shall be deemed a general partnership in respect to all business transacted after such alteration or death, unless renewed as a special partnership, according to the provision of the last section.

SEC. 9. Section seventeen of said article is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

SEC. 17. A special partner may, from time to time, examine into the state and progress of the partnership concerns, and may advise as to their management; he may also loan money to, and advance and pay money for the partnership, and may take and hold the notes, drafts, acceptances and bonds of, or belonging to the partnership, as security for the re-payment of such moneys and interest, and may use and lend his name and credit as security for the partnership, in any business thereof, and shall have the same rights and remedies in these respects as any other creditor might have. He may also negotiate sales, purchases, and other business for the partnership, but no business so negociated shall be binding upon the partnership until approved by a general partner. Excepting as herein mentioned, he shall not transact any business on account of the partnership, nor be employed for the purpose, as agent, attorney or otherwise. If he shall interfere contrary to these provisions he shall be deemed a general partner.

SEC. 4. Section twenty-three of said article is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

SEC. 23. In case of the insolvency or bankruptcy of the partnership, no special partner shall, except for claims contracted pursuant to section seventeen, under any circumstances, be allowed to claim as a creditor, until all the claims of all the other creditors of the partnership shall be satisfied.

SEC. 5. This act shall take effect immediately, and shall apply as well to such partnerships existing at the time of the passage thereof, as to those thereafter formed.

The New City Hall Bill.

The following is the Act, passed April 17, authorizing the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New-York to erect a new City Hall, to raise money to loan, and to appoint Commissioners for that purpose:

The People of the State of New-York represented in Senate and Assembly do enact as follows:

SEC. 1. Richard M. Blatchford, Gustavus A. Conover, Robert Emmet, Edwin D. Morgan, Henry Evesson, are hereby appointed Commissioners of the new City Hall in the City of New-York, and all vacancies which may occur among the said Commissioners shall be filled by the Common Council.

SEC. 2. It shall be the duty of the said Commissioners to direct and superintend the erection of a new City Hall in the City of New-York, upon that portion of the Park lying on the rear of the present City Hall, bounded by Broadway, Chambers and Centre streets, or so much thereof as may be found necessary.

SEC. 3. The said Commissioners shall have power to decide upon the plans and specifications, to advertise for and receive proposals, to make contracts and to do all and everything necessary to the building and completion of the same under the provisions of this Act. But before deciding on any plans or specifications it shall be their duty to offer to the proper authorities of the United States Government to conform any portion of the interior plans of said building to the purpose of a Post-office, and the accommodations of the Courts of the United States, and to convey to the United States Government the portions of ground covered by said building so occupied. And the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New York are hereby authorized and empowered to make conveyance by deed of grant or lease of any portion of the Park to the Government of the United States, for the erection, at the expense of the said Government, of such building for the purposes of a Post Office, or accommodation for the Courts of the United States, held in said City, and for the officers attached to said Courts, upon being duly compensated for the same; and in case of such conveyance by the City, the jurisdiction of the State of New-York over said ground shall be hereby released to the Government of the United States for such purposes, reserving, however, to the State of New-York concurrent jurisdiction relative to all civic and criminal processes.

SEC. 4. The said Commissioners shall have full power to employ architects, engineers, superintendents, clerks, and such other necessary assistants as may be required for the construction of the said City Hall, the compensation of such architects, engineers, superintendents, clerks and assistants, to be fixed by the Commissioners, by and with the consent of the Common Council. The said Commissioners shall receive as compensation not exceeding five dollars per day, for each day's actual attendance on their duties, to be certified to the Comptroller under oath.

SEC. 5. The provisions of all acts applicable to contracts of the said Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty requiring appropriations of money to fulfill the same, are hereby declared applicable to the contracts to be made by the said Commissioners so far as the same are not inconsistent with this Act. The contracts entered into by the said Commissioners on behalf of the said Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty shall be filed in the office of the Comptroller within ten days after the same shall be executed.

SEC. 6. The said Commissioners shall keep full minutes of their proceedings, which shall be filed in the office of the Clerk of the Common Council of the City of New York within ninety days after the said new City Hall shall be fully completed.

SEC. 7. It shall be lawful for the said Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty to raise by law, from time to time and in such amounts as they may think fit, a sum not exceeding two millions of dollars by the creation of a public stock to be called "New City Hall stock of the City of New York," which shall be redeemable in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five, out of the Sinking Fund of the said City of New-York, and shall bear an interest not exceeding six per cent. per annum.

SEC. 8. It shall be lawful for the said Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty to determine what shall be the nominal amount or value of each share of the said stock and of what number of shares the same shall consist; and the Commissioners are hereby authorized to sell and dispose of such shares at public auction, and to issue certificates therefor on such terms as they shall think proper, provided that the stock shall not be sold at less than its par value.

SEC. 9. The provisions of the act entitled "an act to regulate the finances of the City of New-York," passed June 8, 1812, which are not repugnant to or incompatible with any provisions in this act contained, shall apply to said stock.

SEC. 10. It shall be lawful for the Supervisors of the City and County of New-York, to order and cause to be raised by tax on all property subject to taxation within said City and County, in addition to the ordinary taxes yearly, and every year a sum of money sufficient to pay the interest annually accruing on said stock.

SEC. 11. The moneys to be raised by virtue of this act shall be applied to the erection and completion of a new City Hall in said City of New-York; and to no other purpose whatsoever.

SEC. 12. The Commissioners appointed under this act shall not be directly or indirectly interested in the plans and specifications for said building, or in any contract for work to be done or materials to be furnished therefor; and said Commissioners, or either of them, for every violation of the provisions of this act, may be removed by the Mayor by and with the approval of the Board of Alderman.

SEC. 13. This act shall take effect immediately.

Almost Successful.

On Wednesday night last, the Fourth District Police, Brooklyn, picked up a man in the street, named DANIEL CORBOY, stupid from the effects of narcotic poison. It seems that he had been drinking laudanum, undoubtedly with the intention of taking his own life, and was placed in charge of Dr. RHODES, to be pumped out, which operation saved his life.

Kings County Hospital.

During the past week 88 patients were admitted at this Hospital; 40 were discharged, and six died, viz.: Robert Larkin, aged 37; Sarah C. Sharp, aged 55; Charles Crozier, aged 35; James Moran, aged 47; Wm. Flood, aged 30; Heinrich Wirth, aged 18.

Dismissal.

The Board of Superintendents of the Poor for Kings County, at a meeting held on Wednesday, passed a resolution dismissing Dr. BAISELY, Keeper of the Lunatic Asylum, to take effect on the 10th of May. No cause is assigned for the removal.

☞ A dead infant was picked up in Washington Park, Brooklyn, yesterday morning. This is so common an occurrence that but little attention is paid to such subjects now by the authorities.

The highest premium paid was $600, and the lowest $10—the average being nearly $193 per pew. Several pews were rented for a year, at from $1 to $10. The whole sale comprised about one-fourth of the house, and neted $6,644.

NATIONAL ELOQUENCE.

SPEECH OF HON. CALEB CUSHING IN MASSACHUSETTS.

The Policy of Manifest Destiny and Indefinite Expansion.

Definition and Vindication of Filibusterism.

AN ELOQUENT SPEECH.

Hon. CALEB CUSHING had a very enthusiastic reception from his friends and fellow-citizens of Newburyport, Mass., on his return on Thursday last. Hon. ISAAC DAVENPORT presided over the meeting, and made a brief speech highly complimentary to Mr. CUSHING, rapidly rehearsing his public services in the various offices he has filled, and awarding him the highest praise for the "talent, energy and sound judgment which he has always displayed in the various positions he has been called to occupy."

After this address,

Mr. CUSHING rose, and, after receiving three enthusiastic cheers, proceeded to speak as follows:

FELLOW CITIZENS, I greet you, one and all, with emotions of heartfelt and sincere affection and respect. You have wished that my return hither, after an absence of few years of political functions, should be public, in the assembled people's presence; and it was your right so to determine; for you have been, for me, through the successive stages of a not uneventful life, well-wishers always, candid judges of opinion and of action even where we differed, and zealous friends in many a crisis of popular commotion and contention.—In a word, the kind home-companions of my childhood, youthhood and manhood. Invitation from you has the needful force of command to be obeyed in grateful gratitude, and of summons to the enjoyment of exquisite gratification. I now, therefore, epjoin among you, to reciprocate your friendly salutations, to renew suspended associations, and thus again to become a resident citizen of Newburyport. Standing here on this familiar spot, with all these well-known faces before me, and in the sight of old homestead objects, it seems to me that our natal earth is a part of our intellectual and moral being; that though we be not visibly attached to it, still the roots of our beasts penetrate unseen down deep into it, and thus, even while far away, we continue like the fast oak itself, to draw nourishment and vigor from the same fresh breezes, and bright skies, and fair hill-sides, and clear streams, where life began; and that, roam over the world as we will, mysterious ties of birthplace remain strong upon us,—tendencies of local attraction as fixed as in the load-stone,—instincts of reminiscence which carry back to early scenes the mounting spirit, as irresistibly, as unerringly as the carrier-pigeon flies over land and sea to its lost home. One feels this, in whatever distant countries a truant temper may place him; he feels it still more when, as now, after long absence, he comes to retread the paths of youth, and to bathe anew, as it were, in the sunlight of other days, and finds himself reanimated by it, and fortified for the further trials of life, like the pilgrims to the fountain of juvescence, or the wrestling titan, as he regained his mother earth. I do not say that such local attachments are always well placed. They are not. They are sentiments, not reasonings—impressions on the mind rather than external facts—or, in so far as fact, they are not the result of the action of circumstances on the mental and physical constitution. But where, in the broad limits of the Union, shall we find a lovelier region than this, our valley of the Merrimac, beginning with its gelid founts in the lof y gorges of the White Mountains, traversing the beautiful lakes of Winnipisaogee, flowing on free waterfall to waterfall amid all the riches of nature and of industry, and coming to pour forth its accumulated volume of waters here into the outspread bosom of the great Atlantic? And is there not that in it which breeds true men and women—as the hardy fruit of the teeming loins of pure and good mothers—statesmen, soldiers, orators, poets, inventors—apt for both arms and arts—masters of circumstance alike on earth or ocean—with heads of wit to conceive and will to act, such as the service of nations requires. We will cherish the fertile valley of the Merrimac.

Magna parens virûm,
Magna frugum.

It is the object of no misplaced affection. It merits our attachment, as well for what it is in all nature's gifts, as for the strong-minded and strong-handed race of men, which it has produced or sustained. Of the living, it were invidious to speak; but of the dead, names of sons of Massachusetts and New-Hampshire spontaneously rise to the memory,—familiar on our lips as household words, enrolled for immortality in the brightest pages of the annals of the republic. I tender to you my warmest thanks then, that here you welcome me back to the lap of my own mother earth, in the midst of kindred loved and friends cherished, here to rest from cares of State, and to bait as it were on the wearisome journey of life. I am well content that it should be so. Men seek or take power, in obedience to the instincts of our nature as imperious as hunger and thirst. The pursuit of fame, of participation in great concerns,—the endeavor to win distinction, to set on the minds of our fellow men—the hope that our names will be honored in life and live after us,—all these are outbursts of the ethereal spirit within us,—yearnings of immortality,—which, if in excess sometimes, are not the less the potential impulses to the performance of noble and virtuous deeds. Without power to do good, we cannot do it, and the possession of power in the first and the necessary step to larger social usefulness. The speaker, the writer, the poet,—he who propagates thought or passion from the pulpit, the forum, the tribune, the press, or the teacher's chair,—he who commands armies, leads senates, rules cabinets, or administers Government,—he who invents or discovers,—he who conducts great enterprises of commerce or manufactures,—to all those it has become apparent that the mono is a light which gives no light unless it may manifest its capabilities in words or acts,—that is, it attains a position in which to operate, which constitutes practical power. But with the power to do, come the responsibility and the solicitude which attend it,—the malice of interests shocked, of aspirations crossed, and of rivalries excited; in a word, the disenchantments of power. We find its advantages and its disadvantages, its allurements and its repulsions, so nicely balanced, that we take it up with less and less of eagerness, and lay it down with more and more of calmness, at each alternate change in the vicissitudes of any the most prosperous public career. Such, at least, are my own reflection and observation. I will not disturb the confidence of this grateful occasion by discussion of any subject of controversy. I return into the State of Massachusetts to resume my place in the ranks, with no resentments to prosecute, no rancors to indulge, no importunate remembrances of injury or disappointment.

CHANGE OF PARTIES AND OF PARTY POSITIONS.

It is said that some not over-amiable persons reproach me with want of unbroken continuity of party relation, which is odd enough, in view of all the chasses croisez steps of party in our day, with few eminently conspicuous public men who have stood in one and the same attitude all their lives. It is said also that other hypercritical persons impute to me tolerance for men of different shades of opinion regarding the political theories of the moment. Be it so. On the high road of public life are strewn broadcast the miserable fragments of party doctrines, shattered by over-strain, like the dead mules and broken-down wagons in the track of an advancing or retreating army. Theorems of mathematical precision are good in books of geometry, but not in the conduct of great affairs. Men of action are masters, not the slaves, of doctrine. What the world needs, demands, and will have, is more of practical statesmanship, and less of bigoted exclusiveness of doctrines. It would be quite easy to illustrate the unreasonableness of this idolatry of party symbols, and the folly of intolerance regarding it, by examples drawn from the current political creeds of the day. I prefer to select examples from the history of obsolete controversies, in which they abound. Thus, the United States Bank was opposed, and its destruction made the symbol of orthodoxy, on the part of the same political school by which it was created and established. That was a change in twenty years. Again, the present system of keeping and disbursing the public funds, which has its excellences and its defects, was first introduced in Congress and unanimously voted for by the Whig Party, and unanimously opposed by the Democratic Party; and afterwards the same system was unanimously opposed by the Whig Party, and supported by the Democratic Party, and by it carried into practical operation. That was a change of less than eight years. Again, the moral obligation and the expediency of the perpetuation and extension of a statute line of demarcation between the free labor and slave labor territories, was for a long time advocated by one political school, and opposed by another, consequently to which the latter school took up the moral obligation of that statute line, when it was abandoned by the former; and between them both it became so discredited as at length to be pronounced unconstitutional and null and void from the beginning, by decision of the Supreme Court. That was a change of only four years, and may suffice to show the fallacy of theoretical dogmatism in the business of the Federal Government. I might give numerous equally striking examples from the political history of individual states. Thus, in the State of Massachusetts, at one time, the dominant thought was opposition to associations of men by confidential engagements, and at another time such associations filled and ruled the Commonwealth. So in the State of New-York, men's minds have scarcely calmed down from zealous advocacy and relentless adoption of a system of stern prohibition and confiscation of all spirituous drinks, when that system is abandoned, and return is made to the old one of licenses and excises, which existed before anything was heard of the peculiar laws of Maine. I think, if the history of parties in this country were sedulously scrutinized, it would be found that the sin, such as it is, of some of those to whom change of opinion is attributed, consists either in that they had not changed so late or not so early as their accusers did; or looking tolerantly on while others changed, had not changed at all themselves, but stood still for the world to come back to them, and then resumed their place in column. In a word, he, to whom it never happened to think or know something to-day which he did not know or think yesterday, must have been born omniscient by infallible, or has not yet advanced from the innocent simplicity and petulant selfishness of infancy. I am not so humble as to admit that my condition is the latter, nor so presumptive as to pretend that it is the former, of the opposite categories.

THE MISSION OF THE UNITED STATES.

But let that pass. It is the felicitous condition of the United States to possess a constitution of government which consists of stipulations of compact as the rule of action, not of party platforms nor political dogmas. Thus it is that under the protecting shade of the Constitution thought is free, and opinions rise and fall, and parties come and go, transitory and erratic as meteors or comets in the middle sky, while far above shine fixedly in the steady lustre of their glorious effulgence the bright stars of Union. We, the people of the United States, have a predestined fate before us, plain to be seen, according to my thought, as if inscribed on the adamantine leaves of time with a pencil of fire. Nay, it is a providential mission assigned to us by the visible outstretched finger of God. I know it is not uncommon for men to speak irreverently on the one hand, or slightingly on the other, of the destinies or the mission of the United States. Let us pause here a few minutes. It was my fortune, not many years ago, to traverse the Pacific Ocean in its widest expanse from the Continent of Asia to that of America. We launched forth upon it in our frail bark as COLUMBUS did on the Atlantic, with nothing save it, not to speak of man's presence, in that great world of sea and of sky. It may have been that some solitary, daring hunter of the seas, from New-Bedford or Nantucket, chased the whale in the distant bays of Kamtschatka or the Aleutian Islands, or that some Russian coasted along the Straits of Behring from the Asiatic to the American Siberia; but otherwise, from the Sandwich Islands, beneath the Tropic of Cancer, to the ice-bound foundations of the Polar North, we alone were out on that immense ocean. No, I forget. There might have been a stray ship from Boston or Salem, painfully collecting a cargo of hides in San Francisco or San Diego, or other from our city, with perhaps your present Mayor and others of your immediate fellow-citizens on board, planting our country's standard on the banks of the Columbia; for, be it remembered, Oregon was originally colonized by men of Newburyport. But no longer were the great galleons of Spain to be seen there, transporting the wealth of Mexico to China. It was a desert waste of water, as if awaiting the winged messenger of the ark to fly forth upon it, and seek a new resting place for the feet of another Noah. While navigating that waste of water—while sailing by its almost unison shirable shores, the thought came to me—how should it not? Are all the invaluable riches of those vast regions of earth never to profit man? Is that vast ocean to continue thus barren of use, with no white canvas of the mariner, no steamship, with its cloud by day and its pillar of fire by night, to plow the deep and breast the rolling waves, bearing the freight and wealth of the Western to the Eastern Indies. Time—and how brief a time!—has answered this question. The opulent State of California has grown up there, as it were, in a day—giving and receiving treasury of wealth, and assuming its proud place in the galaxy of the Union. A second State, Oregon, is about to take on the robes of sovereignty as a coequal member of the confederation of States. A third, Washington, perpetuating the name of the father of his country in that ultima thule of America, will not be content to remain long without its full enjoyment of constitutional rights, and its due representation in the Senate of the United States. And that so recently unoccupied ocean of the North Pacific—how buoyantly does it now bear upon its swelling waves those noble fleets of clipper ships of Newburyport and of East Boston, by the side of which the galleons of Acapulco and Manila were but unsightly hulks, and which are freighted with wealth such as a poet never dreamed of to fill the great argosies of Genoa and of Venice! Who, in so brief a time, wrought all these wonders? Was it the work of legions of fabulous giants, marshalled to their stupendous task by the miraculous charm of the ring of Solomon, each as we read of in the picturesque legends of Arabia? He who saw it as it was ten years ago, and sees it as it is now, might well conceive that nothing short of supernatural power could have produced the marvelous change. It is miraculous, it is supernatural—not a miracle of demon-slaves driven under the lash of some magician taskmaster; but the miracle of American courage, American genius, and American virtue, working out our country's great destinies, under the preordained impulsion of Almighty God. It was my fortune, at another time, to stand on the summit of the lofty ridge of land which divides the sources of the Mississippi from those of Lakes Superior, Huron, Erie, and Ontario, having on my right hand the waters of that mighty river, which drains, and as it flows on to the Gulf of Mexico, fertilizes the largest and the richest valley of inclinable land on the face of the earth; and, on my left hand, that unique succession of great rivers and lakes,—the river, alternately expanding into magnificent fresh-water seas, and the seas narrowing again into beautiful rivers; and so, through forest and meadow, and over cataracts and rapids, rolling on with lavish profusion a thousand miles to the far off Gulf of St. Lawrence. Such was the stand point of view. Before, behind, all around me, were noble forests of oak and pine and maple and elm, earth-born giants of the primeval world; and beyond them, stretching far away to the uttermost bounds of the horizon, verdant savannahs in all the luxuriance of nature's virginal unstinted prodigality, sublimely immense as an ocean, lovely as a dream of Paradise. Streamlets and lakes were sparkling amid the trees in the sunlight, like diamonds and sapphires scattered over the rich tresses of some fair maiden as she steps in the pride of her beauty and her youth. All that magnificent scene, however, was but a wilderness, where the Indian still roamed at will in his native forests, or paddled his light canoe on river and lake; and where no sign of cultivation, no mark of civilization, was to be seen, save in the glorious banner of the stripes and stars floating over some military station or outpost, to be witness of the omnipresent power of the Union. Here, again, the thought came to me,—can it be that all this wealth of land and sea is to remain lost to the uses of human greatness and happiness? It half tempted one to impeach the divine justice, to reflect that millions and millions of men were at that hour stifling for want of space in the crowded countries of Europe,—"cabined, cribbed, confined," in narrow lanes, where industry had no field to work in, and ambition was devouring its own heart for want of scope and object; and wives and children were pining away on the crusts of destitution and misery,—whilst here was earth enough to be the seat of imperial dominion, squandered apparently on a handful of untamed and untamable Indians. But impious would have been such a thought,—the foolish impiety of man's improvidence and ignorance. God's wisdom is not our wisdom. He had his own great purposes to work out in his own good time, and with the instruments of his own election. For now, there also American activity, industry, enterprise, have been exerted; and yellow harvest fields on the prairie, busy mills at the waterfall, populous communities by the riverside, have transfigured the face of the desert; and another powerful State (Minnesota) has arisen there to add to the greatness of the American Union.

THE MISSION OF THE AMERICAN REPUBLIC TO CONQUER THE CONTINENT.

Is not that manifest destiny? Is not that a providential mission? Is not that one of the steps in the "march, march, march" of the Union which, when suggested by me, on a former occasion, as what the Union had perforce to do, was taken to be the personation of some awful monster shaking forth pestilence and death from its horrid hair! Ay, in this pioneer colony of Massachusetts, doubled with Plymouth, on the very rock of Plymouth itself, where a free compact of self government first found a footstand on earth, and from which point, together with the coeval starting point of Jamestown, there moved the two parallel columns of emigration which commenced America's march—at that very place, a good and honored friend of mine felt called upon to protest against my suggestion of the onward "march, march, march" of the advancing hosts of civilization, liberty and power which follow the westward flight of the eagle of the Union. I stand to my thought. I reiterate it. I stick to the purpose which brought my forefather, JOHN CUSHING, from Hingham in England to Hingham in Massachusetts. I say that every ship-load of colonists which came in the beginning to Virginia and to Massachusetts, and each one of us their descendants, who are but moving on with an acceleration of the original impetus which they gave us, and every ship load of colonists from Ireland and Germany, all and each one of us are but the humble ministers of God, appointed to occupy, to cultivate and to civilize America. It is oppression seeking to be freedom. It is went demanding to be want no longer. It is the strong man without air and without room, and determined to have them, or at least to die gallantly in the struggle for them. It is the irrepressible expension of over-compressed human energies. It is the exodus of the nations. It is the outpouring of the too full blood of the old world into the all capacious veins of the new world. It is the foundation in America of Republican empires to outcount in numbers and outvie in strength the parent States of Europe. I say that is the work appointed of God for us to do, and, with the blessing of God upon us, that work we will do. If rivers run across our path, we will bridge them; if mountains rise up to stop us, we will tunnel them; if deserts appear, we will reclaim and cultivate them; if oceans intervene, we will navigate them, to which last end, so long as there's an oak left on earth, gallant ships shall continue to be launched into the waters of this our Merrimac. No material obstacle can arrest our progress. We woo this fair nature which lies before us, and we woo it as its conqueror, like the vikings of the old time winning their brides of the sea in open combat. I say this in the same confidence of conviction as one who, seeing the sun set forth from the portals of the East, may speak of its onward course to the West. For time was when the United States were but weak little Colonies of England, scattered along the seashore. Then they overflowed the Alleghanies into the valley of the Mississippi. Next they absorbed the vast domain of France from Lake Superior all around to the Gulf of Mexico, and Westward to Oregon. Next they possessed themselves of the two Floridas, and then of Texas. And finally they have marched on through New-Mexico into remote California. But in our conquest of nature with our stalwart arms, and with our dauntless hearts to back them, it happens that men, nations, races, may, must, will, perish before us. That is inevitable. There can be no change for the better save at the expense of that which is—one generation gives place to another. Out of decay springs fresh life. The tribes of Indians who hunted over the land, without occupying it, retire before us like the hunted deer and the buffalo themselves,—deeper and deeper into the innermost recesses of the Continent. And the Hispano Mexicans, wasting away by apparent incapacity of self-government, are suffering one province after another of theirs to relapse into pristine desolation, and thus to become prepared to receive the people and the laws of the United States. All that is now history. Yet, wise men saw long before that so it was to be. From the present they inferred the future, and spoke of it with the positiveness and precision of inspired prophecy.

HISTORICAL ILLUSTRATIONS.

Of this a most remarkable proof is to be found in the secret memoir, but recently published, which the Count of ARANDA confidentially addressed to his sovereign, CHARLES III. of Spain, on occasion of signing, in 1783, the treaties acknowledging the independence of the United States.

"I have just concluded and signed," he says, "a treaty of peace with England, and this negociation has left in my mind a painful sentiment. We have recognized the independence of the English Colonies, and thus is me a subject of grief and of dread. France has few possessions in America; but she ought to have remembered that Spain, her intimate ally, has many, which now remain exposed to terrible convulsions. I will not stop to examine the opinion of statesmen, as well countrymen as foreigners, who agree with me in estimation of the intrinsic difficulty of preserving our domination in America. Without entering into those considerations, it suffices merely to speak of the perils with which we are menaced, on the side of the new power just created in a part of the earth where no other power exists capable of withstanding its progress. This new federal republic has come into being by gigantic steps, so to speak, and in order to attain its independence has needed the support and the forces of two great powers, France and Spain. The day is at hand when in those regions it will be a giant—a terrible Colossus. Once it will forget the benefits which it has received from us, and will think only of its aggrandisement. The liberty of conscience—the facility of establishing new populations in immense territories, and the peculiar advantages held forth by the new Government, will attract thither cultivators and artisans of all nations, since men rush in pursuit of fortune; and thus, in a few years, we shall witness with sorrow the menacing existence of the anticipated Colossus. The first step of this power, when it shall have grown to strength, will be to possess itself of the Floridas, in order to command the Gulf of Mexico. After having thus interposed itself in the way of our commerce with New Spain, it will aspire to conquer that great empire, which it will not be possible to defend against a formidable power, established on the same continent, and, what is more, contemnious with it. These apprehensions are well founded, and cannot fail to be realized within a few years unless, indeed, before then, revolutions still more disastrous should break forth in our America."

Is not that remarkable? The Count of ARANDA saw the white cloud in the sky; when it was no bigger than a man's head, he knew that a tempest was wrapped up in its folds; and he sought to ward off the imminent peril by constituting the Spanish colonies at once into semi-independent monarchies, governed by various Spanish Princes under CHARLES as Emperor of Spain and the Indies, the latter retaining the immediate government only of the islands of Cuba and Puerto Rico. If those provident counsels had prevailed, twenty years of revolution and of civil war would have been spared to Spanish, as by timely application of the same policy they have been to Portuguese, America. Just so it was that, thirty years previously, THOMAS POWNALL, the Royal Governor of Massachusetts, sought to anticipate the independence of the thirteen British colonies, by raising them to the condition of federal members of a great British union, a grand marine dominion, as he terms it—so as to bestride the Atlantic, with one foot of the Colossus resting on Europe and the other on America. If the far-reaching views of either THOMAS POWNALL or the Count of ARANDA had been adopted, how different would be our present condition! But the wisdom of kings is nothingness and vanity, when weighed in the balance against the purposes of Providence. The Count of ARANDA well knew that the results which he apprehended in regard to the Floridas and New-Spain were still more certain as to Louisiana. The annexation of that province to the United States was not, as too many suppose it to have been, a mere Democratic ambition of the times of THOMAS JEFFERSON. There is a memorable letter, addressed, years before that, by ALEXANDER HAMILTON to HARRISON GRAY OTIS, in which HAMILTON strongly expresses the longings after Louisiana entertained by the men of WASHINGTON's particular school, and avows the conviction that the possession of it is indispensable to the continuance of the Union. He did but see and feel as to Louisiana what, in similar circumstances, others, at a later day, distinctly saw and felt as to Texas, and be it now declared, as to California also, the necessary companion of Oregon.

WALKER AND AARON BURR REPUDIATED.

I pray you not to misunderstand me. I reprobate, not war itself, but all irregular enterprises of war. I hold that the great issues of peace belong to the sovereign power of the Union, and should not be wantonly usurped by individual rashness. I glory in the acts, which it has fallen to me to perform, towards the repression of all such undertakings in the United States, whether on the part of a presumptuous British Minister, recruiting troops within our jurisdiction for the purpose of warfare in the Crimea, or of a reckless American adventurer, recruiting them for the purpose of plunder and murder in Nicaragua. No, let not the small man, WALKER, be honored for this, on account of which the great man, BURR, was damned.

Non tali auxilio, nec defensoribus istis,
Tempus eget.

The United States require no such instruments to help them forward to the consummation of their destinies in America. On the contrary, they impede us, just as WALKER, without capacity or power of possible good in himself, has only served to obstruct national purposes in Mexico, in Nicaragua, in all Spanish America. And such things tend to discredit us also. Thus far, if there be, in all the annals of time, a case of a mighty nation steadily advancing to its zenith in the shining light of untarnished honor, it is these United States. So mote it be—noblesse oblige. Independence of England, with our limits of original dominion intact, we achieved bravely on the field of battle, in righteous war, with Bunker Hill at the beginning of the contest, and at the close of it Saratoga and Yorktown. Our succeeding great step was Louisiana, and that came to us by the spontaneous act of our oldest—and may she never cease to be our constant—ally and friend,—generous and glorious France. Followed by the Floridas, not extorted by us from Spain, but ceded to us by her, as JOHN QUINCY ADAMS once, with his forcible eloquence, explained in my hearing—ceded to us in fair exchange for our own province of Texas. That again returned to us of its own free will, after having been raised, through the gallantry of her sons, with HUNTER and RUCK at their head, to independence of Mexico, by the same identical right that Mexico was independent of Spain. And now California is ours, which we acquired in just war, and might have kept by the just right of war, but disdained to do so, choosing rather to hold it by the tenure of cession and of contract, with contribution of ample indemnity therefor to Mexico. I say, all that is a record of which any nation might, with good cause, be proud; and so may it be continued on hereafter in the same bright line of glory and of justice to the end!

AN APPEAL TO MASSACHUSETTS TO ABANDON ALL SMALLER ISSUES AND JOIN THE PARTY OF MANIFEST DESTINY.

But enough. I am trespassing on your indulgent attention, and hasten without further extending these remarks to the moral, which, in my judgment, they suggest to us of the State of Massachusetts.

My friends, we thus perceive, on review of the history of our country, from the days of Jamestown and Plymouth down to this hour—for the history of the Union does not begin at the revolution—we perceive that one great providential event occupies it permanently, to wit: the population and cultivation of North America under the auspices of English representative institutions, and by means of the overflow of the crowded, oppressed and discontented millions of Europe. That is the railroad track on which the cars of British America have been running for two centuries, dashing on, and smashing and crashing over everything which stood in the way of its mighty momentum, irresistible since it was the will of God. To the simple unity, the absolute continuous identity of this great event, there has been but one exception, the separation of Canada, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, from the Thirteen Colonies. In their endeavor to unite all British America under one Government, the founders of the American Republic failed; but the failure was in appearance rather than reality, for the same race, the same mind, the same law, the same political institutions, and the same public and private interests, control and direct the fortunes of the severed parts of British America; their progress and its results are in substance the same, and recent treaty arrangements of reciprocal intercourse have associated them in a commercial union, which, aided by geographical facts, will terminate in their association by political union, England knows this. She is gradually relaxing her hold on America. It would have been better for her to do this at the revolution; for, by relinquishing America, she gained, or will gain, Asia. To her, the two things have almost the intimate connection of cause and effect. Instructed by the past, and let me add, with nobler thoughts on the subject than heretofore, she now sees and admits this, in her present attitude toward us. Henceforth, then, America is ours, to work out in it the eternal decrees of Providence. Men of Massachusetts, have you at all times thoroughly appreciated, and strenuously coöperated to advance these great purposes of Providence? Have you? I might say—yes, you have in act, but not always in thought. You planted self government in America, the moment you touched its shores. Then you mistakenly strove awhile to establish here an exclusive theocracy; but in this you failed because it was incompatible with the one great preordained event. You yielded at length, and conceded to others that religious liberty which you had previously claimed for yourselves alone. You pursued the thoughts of independence to the day of the revolution, embodying that idea in the framework of a confederation of republics. You clearly perceived, and frankly, earnestly, powerfully contributed, with Virginia, to develop the great territorial capacities of the northwest. But were you equally clear-sighted in regard to the not less important southwest? Did you in feeling support Virginia there? Did you not struggle to prevent the acquisition of Louisiana, the acquisition of Florida, the acquisition of Texas, the acquisition of California? Was not the Union, as our fathers conceived it, thus completed in spite of you? And yet, who profited first, who profited next, who profited constantly, by each of these great stages of the great event? Was it not you, the men of Massachusetts, with your ships, your manufactures, your mechanic arts, and your intelligence? Nay, did you not unconsciously, and as it were in spite of yourselves, potentially contribute, with might and with will, as Massachusetts does whenever she acts, to the consummation of the great event, by pouring your capital, your industry, your inventive genius, and your men, into each one of the successive territorial accessions to the Union. You did; you could not help doing it; you are strong and self-willed, but the great event was stronger and more wilful than you; and it snatched you up out of the depths of unseen hole opposition to it, absorbed you into its vortex, and when there, as with your virtues and your lights you deserve to be, you became the most efficacious element of its further progress.

Why is it so? Why is it, that for so many years Massachusetts has perseveringly opposed whatever is, and persistently eschewed to prevent whatever is to be? I look around in my native State, and seeing it as it is crammed full with intelligence and accomplishment of the highest order in all the possibilities of life, I ask myself if she be not,—and if she be not, why she is not,—the head, the brains the thought, the soul of the American Union? It is not that the men of Massachusetts, with admitted high intelligence, lack courage. Quite as often as otherwise, they have this in excess, plunging into the strife as if they could master it, and occasionally manifesting somewhat of that hardihood of unreason, which plants the butting bull in front of the locomotive machine's full career. Nor is it because of interested views on the part of Massachusetts. She is singularly disinterested—governed by ideas rather than by mere interests. She manifests this, even in her political aberrations. She opposes all policies of the federal government, sometimes merely because they are such. Thus, at one period, with DANIEL WEBSTER in the State Department, EDWARD EVERETT, Minister to England, ISAAC C. BATES and RUFUS CHOATE in the Senate, and a delegation composed of such men as JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, LEVERETT SALTONSTALL, NATHAN APPLETON, ROBERT C. WINTHROP, and GEORGE N. BRIGGS, in the House, Massachusetts had, or might have had, her own way, in all things reasonable; and yet she pulled the building down about her head, out of imaginary devotion to the United States Bank. Why need she trouble herself as to that? "What is Hecuba to her, or she to Hecuba?" Could it advantage Boston to have all the banking capital of the country revolve around Philadelphia? Or was it important to Boston, whether any little surplus of public treasure on hand was or was not used as banking capital? Yet on such an issue opposition Massachusetts would have—opposition to her own men, nay, to her own man of men; just as, in the same train of incidents, on the question whether daily postage should be paid in silver or in bank-paper, there was another transient agony, at least in Boston. Why is it, again let me ask, that Massachusetts has not, instead of opposing always, rather assumed her post, in conscious right of intelligence and courage, proudly in that van of the march of the Union? Why linger in the rear always to pull back, to criticise, to complain of the Federal Government? I cannot say why it is—I see how it is. She permits herself to be preoccupied with some secondary incident of the great event, and works herself into rage on that, until she has lost all thought and care of the great event itself, and of the part which in it she might and should play. At the present time, when human wit is at the maximum of creative and productive action—when the steamship, the railway, and the electric telegraph, marvels though they be, are but faint signs of the progress around us—when earth and sky, air and sea, and all which in them is, animate or inanimate, partakes of the great movement, and are instinct with its spirits—at such a time the public mind of Massachusetts stands still, and grows passionate over some minor question. And so it is that while we sit by the wayside, angrily discussing the mugwumps difficulties, of hours of idleness, the world is rushing silently by, leaving us in the lurch. Must it be so forever? Will Massachusetts choose always to be the drag or break on the wheels, and never the motive power itself? Will she constantly struggle to clog the march of the great event? If she reflect, she will see that it is her own event, it is her very self, that she is vainly striving to stop. I repeat, that from Jamestown on the one hand, and from Plymouth on the other, issued the first two parallel streams of emigration and of political and social influence, flowing one to the southwest and the other to the northwest, which streams, in their westward progress, are the history, the life, the soul, the predestined great event of America. You may guide, or at any rate go with the fatal movement. But you cannot stop it; nay, whether you will or not, you are in it and of it, and must move on with its motion, either leading or led—for if not leading, you will be led—in the conduct of the nation. Men of Massachusetts, I exhort you to "leave all meaner things to low ambition," and raise yourselves into your appropriate sphere. I entreat, I implore you, to abandon all thought of holding in those viewless coursers of the winds, which, with stretched muscles and snorting nostrils, are hurrying us on to greatness; to discard the vain wish to check the course of the gallant ship of our destiny, which, with all sails set from deck to truck, and with favoring breezes to fill them, is wafted across the subject main, laden with the last and best hopes of mankind;—to cease from the pious endeavor to stop the fiery wheels of that chariot of the sun, which careers along the starry field of the Union, from the dawning of the Orient up and over the empyrean heights of our actual power, on the uttermost regions of the Occident.

Mr. President: I have to entreat your pardon and the indulgence of my fellow-citizens, and of the gentlemen here, that I have ventured to occupy their attention for a moment with other things than mere expressions of my heartfelt gratitude for this scene. I can but renew them from the bottom of my heart, as I do. [Applause, long continued.]

The Independent and the Herald.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

The Independent, it seems, recognizes the Herald as part and parcel of the reputable press of New-York. You are, therefore, lectured for not employing dainty terms in exposing its rascalities. In plain English, your religious neighbor thinks the Herald entitled to the same moral weight in its aggressive and libelous career upon property, credit, and character, as any other journal, pursuing the opposite or more decent course.

Very well. Let us see how this might be made to work with the Independent people, if the Herald battery of daily defamation should be turned in that direction. Their interests are understood to be varied, and their credit in public estimation of first importance—at least to themselves. They may not own or direct Railroads. But we find in the Independent a Dry Goods department, and a financial column. The one may be in charge of a Merchant; the other of a Bank director,—just as a leading column is supposed to be in charge of a Clergyman. Could either of these interests stand the calumnious insinuations and direct libels of the Herald as many weeks as the Railroads have stood them months, without ruin to credit and peace of mind to all concerned, if, like the Independent people, the whole world believed the authority of the Herald reputable? The defamatory course of the paper is notoriously capricious. To day, Railway credit is impeached. To morrow, the Banks are attacked. The next day Mercantile solvency impugned. These things have been and will be again in its reckless columns. And if the Herald be the reputable print the Independent would make it, it need only point suspicion to any firm of Jobbers in Broadway, and ring the changes on a wild expansion and worse collections, coupled with a word or two of the "explosion" which is sure to astonish the holders of their paper in Wall-street, and the work of defamation is complete.

Fortunately, not one fifth the people who read the Herald have the slightest respect for its opinions or confidence in its assaults upon all that is dear to character and credit. With the great body of the public it is simply and undisguisedly a mendacious flash newspaper. That it stands otherwise with the Independent people almost surpasses belief. W.

AUDITOR'S OFFICE, City Hall,
BROOKLYN, Friday, April 24, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

SIR: I see in your issue of this morning, that I am represented as not recognizing the powers conferred upon the Metropolitan Police Commission by the recent act of the Legislature, and that the Brooklyn Police will continue to receive their pay in defiance of said act. Allow me to say that as an officer under the laws, I respect the laws, and shall not pass for payment the accounts of any of the Police from the day the Commission was organized until the Courts shall have settled the question of the constitutionality of the new law.

ELECTION RETURNS—MINISTERIAL RUMORS—THE LAYING OF THE ATLANTIC TELEGRAPH CABLE.

The Elections were almost over. The London Post sums maries the result thus: Liberals, 338; Liberal Conservatives, 74; Conservatives, 206. Ministerial losses, 13; gains, 76.

The Hon. SIDNEY HERBERT was spoken of to replace Lord PANMURE as Minister of War.

The Ministerial candidate for Speaker of the House of Commons is the Hon. EVELYN DENISON.

The Great Western Railroad Company, of Canada, had declared a dividend of nine per cent.

The English Government has agreed to furnish to the Atlantic Telegraph Company three steamships, one to make soundings, and two to assist in laying the cable. The Agamemnon, ninety gun screw steamship of 3,000 tons, is to be employed to lay down the cable in connection with the United States steamship Niagara. The entire cable will be completed in June, and be laid in July next.

RUMORED ATTEMPT AGAINST THE EMPEROR'S LIFE—CONVENTION WITH ENGLAND—COMMERCIAL AFFAIRS.

Various rumors had been in circulation of an attempt upon the Emperor's person, but they were without foundation. The rumors were owing to the fact that several arrests had taken place in Paris and the Departments of persons connected with a secret Society.

A convention has been concluded between Great Britain and France for preventing future misunderstanding with regard to the right of trading at Portsedic, on the west coast of Africa, and at Albreda, on the River Gambia. Great Britain relinquishes the right hitherto enjoyed under treaty, of trading from the mouth of the River Sr. John to the Bay and Port of Portendic. France cedes to England the French factory at Albreda, but the French are to have free access to the River Gambia for the purposes of commerce, and are to be allowed to reside at the town of Bathurst, and such other trading stations as may hereafter be appointed.

In Paris on the 8th inst. the funds closed at 69f., 95c., for money and 69f., 10c., for account, and on the 9th inst. at 69f., 20c., for money and 69f., 50c., for account, showing an abatement in the pressure for money by an increase in the fears of speculators. The Bank of France returns show a falling off in cash of one million and eight thousand francs, but an increase in cash in the Branch Banks of thirteen millions seven hundred and forty three thousand. The premium on purchase of Gold and Silver had increased by four hundred and two thousand francs.

THE PROJECTED INVASION OF MEXICO—EXPECTATIONS OF RECEIVING SUPPORT FROM FRANCE AND ENGLAND.

A Royal Decree enacts that the 16th battalions of infantry of the Army of Cuba shall be formed into eight regiments of two battalions each.

A Madrid letter says very active communications are taking place between the Spanish Government and those of France and England on the subject of the difference between Spain and Mexico. The Spanish Cabinet hopes to obtain the moral support of those two powers, and in the event of the question going beyond a war between Spain and Mexico, their material support also.

It seems the Neufchatel question now turns exclusively on the amount of indemnity to be paid by Switzerland to Prussia.

MINISTERIAL CRISIS—THE SOUND DUES.

All the Ministers have tendered their resignations on account of local politics.

The Berlin Zeint denies that a delay had been accorded to Denmark by Austria and Prussia, for the settlement of the Holstein question through French influence. It also confirms the statement that Russia has refused to agree to the claims of Denmark being referred to the arbitration of European Powers.

The Danish Diet has unanimously approved of the abolition of the abolition of the Sound Dues, and the treaty concluded with the various powers.

Le Nord says that Denmark intends to employ the major portion of the capitalization of the Sound Dues in paying off the two loans contracted in London in 1849 and 1850 which, at present, constitute a heavy burthen.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

Important and Interesting Decision—The Atlas Mutual Insurance Co.—Subscription Notes.

NEW-YORK SUPREME COURT.

John Berry, Receiver of the Atlas Mutual Insurance Co. vs. Joseph W. Yates and Robert W. Porterfield.

This action is brought by the plaintiff, as Receiver, to recover one-half of an alleged subscription of the defendants, to the capital stock of the Atlas Insurance Company. That subscription bears date Nov. 8, 1855, and was for $1,000, payable in six and twelve months, less 5 per cent, and this suit is brought to recover the sum of $475, due thereon May 11, 1856.

The complaint alleges that the Atlas Insurance Company was an incorporated Insurance Company on the mutual plan, organized and doing business in the City of New-York, and became insolvent, and on the 11th of March, 1856, the plaintiff was appointed Receiver of its property and effects.

That in pursuance of a resolution of the Board of Directors of the Company, the Trustees thereof caused to be prepared, and circulated a subscription for signatures in the words following: "We, the subscribers hereto agree to give to the Atlas Mutual Insurance Company, our notes in advance of premiums of insurance, at six and twelve months, in equal amounts for the sums set opposite our names respectively, it being understood, that in consideration thereof, the subscribers are to be allowed by the company at the maturity of their notes, 5 per cent. on the amount thereof. This subscription is towards the $400,000 subscription authorized by a resolution at the Board of Trustees of this date, and is not to be binding until the sum of $300,000 is subscribed, New-York, Nov. 8, 1855."

The resolution of Nov. 8, 1855, referred to in the subscription is as follows:

"On motion it was resolved, that a subscription in the sum of $400,000 in premium notes to be written against be obtained—subscriptions to be binding when $300,000 is subscribed, including the $40,000 already subscribed."

On the 29th of October, 1855, the Trustees adopted the following resolution:

"That any arrangement made by the Finance Committee in paying or arranging for funds to psy the pressing liabilities of the Co., and to sustain the Institution until other means can be provided, if they shall make themselves or their friends personally liable, the same shall be considered and treated as confidential in any event, equal in all respects to the amount of $40,000, already subscribed by the friends of the Company for its relief."

The complaint further alleges that the defendants on 8th November, 1855, subscribed to the said subscription the sum of $1,000, and that the said sum of $300,000 was subscribed in accordance with the terms of said resolution, and of said subscription.

The plaintiff further alleges that the defendants had not given their notes, in accordance with said subscription, and that there was due thereon the said sum of $475, and interest from May 11, 1856.

The defendants in their answer deny that the said sum of $300,000 was ever subscribed in accordance with the terms of said resolution or of said subscription.

The defendants further allege that said sum of $300,000 was never subscribed in good faith, that many of said subscriptions were merely nominal, that they were made with the understanding that they were not to be binding; that the officers of the Company made subscriptions which were merely nominal, and made for the purpose of procuring from bona fide subscribers their notes in accordance with such subscription.

DAVIES, Justice—The terms of the subscription and the testimony conclusively establish the position that the subscription of the defendants was not to be binding, unless the sum of $300,000 was actually subscribed. It was incumbent on the plaintiff as essential to his right to recover, to establish the fulfillment of the condition precedent, that this sum had been subscribed, and for this purpose he produces and proves the subscription book, which contains first, a statement under date of Nov. 8, 1855, in these words:

"The Trustees of the Atlas Mutual Insurance Company, in order to show their desire and determination to place the Company in an independent position, do subscribe the amount set opposite their names, on the same conditions set forth in the resolution of the Board of this date, to be paid in cash or notes, at thirty, sixty, ninety days, or four months, provided that the amount of three hundred thousand dollars is subscribed under that resolution."

Then follows the names of sixteen persons, and opposite thereto $58,000.

Next we have a copy of the subscription of $40,000, being that referred to, without doubt, in the resolution of October 30, 1855; and then succeeds the subscription of Nov. 8, 1855, already referred to, and which, in fact, only amounts to the sum of about $212,500. Then follows a subscription amounting to $48,000, by the gentlemen who had agreed to subscribe $58,000, provided the $300,000 subscription was made up, and then other subscriptions amounting to near $6,000. The original subscription of $40,000 is produced, and bears date Oct. 12, 1855.

The subscription which the defendants signed, and the engagement which they entered into, contains the significant stipulation that "this subscription is not to be binding until the sum of $300,000 is subscribed."

Now it is obvious from the date of the subscription of $40,000, and the terms of the engagement to subscribe $58,000, that they were both regarded as independent subscriptions to that for $300,000.

It is apparent to my mind, from the terms of the resolution of October 30, that an arrangement had been made that this $40,000 subscription was regarded as a confidential loan to the Company. The notes to be given to meet it were, by the terms of the subscription, to be at four months, while those under the subscription for $300,000 were to be at six and twelve months, and those under the subscription of $50,000 were to be met in cash or notes, at thirty, sixty, ninety days, or four months.

These subscriptions must, in my judgment, be all deemed separate and independent engagements, varying in amounts, terms and conditions, and that neither the $40,000 or the $50,000 subscriptions can be invoked to aid in fulfillment of the terms of that for $300,000, or as forming any part thereof.

I have not overlooked the resolution of the Board of Trustees of Nov. 8, 1855, in which they say that the subscription is to be binding when $300,000 is subscribed, including the $40,000 already subscribed. It is sufficient to say that this is not the contract of the defendants. The terms of the subscription signed by them contain no such provisions, but the emphatic one that it is not to be binding until the sum of $300,000 is subscribed thereto.

I am now considering the subscription of November 8, 1855, as containing what it purports, legal and valid subscriptions and the amounts there appearing, disregarding those of the $40,000, and $50,000 amount to about the sum of $212,500.

What is the effect of such a condition in a subscription?

Undoubtedly that it must be complied with before the liability attaches. Such is the agreement of the parties, and such are their legal obligations.

The rule, as I understand it, is well stated by Chancellor Walworth in Stewart vs. Trustees of Hamilton College, 2 Denio, 403. That was an action brought by the Trustees of Hamilton College against Stewart, to recover from him a subscription to the funds of that institution. The subscription contained a provision that the subscribers were not to be holden "to pay the sum subscribed by us, unless the aggregate of our subscriptions shall by the first of July, 1834, amount to $50,000." It was proven on the trial that the nominal amount of the subscriptions equaled that sum on that day, but that $700 was subscribed by unincorporated benevolent associations, that other subscriptions to the amount of $2,009, were made by married women, and that other subscriptions amounting to between one and two thousand dollars were payable in land and other property.

The Chancellor after pointing ent the particulars, in which the terms of the subscription had not been complied with, says, That the conditions upon which the plaintiff Stewart had subscribed, not having been complied with, he never became liable upon his subscription. I shall have occasion in another connection to refer to this opinion more fully.

As establishing the same principle, I refer to the case of Sandford vs. Handy, 25 Wend., 475. In that case proposals were issued to form a joint stock company for the sale of certain lands. The lands were to be divided in 25 shares of $5,000 each, and the defendant subscribed for one share. All the shares were not subscribed for.

The Supreme Court were of the opinion that by the true construction of the contract all the shares, were to be subscribed for before any subscriber should become liable upon his subscription, and that this was a condition precedent—and the whole number of shares not having been taken, the defendant was not liable. It will be observed in this case, that there was no express provision in the subscription paper, that the whole number of shares should be taken; but the Court holding that by the true intent and import of the agreement, all the shares were to be taken, such taking was a condition precedent to the defendant's liability.

The plaintiff's counsel has referred to another case upon this same contract in 2d Denio, 235, and confidently relies upon it as one authority to sustain the defendants liability in this case.

The Supreme Court had held in conformity with their decision in 25 Wend. (supra) that the subscription of the whole number of shares, as clearly implied on the face of the agreement, constitute a very material part of it, and deeply affected the separate interest of each subscriber, and that the defendant could not be made liable, as this material condition of the contract had not been complied with.

The Court of Errors reversed the judgment of the Supreme Court upon the ground that it was not a condition of the agreement that the whole twenty-three shares should have been subscribed. The opinions for reversal were delivered by the Chancellor and Senator Lott. The former says, at page 261: "I confess, upon examining the agreement I cannot discover anything from which it can be reasonably inferred that the subscription of the whole number of shares, or of twenty-one shares, was intended to be made a condition precedent to the rights of the defendant to claim the benefit of the contract, or the rights of the plaintiff to demand a performance on the part of the defendant." Senator Lott says, at p. 266: "It was contended, however, that his (the defendant's) covenant was conditional, that his agreement was to take one share, if the twenty-three shares were subscribed and not otherwise, and that the subscription of the whole number of shares was an indispensable condition, and an integral term of the contract itself clearly appearing on its face. It is not pretended that there is an express condition of that nature, and a careful examination of the different provisions of this agreement will show that such is not its fair construction."

Senators Porter and Bokee delivered opinions in favor of affirming the decision of the Supreme Court, on the ground taken by that Court, that it was fairly inferrable from the whole contract that it was upon the condition that the whole twenty-three shares were to be subscribed.

The judgment of the Supreme Court was reversed by one majority, and it must be assumed on the ground stated by the two judges who delivered the prevailing opinion, that the covenant was not conditional.

Instead of this case being, as was assumed by the plaintiff's counsel on the argument an authority, for the proposition that when an agreement is made upon condition, the party can be bound by it, without showing that the condition precedent has been fulfilled, I regard it as sustaining exactly the contrary doctrine.

All the Judges who delivered opinions in that case concede that if the covenant had contained an express condition, that the twenty-three shares should be subscribed, the defendant could not have been made liable without showing that such subscription had been made, and the only difference between the Court of Errors and the Supreme Court was, whether such a covenant could be implied as clearly appearing on its face.

The Supreme Court and the minority of the Court of Errors holding that such was its fair construction, and the majority of the Court of Errors, though holding otherwise, conceding if such was its fair construction the plaintiff could not recover.

This case is disembarrassed from the difficulty arising in that. In the agreement under consideration, is an express stipulation that the same "is not to be binding until the sum of $300,000 is subscribed."

If I am correct in the view I have taken of the facts in this case, $300,000 was never subscribed to that subscription, but only about $212,500. It never, therefore, became the defendant's subscription.

The condition precedent on which he agreed to become a subscriber, did not arise, and therefore no legal liability attached to him in consequence of that conditional engagement.

But it is contended on the part of the plaintiff, that taking all the three subscriptions together the same amounts to the sum of $300,000, and therefore the condition has been performed and the defendant's engagement is complete. I have already stated the difficulties in maintaining this position.

The first and obvious one is, that such is not the defendant's agreement: when he signed this he saw preceding it, two distinct, separate and independent subscriptions, one of the 19th of October, 1855, for $40,000, and the other an engagement by sixteen persons that they would subscribe the sum of $50,000, provided, the sum of $300,000 was subscribed under the resolution of Nov. 8, 1855.

It is apparent to my mind that originally these three subscriptions were regarded as separate and independent.

It is sufficient for this case to say that there is nothing in the agreement signed by the defendants to warrant the ground now assumed, that the $40,000, and the $50,000, subscriptions, were to be deemed part of the $300,000 which was to be subscribed before such subscriptions were to be binding.

I do not think such was originally the intent of the parties. It will be seen that the terms of both these subscriptions, were entirely different from that of the $300,000 subscription. The $40,000 of Oct. 12 was to be made in notes at four months. The $50,000, in cash or notes, at 30, 60, 90 days, or at four months, while that of the $300,000 was made in notes at six and twelve months, in equal amounts. It is impossible, therefore, to say that these three subscriptions are to be deemed and taken as one, and as forming a part of the $300,000. Their very language and terms contradict this assumption. Besides, it is apparent to my mind, that the fair construction of this subscription for $300,000 is, that the same is not to be operative unless the entire sum of $300,000 should be subscribed thereto, on the same terms as therein expressed, viz: in premium notes at six and twelve months in equal amounts.

Now, there is no ground for asserting that any such sum has been subscribed on those terms, and the difficulties are to me insurmountable, in taking other subscriptions, made at different times and on different terms, and regarding them as part of this.

This view of this case is so clear and conclusive to my mind that I should have no hesitation in ordering judgment for the defendants without considering the other questions raised. But, as they have been discussed with care and ability, and pressed with earnestness upon the Court, they merit, as they are entitled to receive, a careful consideration.

The plaintiff contends that as the whole sum of $300,000 was actually subscribed after the date of the 12th of October, this Court is to hold, that within the fair meaning and intent of the subscription, signed by the defendants, the sum of $300,000 was subscribed, and therefore the condition was fulfilled.

This is on the assumption that the subscription of $40,000 and that of $50,000 (in fulfillment of which $48,000 appears to have been only subscribed) are included as part of the $300,000 subscription. The objections to this have already been stated.

It is not alleged that all the subscriptions made after Oct. 12, including that, exceed the sum of $300,000. It is said that the sum total of the whole just equals that sum. In this total is included the $40,000 subscription of Oct. 12. That subscription as is apparent from the terms of the resolution of Oct. 30, had been placed on a footing different from the other subscription made under the resolution of the Board of Nov. 8, 1855. It, in fact, was to be regarded as confidential, while the residue of the subscription did not partake of that character. It was securing to a portion of the subscribers an advantage not participated in by the others, and I do not regard the fact that the Trustees did not carry out this arrangement as varying its legal effect.

A not dissimilar arrangement existed as to a portion of the subscriptions for the benefit of Hamilton College, in the case of Stewart vs. Trustees of that college cited supra. There the total of the subscription was to be $50,000. The whole amount not being subscribed by the day named, the Trustees passed a resolution, to raise further money to save harmless those persons who had agreed, and who thereupon did make up the deficiency—and the Trustees therefore regarded the whole amount as subscribed.

Chancellor Walworth said, in reference to such an agreement that, "the essence of every agreement of this kind is, that there should be perfect equality among the subscribers as to the nature and extent of their respective liabilities for the several sums subscribed by them respectively. To have made this general subscription valid, so as to fill up the sum of subscriptions and contributions to the amount of $50,000 (the sum in that case to be subscribed before the subscriptions became binding) within the terms of the agreement, it should have been an absolute donation of the amount of the deficiency, to be paid at the same time as the other subscriptions, and no part of it to be restored or refunded to them upon any contingency, or in any event other than such as were common to the subscription of all the other subscribers."

In support of this well settled principle, alike in harmony with the law and sound morals, the Chancellor refers to the case of a composition deed, where there is an express agreement between the creditors themselves to discharge the debtor upon receiving a ratable proporiion of the respective debts, any private agreement or understanding between the debtor and any particular creditor that the latter shall at any time, or in any contingency receive a greater sum than the amount of his debts specified in the composition deed, is held to be void as a fraud upon the other creditors. (1 Anst. Rep. 202. 3 ib. 910, Jackson vs. Duchaire, 3d Term Rep. 561. Cockshot vs. Bennett, 2 Term R. 763. Steinemanva. Magnus, 11 East 390. Weed vs. Bentley, 6 Hill 56.

The agreement, therefore, to regard this $40,000 subscription upon a different footing, than the residue of the subscription was a fraud upon the other subscribers, and vitiated the whole transaction.

But it is argued that the defendants must have known that this $40,000 subscription was to be taken as part of the $300,000 subscription, and the terms and conditions upon which it had been made.

First—Because the Trustees, in their resolution of Nov. 8, 1855, authorizing this subscription, stated that it should be binding when $300,000 was subscribed, including the $40,000 already subscribed.

Second—That the reference to that resolution, in the subscription signed by the defendants, adopts it as part of the terms of the subscription.

In relation to the first position, nothing was said in the resolution of Nov. 8, of the terms upon which the $40,000 had been subscribed, and although the Trustees might have intended that the subscription should be binding on all the subscribers, when $260,000 additional was subscribed, such clearly is not the language or the true construction of the subscription. That is the agreement of the defendants, and by that must they be bound—any intention of the Trustees not communicated to them, and assented to by them, can have no significance in determining their liability; and it seems to me that the reference in the subscription to the resolution of the Trustees was not of such a character as to lead the defendants and the other subscribers to suppose that it contained any thing else than the general authority to raise a subscription to the amount of $400,000.

It certainly cannot be fairly said that this reference adopts the provisions of that resolution, that the subscription was to be binding when $260,000 was subscribed, when the subscription itself contains a contrary stipulation. The latter must govern as being the contract of the defendants.

Conceding that the defendants had agreed to be bound, provided $260,000 in addition had been subscribed, was that condition complied with? Including the $48,000 subscribed, as I regard it in fulfillment of the engagement of Nov. 8, to subscribe $50,000 the total of all, excluding the $40,000, is just equal to the requisite sum of $260,000.

To make up this sum there is included subscriptions to the amount of $37,000 by various insurance companies. I am at a loss where to find the power or authority conferred upon these companies to advance their notes in anticipation of premiums on insurance which they may never make, and in this case never did make except to a small extent, to sustain a failing or revive an insolvent corporation.

If these subscriptions, or any part of them were ultra vires, they are void and no subscription, and it follows that the necessary amount to make the defendants subscription binding, never was raised. No power is shown in their charters thus to apply the funds of this Corporation to such purposes, and it is certainly not an incidental power and necessary to the conduct and management of the business for which they were called into being. It certainly needs no argument or authority to show that a Corporation created for the purpose of insurance has no power to advance its moneys, or obligations to sustain another Corporation in similar or dissimilar business.

Neither does the authority given to these companies to reinsure policies or risks taken by them in other companies, authorize or give any warrant for these subscriptions.

When these premium notes are given, the maker becomes to that extent a stockholder in the Company receiving the premium notes, and by numerous decisions in this State, the whole amount of the note is payable, though no insurance has ever been effected by the maker, and such notes are a substitute for capital stock. 1 Sand. S. C. R. 158, and cases there cited.

Could these Companies thus subscribe to the capital stock of the Atlas Insurance Company? This point was ruled in the negative by the Supreme Court of Connecticut, Vol. 24, Conn. Rep. 159, Mutual Savings Bank vs. Meriden Agency Company. The Chief Justice in delivering the opinion of the Court in that case says: "But when the Directors of the Company subscribe for stock in a Building Association, whatever may have been their motive, whether to obtain a loan of money, or for purposes of speculation, they transcended the powers conferred upon them, and departed from the legitimate business of the Company, as much so as if they had subscribed for stock in a Manufacturing or Steamboat Company. Such subscription, in our opinion, is not binding upon the defendants, and any payments made upon it to the plaintiffs would be money received by them without consideration." The Court holds in that case that the subscription was void and that the Corporation never became stockholders. If these Corporations had the power to make their subscriptions, we have seen that the legal effect of such subscriptions was to make the subscriber a stockholder to the amount thereof, and liable to pay such subscription or premium note forthwith, though the Corporation receiving it might have failed the next day and never earned in premiums one cent of the amount.

Can it be contended that insurance companies organized for a specific purpose, can thus put at hazard, nay waste, entirely the capital stock or fund contributed and held by them, for the purposes of their charter? I think clearly not, and that subscriptions by them like these now under consideration, are ultra vires and void.

Such I understand is the current of authority not only in this country, but in England. The case of Tallmage vs. Fell, 3 Seld, 328, contains the rule of this State governing corporations,—and that case meets the argument of the plaintiff's counsel, that because these companies were authorized to reinsure their policies or invest their surplus funds in the stocks of other incorporations, therefore they had authority to make this subscription. Neither of these objects were those for which these subscriptions were made, and though they had authority to do these things, it does not follow they had authority to lend their means or credit to sustain a failing or insolvent corporation or become stockholders in other corporations.

I shall content myself with citing a single case from the English Reports for the rule on this subject as established there.

The case of the East Anglian Railway Company vs. Eastern Counties Railway Company, 7 Law, and Eq. Rep. 505, is a leading one on this subject, and I am not aware that its authority has ever been questioned or overruled. The case appears to have been very fully and ably argued by the counsel, and maturely considered by the Court, and the points decided are—That a railway company incorporated by Act of Parliament is bound to apply all the funds of the company for the purposes directed and provided for by the act, and for no other purpose whatsoever—And when such a railway company was incorporated by a public Act of Parliament "for the purpose of making and maintaining" a particular railway and other works by the act authorized, "and for other purposes therein declared," and they were empowered by the act to raise money for making and maintaining the railway and other works authorized by the act, and the money so raised was directed to be expended towards those purposes and otherwise carrying the act into execution, and after paying these expenses the profits of the company were to be divided among the proprietors. The purposes mentioned in the act were confined to the acts to be done upon and relating to the railway to be made by the company.

The defendants the Company so incorporated covenanted with the plaintiffs, another Railway Company, to take a lease of their railways and to pay the costs of soliciting bills then pending in Parliament, by which the plaintiffs were to be authorized to make extensions and branches of their railways. In an action for breach of covenant in not paying the costs of the bills in Parliament—

Held, that the act incorporating the defendants, being a public act must be presumed to be known to the plaintiffs and that they could not recover, inasmuch as the covenant entered into by the defendants was beyond the scope of their authority as a corporation, and was therefore illegal and void, however beneficial to the defendants' railway, the objects of the covenant if carried out, might be.

Lewis C. J. says: "It is clear that the defendants have a limited authority only, and are a corporation only for the purpose of making and maintaining the railway sanctioned by the act, and that their funds can only be applied for the purpose directed and provided for by the statute. * * * Any proprietor when he takes shares has a right to expect that the conditions upon which the act was obtained will be performed, and it is no sufficient answer to a stockholder expecting his dividend, that the money has been expended upon an undertaking which at some remote period may be highly beneficial to the line.

The public has an interest in the proper administration of the powers conferred by the act."

Applying these principles to the present case, it is quite clear that no power was given to the officers of these various companies to make this subscription, and thus if they had the power, subject the property of their stockholders to the hazards of a business carried on by another corporation, in whose management they had no voice or control, or to appropriate the funds and property of their shareholders to the payment of losses sustained by another corporation, or to the discharge of debts incurred by it.

No such departure from the powers conferred on these companies, or from the duties imposed upon them, can be sanctioned by this Court. Such acts are unauthorized and void, and although these companies did subscribe to this fund the sum of $37,000, it was in fact no subscription, and the necessary amount to make it binding by the terms on the defendants, supposing all the residue properly made up remained deficient this amount.

But it was contended on the argument, that supposing this objection tenable, it appeared by the testimony that the Atlas Insurance Company had realized the proceeds of all their subscriptions of these Companies, except that of the International and Philadelphia Insurance Company, amounting to $7,000, and $2,500 of that of the Astor Mutual Insurance Company.

It appears that the notes received from these companies, thus realized, were passed away by the Atlas Mutual Insurance Company, and if the doctrine of the Supreme Court of Connecticut is sound, any payment made by these companies, being upon a void subscription and without consideration, may be recovered back. It is, therefore, far from safe to say, that the Atlas Mutual Insurance Company has received the avails of these subscriptions. It is quite beyond contradiction that of these subscriptions, $9,500 are still unpaid by these companies, and if the law is as announced in this opinion that sum cannot be collected. These companies had no authority to make any such contracts; it is simply void, and is no subscription within the meaning and intent of the stipulation that $300,000 was to be subscribed before the subscription was to be binding.

But assuming that I am in error, in reference to the binding force and validity of the subscription of these companies, there is an objection to that of one of them, which is fatal to it, and sufficient to reduce the subscription below the $300,000.

I allude to that of the International Insurance Company. That was never authorized by the Directors of that Company or known to them. It was proven on the trial of this case that it was made under an agreement between the two companies for a mutual exchange of notes for the sum of $5,000. That these companies had no authority to make such exchange, needs no argument to fortify and illustrate. That such an arrangement was a fraud upon the other subscribers, we have seen to be established, and consequently it vitiated the whole transaction. In the language of Chancellor Walworth, already cited, the essence of such an agreement is that there should be perfect equality among all the subscribers as to the nature and extent of their respective liabilities. No such equality is preserved by such an arrangement, but is equally, if not more, vicious and objectionable, than the arrangement in reference to making the $40,000 subscription confidential. It was proven that several of the individual subscriptions were made upon terms and arrangements, not common to the other subscribers, being taken, on account of debts past due by the company to the persons making the subscription, the condition being if he would subscribe, it should apply in part payment of the debt due and the balance would be paid by the company.

This arrangement was equally a fraud upon the other subscribers, and vitiated the transaction.

I am, therefore, constrained to hold, in every aspect in which I have regarded this case, that the condition precedent, which the parties agreed to and reduced to writing, and which was made part of the agreement upon, which these defendants are now sued, viz.: That the same was "not to be binding until the sum of $300,000 is subscribed," has not been fulfilled, and that consequently no legal liability has been created against the defendants by signing the same.

Judgment for defendants.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT—APRIL 24.

Before Judge Nelson.

Alexander Cross vs. George Law.—In this case the Jury, this morning, brought in a verdict for the plaintiff for the sum of $15,933 79.

The Court then took up the argument of the demurrer, and the application for a ne exeat, in the case of Graham vs. Meyer & Stucken, which was adjourned over from last Saturday. The argument was commenced by Mr. Brady for the defendants, and closed by Mr. O'Conor for the plaintiff. Judge NELSON took the papers.

ATTACHMENT FOR CONTEMPT—THE SICKLES CUT-OFF—THE STEAMBOAT METROPOLIS.

The case of Wm. B. Sickles vs. Wm. Borden and Augustus Sturges et al., was then taken up. In this case, which is a hill in equity, filed upon a verdict in favor of the plaintiff in relation to the use of the Sickles Cut-off upon the steamboat Metropolis, temporary injunction was granted restraining the defendants from using the Cut-off complained. The owners of the boat, however, having removed the adjustibility of the cut-off, ran the boat as before. After her first trip in this way, however, a motion was made for an attachment against the defendants for violating the injunction. The motion was heard before Judge HALL, who directed an attachment to issue against the defendant Sturges, who is the engineer of the boat. The attachment issued, and the defendant appeared, and having answered the interrogatories filed by the plaintiff, the case now came up for a hearing upon these answers—the main point of which was that he was only the engineer in employ of the Company who owned her, and did not think that his running the engine under his contract was a violation of the injunction.

Mr. Dickinson argued the matter in behalf of the plaintiff, and it was then laid over till to-morrow.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT—APRIL 24.

Before Judge Betts.

The United States vs. Jeremiah Towle.—This case was at last brought to a close to-day, it being manifest that there were no questions in the case proper to be submitted to the jury, by both parties consenting that a general verdict for the United States, subject to the opinion of the Court on the points of law; the amount to be adjusted by the Court, and if the balance was found in favor of the defendant, such balance to be certified, and with leave to each party to carry the case up on exceptions.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM—April 24.

Before Hon. Justice Clerke.

ANOTHER SUIT AGAINST THE BALANCE DOCKS.

Samel S. Roberts vs. The New-York Balance Dock Company.—This is an action similar to the one of Hesker against the same. The plaintiff has an establishment nearly opposite the dock, and wishes to have his vessels come to the place now occupied by it to discharge their cargoes. The arguments are essentially the same as in the other case.

DECISIONS.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Hon. Justice Hoffman.

THE JOBSON EXPERT CASE.

Jobson vs. Allen.—This case, it will be remembered, was for services rendered by the plaintiff as an expert in a suit brought by the defendant in Cincinnati in regard to a patent for teeth. The Jury rendered a verdict for the plaintiff for $350. The defendant appealed to the Special Term, and the case was argued by Wm. W. Northrop, Esq., for the defendant, and James T. Brady, Esq., for the plaintiff. His Honor rendered a decision, granting a new trial, as the evidence did not sustain the verdict rendered. Costs to abide the event.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Hon. Recorder Smith.

The trial of Joseph Miller, for the murder of his wife, the negro D'Orsay, for the murder of the girl in Worth-street, and Michael Wogan, for arson in the first degree, were yesterday postponed until the May Term.

The case of Neal Duffy, a policeman, charged with assaulting a man named McManus on election day, was then called up. Judge Beebe, who appeared for the defendant, stated that he could not proceed to trial in the absence of a material witness, whereupon the Recorder ordered the case to be postponed to the May Term. The complainant, McManus, immediately arose in great ire, and in a very insolent manner said that he had been brought into the Court often enough to have the case tried, and that he was determined he would not come again. If any policeman was sent to fetch him, he would murder him. He was about moving out of the Court room, accompanied by his wife, when the Recorder ordered his arrest. He was brought to the Recorder's bench, and upon being asked what he had to say why he should not be punished for contempt of Court, he professed ignorance of the Recorder's meaning. He was brought to his senses, however, by a prompt fine of $15, which his wife instantly paid. He quitted the Court a poorer and a wiser man.

THE ASSAULTS ON ELECTION DAY.

The cases of Aldermen Willism Wilson, McConnell, Enright, Callahan, Holland, and others, alleged rioters on the last election day, were next called up for trial. Mr. John Graham, senior counsel for defence, not being in court, considerable delay took place, and as Mr. Graham did not appear, the junior counsel, Mr. Sweeney, requested that the trial should be postponed till the May term. The Recorder replied that for the credit of the City, for the ends of justice, and for the interests of the accused themselves, the charges ought to be at once disposed of. The District-Attorney also urged the immediate trial of the defendants. The case had been long before the Court, and the defendants had neglected to attend to it. In their bearing upon the administration of public justice, these trials were highly important. It had been recently said in the Legislature that an election day was the Sabbath of an elector, and personal violence on that day was to be regarded as an offence of greater magnitude than on any other.

The Recorder remarked that it was a State Prison offence.

The Counsel for defence said that he had only received notice about an hour before that the trial was to come off. He was not at all prepared to proceed. Mr. Graham was prepared, but he was not to be found.

The District-Attorney stated that the reason alleged by the defendents for their unwillingness to proceed to trial, was the fact that the Recorder, in his capacity as a magistrate, had taken some of the affidavits.

The Recorder replied that such an objection was certainly frivolous. He would not recognize the idea that a judge upon the bench could entertain any partisan feelings for or against the accused. He was always glad when a party against whom a charge was made, and who was placed upon his trial could, with justice be acquitted, and if these parties were innocent he should be glad to see them released, and they could show their innocence then, as well as at any other time. If they proved to be guilty, he should do as he had already announced, punish them to the utmost extent of the law.

The trials were ultimately ordered for the first Wednesday in the May term.

There being no other business ready, the jurors were dismissed and the April term closed.

COURT OF SPECIAL SESSIONS.

City-Judge RUSSELL sat upon the bench of the Court of Special Sessions yesterday. The prisoners' box was crowded with men and women, black and white.

John Thomas was placed at the bar. He had assaulted Redmond Roche, a First Ward policeman at Castle Garden. He said he was drunk when he did it and greatly excited. The excuse was not considered sufficient, so he was fined $25, which he promptly paid, and was thereupon permitted to depart.

James O'Rorke and William Shay were charged with committing a violent assault upon Peter Kline, of No. 49 Allen-street. Kline was a Carson man, and had been heard urging the claims of his candidate in a Bowery bar-room. The prisoners, who were Harry Howard men, found him in the street soon after and punished him for it. The Judge fined them $10 each and dismissed them.

James Byron was put to the bar for chastising his wife Honora in a cruel and unusual manner. He talked so long and loudly that it was found necessary to call him to order several times. He had a lawyer to plead his case, but he wouldn't permit the lawyer to speak a sentence without interruption. He said he was determined to "try" himself. His wife thought he had already been punished enough, and was willing to forgive him. She so intimated to the Judge, who was about to suspend judgment, when the prisoner burst forth in a fit of temper, and applied to his wife epithets of so obscene a character that the Judge at once passed sentence of three months' imprisonment in the Penitentiary.

Ann Lawlor and Sarah Clapp were charged with stealing a horse-blanket. Their guilt was fully proven. They were each sentenced to the Penitentiary for six months. One of them had a little child, whom she feelingly caressed during the progress of the trial. When sentence was passed a woman—one of the spectators—came forward and took the child from the prisoner, thereby causing a great commotion in Court. "The poor thing has the small-pox, Sir," screamed the intruder; "and to dying." After considerable shuffling and pushing, the child was transferred to the outside woman, to whom it no doubt belonged, the prisoner having borrowed it to excite the Magistrate's sympathy.

KINGS COUNTY COURT OF SESSIONS—APRIL 24.

Before Hon. Samuel D. Morris, County Judge, and Justices Schoonmaker and Emmons.

The evidence in the case of Richard Lewis, on trial for rape, was closed to-day, at 12 o'clock. The afternoon was occupied by District-Attorney Schuaker, and prisoner's counsel, R. H. Huntley, Esq., in summing up the case. The Court will charge the Jury to-morrow (Saturday) morning.

Arraignments—John Powers and Richard Johnson, indicted for burglary, were arraigned, and pleaded not guilty.

John Tice, indicted for grand larceny, pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to three months' imprisonment in the Penitentiary.

NEWS BY THE MAILS.

The Teller of the Leighton Bank at Lynn, HENRY W. SMITH, has defaulted in $8,400. He acknowledges having appropriated $7,000, which was used for the benefit of H. B. GROVER & Co., of which firm Mr. SAMUEL T. HUSE, SMITH'S father-in-law, is a member. The Bank has been nearly secured on its claim of $7,000. Mr. HUSE claims to have induced the young man to embezzle the funds, and had made arrangements to meet the semi-annual examination of the accounts of the Bank by putting in a quantity of the paper of the firm, but Mr. GROVER, not feeling safe at the freedom taken with the signature, forbid the deposit of the notes, hence the deliverance and subsequent confession of young SMITH, who disclosed the whole affair to the President. It is not probable that legal proceedings will be taken.

The members of the Massachusetts Legislature improved Fast-day, last week, by "visiting the Institutions." At the House of Correction in Plymouth, the centre of attraction was Mrs. GARDNER, imprisoned on a charge of poisoning her husband. She talks freely in respect to the poisoning; admits conjugal difficulties, but claims to have been the victim of religious persecution, she being a Baptist, while her husband was a Universalist, and that he had forbid her attendance upon her own church, with threats. She asserts her innocence vehemently, but makes no attempts at a detailed defence. It is a great disappointment, she asserts, that her trial does not come off at this term, as she is perfectly sure of acquittal.

The Boston Traveller says: "For the last seven or eight years, at different times, a party of three or more have been in the habit of visiting a field situated on the west side of Ruggles-street, near Parker-street, Roxbury, and digging for hidden treasures. The spot is near a creek, and long before the mill-dam was built small vessels passed up and down, and near this place it is supposed the famous Capt. KIDD hurried some of his money. Within the last four weeks, a party of three persons have visited the place and dug for the money, and on Wednesday night last five persons proceeded to the field, and their proceedings were witnessed by a police officer and several others. No money has yet turned up.

The liquor law of Massachusetts has produced a curious state of affairs in Lynn. The proprietors of the Sagamore House proposed to displace the landlord for selling intoxicating drinks; the landlord bought up $2,000 worth of stock so as to control a new Board of Directors: and this fact coming to the ears of the present Board, they leased the hotel for a term of 20 years to another company, composed of substantial and respectable citizens of Lynn.

An enormous blast was made in the quarries in Bolton, Conn., last week. With a charge of 1,500 pounds a mass of rock was upheaved twenty-five feet in depth, twenty-five feet wide and fifty feet long. Three thousand tons of waste rock were removed—1,000 tons thrown from fifteen to 100 rods distant; one mass, weighing some fifteen tons, was thrown thirty rods. The tops of trees in the neighborhood were shaved off as if by an axe.

The Ohio Statesman learns that EDWARD HAWKINS, who, last month, shot and killed JAMES M. LAND and JESSE ARVINE, Sheriff and Constable of Estill County, Ky., was taken at his father's, in Adams County, in this State, and lodged in the jail of Estill County, Ky. On Sunday the surrounding inhabitants assembled, broke into the jail, carried off HAWKINS, conveyed him to the spot of the murder, and there hang him.

The prisoner, WM. TOWNSEND alias MCHENRY, arrested in Cleveland, proves to be, as far as the evidence yet taken attests, the man he was arrested for. Several persons recognized in the prisoner the man who in Upper Canada in 1854 passed as BILLY TOWNSEND, and whose crimes set the whole province in pursuit, and for whom the authorities offered a thousand pounds reward. Canadian officers have taken him in charge.

The New-Brunswick papers are mostly filled with discussions upon the coming legislative election, the Government and Liberal parties having candidates in nearly all the counties, and the liquor law question forming part of the excitement, which is pretty fully developed in the journals.

The Tennessee Democratic State Convention assembled at Nashville on the 15th inst., and nominated Hon. ISHAM G. HARRIS, of Shelby County, for Governor. A very large number of delegates were present, representing every county in the State.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

From the Syracuse Journal.

Few intelligent men and women of the present day are unfamiliar with the genius of Macaulay—a genius which adorns everything it touches. This volume contains brilliant examples and startling warnings, and tells us of glorious achievements and ignominious failures.

From the Christian Register.

Of the brilliancy, picturesqueness, rigor and epigrammatic fruit of these sketches, we need not speak. They are by Macaulay—he who has taught novel-readers to read history.

From the Express.

The ninety sketches contained in this volume are marked by the charm of the author's unrivalled style, and the reader's only regret will be that each article is too brief.

From the Buffalo Republic.

The elaborate elegance and beauty of style, for which Macaulay is so justly celebrated, lends an irresistible charm to all his writings, but nowhere are these qualities so fully exhibited as when he is sketching just such portraits as these. The old worthies actually glow beneath his touch.

From the Michigan Argus.

This volume includes nearly one hundred fine portraits of men and women connected with English history, in every walk of life, Kings, Queens, Princes, Noblemen, Judges, Lawyers, Divines, Authors, &c.

FIRST IMPRESSIONS OF ENGLAND AND ITS PEOPLE. With a Portrait, engraved from Bonner's Painting. 12mo. Cloth. pp. 430. $1.

From Professor Louis Agassiz.

The geological works of HUGH MILLER have excited the greatest interest, not only among scientific men, but also among general readers. There is in them a freshness of conception, a power of argumentation, a depth of thought, a purity of feeling, rarely met with in works of that character. * * * But what is in a great degree peculiar to our author, is the successful combination of Christian doctrines with pure scientific truths.

From Rev. Thomas Chalmers, D. D., LL. D.

Since the death of Sir Walter Scott, he (HUGH MILLER) is the greatest Scotchman that is left.

From Sir David Brewster, LL. D., F. R. S.

Among the eminent students of the structure of the earth, Mr. HUGH MILLER holds a lofty place, not merely from the discovery of new and undescribed organisms in the Old Red Sandstone, but from the accuracy and beauty of his descriptions, the purity and elegance of his compositions, and the high tone of philosophy and religion which distinguishes all his writings. * * * * With the exception of Burns, the unedneated genius which has done honor to Scotland during the last century has never displayed that mental refinement, and classical taste, and intellectual energy, which mark all the writings of our author.

From Rev. William Hanna, LL. D.

He succeeded in placing his name in the first rank of British scientific writers and thinkers. His works are characterized by a fine union of strict science, classic diction, and enchanting description, which rises, not unfrequently, into the loftiest vein of poetry.

From Sir Roderick Murchison, F. R. S.

Sir Roderick Murchison, in his address to the Geological Society, "hailed the accession to their science of such a writer," and said that "his work (Old Red Sandstone) is, to a beginner, worth a thousand didactic treatises."

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.—THOMPSONS' REPORTER vs. JOURNAL OF FINANCE.—THOMPSON in his issue of the 25th inst., asserts that we caused the trouble now existing among certain Banks by throwing out their notes, and says that we have injured the tradesmen and laboring men of this City by doing so. We appeal for a reversion of this judgment to those tradesmen and laboring man who were induced to take the notes of the Valley Bank of Md., Erie City Bank and Bank of Newcastle, both of Penn., the Commercial Bank of New Jersey and the Exeter Bank of N. H., by the quotations of JOHN THOMPSON'S Reporter. If they should decide against us, we will acknowledge our error. We do not quote Shinplaster Banks

THE ELVES,
LEGEND.—The mountain forests of Pastoria are inhabited, it is said, by Pixies, Sprites and Elves, who, like the Phantom Dancers of Germany, delight to entrap travelers into their realms and torment them with their mischievous antics. Having the power of transferring the spirit, they often, in their malicious gambols, give life to the newly dead. Statues, rocks and trees are seen fantastically moving in the forest, but it is only during the DAY they retain their fictitious existence; at the approach of NIGHT they resume their immobility.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

Advices from Europe, of three days' later date, are received by the steamship America, whose arrival at Halifax we announce in another part of this morning's paper. The news is not important. In Great Britain and Ireland the elections were almost over, and though the majority for Ministers is large and decisive, the precise strength of each party, owing to the great influx of new members, will not be known until a test vote has been taken. According to the London Post, organ of Lord PALMERSTON, there were 338 Liberals returned; 74 Liberal Conservatives, and 206 Conservatives proper. The British screw steamship Agamemnon, 90 guns, and of 3,000 tons, is to be employed to lay down the Atlantic telegraph cable, in conjunction with the Niagara. It is expected that the entire cable will be completed in June, and will be laid in July. The news from the Continent of Europe presents no feature worthy of special comment. It is alleged that Spain has expectations of receiving both moral and material support from France and England in the projected war with Mexico, but we doubt the statement.

The panic in St. Paul's and St. Peter's, Minnesota, arising from the rumors of a general rising of the Indians at the North, has subsided. The Superintendents of Indian Affairs announce in letters to the papers of the Territory, that the payment of the moneys due the Indians will settle all the troubles, and that the force detailed for the protection of life and property is not needed. The reported massacre of settlers in Northern Minnesota is now said to have been confounded with that which happened in Iowa some time since.

Another horrible wife-murder occurred recently, near Manhattan, Putnam County, a brief account of which we publish this morning. ALECK. MULINIX, who had been married but three weeks, killed his wife by striking her upon the head, twice with a shovel and once with an axe. No cause is assigned.

The large store of E. WEISHIMER, at Jefferson, in the town of Callicoon, Sullivan County, was destroyed by fire on Monday night, between 11 and 12 o'clock, with nearly all its contents—there being but about $800 worth of goods saved. The loss is unknown.

The inhabitants of Ulster County experienced a most extraordinary storm on Monday and Tuesday. Snow fell there to the depth of two feet, and all the roads on the western border of the County are traversed with sleighs. The cold was also intense. No April storm was ever known to be so severe in Ulster County.

The official returns of the Gubernatorial election in Connecticut show the following vote: HOLLEY (Union) 81,792; INGHAM, 31,156. HOLLEY's plurality, 546.

The argument on the motion of Mayor WOOD for an injunction against the newly-appointed Police Commissioners, was resumed yesterday evening, at 4 o'clock, before Judge DAVIES, and concluded at twenty minutes to 10. Mr. FIELD addressed the Court in opposition to the motion, and was followed by Mr. O'CONOR for the Mayor, in reply. The Judge intimated that he would modify the terms of the injunction so far as to except the action of the Commissioners outside New-York County, provided such action did not interfere with the property or Police Department of New-York City, as at present constituted. The Counsel meet again to-day at 10 o'clock A. M., to settle the terms of the modification.

The Aldermen's Committee on the Landing Places of the Sound and North River steamboats, met last night, pursuant to adjournment. Owners or agents of the boats had been notified to attend, but none were present. Mr. HENRY BERGH, owning property fronting the North River, informally advocated the removal of the landing places, contending that as business was rapidly moving up town, the landing facilities of these important lines should no longer be confined to the "lower angle" of the City. The Committee will meet again on Thursday next, at 2 o'clock P. M., when, if remonstrants fail to appear, the hearing in favor of removal will be continued.

The Board of Councilmen voted last night to raise the salary of the Mayor to $5,000, of the City Inspector to $5,000, of the Croton Aqueduct Engineer to $5,000, of the Croton Department Resident and his Assistant to $3,000, of the Street Commissioner to $5,000, dating from Jan. 1, 1856, and of the Assistant to $2,500. The consideration of the Ordinance to reorganize the Street Department was made the special order of Monday next.

The steam frigate Niagara, after two days' steaming, came to off the Light-Ship yesterday, and put on board a tug from the City some half-dozen persons who went out to witness her trip of trial. She proves to be a perfect success, fleet, manageable, and a beauty everyway. Nine o'clock she had headed for Greenwich, to get her share of the inter-oceanic telegraphic cable.

In the Court of Sessions, yesterday, nothing was done, and yet considerable business was transacted. The negro DORSAY's trial, for murder, was postponed till to-day; so was MILLER's, charged with murdering his wife; so was WOGAN's, for arson; so was Alderman WILSON's, and Alderman MCCONNELL's, and PATRICK CALLAGHAN's and JOHN E. ENRIGHT's, and THOMAS HOLLAND's, and several others, for riots, assaults and batteries on election day. Everything went over till May, and the April jury were dismissed.

The schooner Merchant was arrested, yesterday, by the United States Marshal, while passing out to sea, on suspicion that she was intended for the slave trade. There appears to have been considerable ground for the suspicion. Besides the schooner, her captain and crew, and the steaming John Birkbeck and crew, who took out men for her to the Hook, were all arrested, and the men locked up for examination.

One of the patent street-sweepers was tried yesterday afternoon in Wall street, where it worked well. Meanwhile, the streets are dirty enough to require the services of a dozen machines, and more men and carts than seven to be at the command of the Contractors.

The testimony in the French Railroad Frauds case was concluded yesterday before United States Commissioner BETTS. Counsel will sum up to-day.

The case of the officers of the ship Cultivator arrested on a charge of cruel treatment to their sailors, was to have been heard yesterday, but it was postponed.

The Grand Spiritual Concert was a success, last night, though it was announced that the amateurs who promised would not assist in the cantata, because they sang in the churches, and did not feel at liberty to sing staves of Spiritualistic origin. Mr. PERKINS played the violin, on one occasion; his instrument was one constructed under the direction of a spirit which once quickened the flesh of a distinguished fiddle-maker. It behaved well under Mr. PERKINS' bow. Academy Hall was full, and the audience in excellent temper. Miss HARDINGE's Address on Music was beautifully declaimed. Al oge her, the spirits made a good hit with their Concert.

Mr. Cushing's Speech.

We publish in full Hon. CALEB CUSHING's address in acknowledgment of the cordial greeting which welcomed him back to Massachusetts. It is precisely such a performance as all who know anything of him would have expected. It is eloquent, bold in its political speculation and admirably calculated to enlist the sympathy and stir the ambition of the masses who compose the body of Young America. Of course this praise implies that it embodies much that is just and true, for the masses of the people, either in this country or in any other, will not permanently and thoroughly sympathize with any sentiment concerning national growth which contradicts the fundamental principles of justice and good faith.

Mr. CUSHING spoke mainly upon two points—first, in vindication of his own frequent changes of party connection, and secondly, in vindication of the theory of the indefinite expansion and extension of American institutions. He said nothing absolutely new upon either point, but he put into a very forcible and impressive form whatever has hitherto been said on both. In this country, he said, political parties are divided upon such temporary, unimportant and short-lived issues that it is impossible for any man to adhere tenaciously to any one without falling far behind the sentiment of the country, and becoming a bigoted devotee of forms instead of an active, efficient partaker in the work of public progress. Even parties themselves, he says, are constantly shifting their ground,—often changing places with each other, and scarcely ever, for ten years at a time, holding the same position. Under these circumstances he holds himself fully justified in acting upon his best judgment upon each issue as it is presented. Upon the other point Mr. CUSHING enlarges and fortifies the sentiment he has repeatedly advanced in his public life, that it is the destiny of the United States to "march, march, march" forward in the work of civilizing and conquering the continent. And he calls upon Massachusetts to abandon the minor and secondary issues on which, hitherto, she has fixed her thoughts and wasted her efforts, and to take the lead in conducting the American Republic to the consummation of its destiny.

Just at present the prospect that Massachusetts will act upon Mr. CUSHING's advice does not seem to be very promising. There is, however, truth enough in what he says of the constant and rapid changes of party to render it far from safe to make any very confident predictions concerning the future.

England and America.

Our faith in post-prandial enthusiasm does not rise into the fervor of fanaticism, and we rarely find ourselves provoked by it, into the mood of that celebrated lady in Miss LESLIE's story, who was always prepared to exchange umbrellas and swear eternal friendship on the smallest hint of congeniality.

We cannot, therefore, persuade ourselves that the affectionate ebullitions of international sympathy and good-will which mingled in genial uproar with the agreeable popping of champagne corks, and the inspiriting strains of the "Roast Beef of Old England," at the dinner of the St. George's Society in this City, on Thursday evening, do really announce the arrival of an era of absolute good feeling and generous mutual intelligence between the two greatest commercial nations of the globe.

For many causes are still at work, and will long continue to be at work, to darken the atmosphere between ourselves and our transatlantic kinsmen; and those who most sincerely deplore this fact, and most earnestly desire that it may cease to be a fact, should be the last people in the world to ignore its existence.

The effects of the mediæval system of international intercourse are still most plainly discernible, even in the temper and the character of the nations which have most nearly emancipated themselves from that system. No very considerable portion of the people either of England or of America have yet attained a conviction that the honesty, justice, and simplicity which form the truest and safest ground of action in the private dealings of man with man, are also the surest and strongest weapons of diplomacy in the affairs of nation with nation. Still smaller is the number of those, in either country, who are ready to believe that the Governments of England and America are prepared to do so much as to attempt to inaugurate a fair and honorable policy in their mutual relations. There is no journal to be found, on either side of the water, so weak and worthless, that, when it prognosticates disputes and difficulties between the two nations, or denounces some new outrages of "British aggression and perfidy," or some new invention of "American duplicity," it will not find almost as many believers as it finds readers. Nor do journals which are neither weak nor worthless disdain to make use of the ignorance, the prejudices, and the "little faith," of either nation, when they wish to produce an impression, or to excite a sensation.

So long as any vestige of the old internecine spirit survives in the passionate popular heart of England and America, that spirit, we may be sure, will continue to be a basis of political speculation to adventurers and intriguers of every grade. Kindred with this great difficulty is another hardly less vexatious, and hardly less influential. The science of political economy, which has not by any means attained perfection in England, is still in its infancy among ourselves. Its most simple and fundamental propositions are still to be debated, and a knowledge of them is still to be diffused, not among the bulk of the people alone, but among the controlling minds of the country, among the journalists and the statesmen who amuse themselves with planning our Future for us, as well as among the industrial millions who are really preparing it.

If nothing worse than hugbears and blunderings, however, were in the way of a frank and sensible mutual understanding between England and America, the "more than cordiality, the coöperation" in all great national purposes which Lord NAPIER announced to be the desire of his heart and the aim of his diplomacy, might be a less impossible dream than it now is.

But in the very constitution of our Republic, or rather in the actual political condition of the confederacy, a mischief lurks to nullify the force of all the natural and wholesome ties which should draw even more closely together the interests and the sympathies of England and America. So long as a considerable section of the Union shall cling to its present insane and anti-progressive policy—so long as the Institution of Slavery shall be the darling and the delight of fifteen American States—so long will it be simply absurd to attempt to establish a positively hearty and honest system of relations between Great Britain and the United States.

For upon what must such a system rest? Absolutely on a community of convictions and a similarity of aims. Not by "entangling alliances," nor by "written engagements" of any sort, can a real and effective alliance of nations be established, but only, as Lord NAPIER most truly and eloquently said in his speech on Thursday night, by a positive sympathy of the national heart of each people with the other, in the objects of the national pursuit and the tendencies of the national life. England and America must find their real union and the sure ground of an honorable "coöperation" in the direction of liberal and enlightened progress. Just in proportion to the development of just and reasonable ideas of society and of government in Great Britain, has been the advance in Great Britain of intelligent good feeling toward America; and nothing can arrest this advance but a reactionary movement in the English mind or in the mind of America towards illiberal, unjust and unreasonable notions of human rights and of the constitution of society. Now we only speak the truth, which every observing man has gathered from the events of the last few years, when we say that there is vastly more danger of such a reactionary movement on our side of the Atlantic than on the other. It is this danger which constitutes the vital interest of our politics at the present moment; and it is this danger chiefly, which makes us as slow to respond to the anticipations as we are swift to indorse the aspirations of Lord NAPIER's manly and sensible speech at the St. George's dinner. We believe that Lord NAPIER, on that occasion, truly represented the sentiments of the educated and influential classes of English society; that the disposition of the English Government, and of Englishmen generally, toward this country, is not only friendly and just, but sincerely cordial and hearty.

But we know, and Lord NAPIER knows, and all intelligent people both in England and in the Free States of America know, that the attitude recently assumed by the friends of the un-American, undemocratic and retrogressive institution of Slavery is utterly repulsive to all the instincts which tend to bring the two countries into harmony; and it is idle to talk of either cordiality or coöperation in any available form or degree between us, until the regular course of our progress shall have been resumed, the obstinate absurdity of the fanatics of Slavery rebuked by us as contemptuously as the idiocies and bigotries of old Toryism have been rebuked by our cousins over the sea, and the discomfortable company of the Toombses, and the Keitts, the Atchisons, and the Masons consigned to the same "dark pool of despondency" in which the whole top-hooted, hard-drinking, corn growing generation of the "country members" have been laid to rest forever.

The Transatlantic Telegraph.

Since the subsidence of the Nicaragua fever, the Atlantic Ocean Telegraph seems to have become the topic of the day, and with more justice, as the operations of the submarine wire will give a stronger and healthier impulse to commerce and industry than the greatest possible successes of fillibusterism. Lord NAPIER, in his speech at the St. George's dinner, intimates the possibility of a time when resident diplomatic representation between Great Britain and America will become unnecessary. We are inclined to believe that the first message sent by the submarine cable from St. James to Washington will be the consummation prophesied by Lord NAPIER. His Lordship intimates that the cable is the only "entangling alliance" in which he wishes to involve the two nations. He does not say, however, that in future the Bulwers, the Cramptons and the Napiers will be replaced by the telegraph, and that lengthy protocols may in future be set aside by telegraphic signals, few and forcible. For example, Lord PALMERSTON hears that Mr. BUCHANAN is getting angry with him. He telegraphs before breakfast across the Atlantic:

President BUCHANAN—Sir:—What is the matter? With distinguished consideration, &c., yours,
PALMERSTON.

President BUCHANAN in reply:

JAMES BUCHANAN.

PALMERSTON in answer:

Nothing. Only keeping a few ships there, because we don't know where else to send 'em. With assurances, &c.,
PALMERSTON.

There is a saving of £10,000 and four months' time in five minutes, at a cost of one or two hundred dollars. It may be necessary, for a few years, to keep up a formal representation, and to write diplomatic letters in order to maintain the dignity of the cloth and the "honor" of the two nations; but these letters will never be read, and certainly not published in the newspapers unless well paid for; the real business will be transacted in a few minutes by the clerk of the wire.

Take another instance. Vast sums of money change hands in England and America upon the receipt of news by steamer of a rise or fall in the prices of cotton or breadstuffs. These sudden changes and fluctuations do incalculable injury to the regular industry and business of the community. New-York is to England very much what San Francisco is to New-York—the distance, times and uncertainty of advices, make a safe and regular commerce almost impossible, even with all the appliances and saving of steam navigation. Place the telegraph wire at the disposal of the Press; let the prices in Liverpool and New-York be exchanged every morning between the two Continents; immense speculative operations will be broken up, and the surface of the market no longer suffered to rise in floods of artificial prosperity, followed by the ebb of ruinous depression. These violent fluctuations in the human soul (for it is there, and not in the material world they take place) destroy that stability and rectitude of principle and idea—bear witness California—which is the foundation of national and commercial prosperity.

When we consider the magnitude and variety of our relations with Great Britain, and with Europe generally, it would appear as though a hundred distinct telegraphic wires, working night and day without intermission, would be required to complete a full connection. The business of a single manufacturing county in New England is oftentimes enough to keep a wire profitably employed. What then may be expected from an interconrse by wire between the Eastern and Western hemispheres? New-York will enjoy all the commercial advantages of a spiritual presence in London, with a material remoteness preventing the possibility of political and personal entanglements. This is a kind of "spiritual communication" quite as wonderful and unaccountable as the pretended "revelations" of spirits. If "spirits" were able to communicate with us, they have nothing to sell, (except devotees,) no consols, silks, broadcloth or liquors; the only kind of wool they deal in is that which is pulled over the eyes;—but the "spirits" in London, Liverpool, Havre and Hamburg, though invisible to us, are very useful and agreeable spirits, and their communications in regard to "drafts at sight," "breadstuffs" and the "price of cotton" may be attended to with profit.

Seriously speaking, the Oceanic Telegraph is certainly the most spiritual invention of the century, and if successful, appears likely to work changes of a remarkable character in the social relations of the great community of nations. England will be brought very near to us, but the difference of a few minutes gives all Europe the benefit of an equal proximity. From Sebastopol to St. Petersburg, by telegraph; thence to Berlin, Paris, London, New-York; in six hours we shall receive a message from the Crimea! A Boston and Philadelphia Company have undertaken to raise the Russian ships-of-war sunk in the harbor of Sebastopol. They sailed from New-York a few days ago, with their diving and pneumatic machinery. Perhaps they will be able to communicate and receive advices from Boston by the submarine telegraph!

A vessel from New-York, the moment she touches at Liverpool, receives on board a telegraph message from the owners and shippers, giving instructions in regard to the disposition of the cargo as if they were personally present. They have the prices of the hour!—they are no longer dependent upon consignees. The same will happen for French, German and British cargoes at New-York. Sight drafts will disappear between America and London; the telegraph will send news of the sailing of the vessel bearing the drafts, and every bill have virtually ten days' grace. This alone must serve to equalize the money market.

The facilities offered by the telegraph will not, however, tend to lessen the number of postal communications. Its effect will be rather to increase them. Almost every message will imply that papers have been sent or letters written. A message by the wire will be the yes or no which includes a previous correspondence. These slight and subtle considerations, mere questions of time, convenience and a good understanding, must do more toward augmenting and extending the trade between Europe and America than any conceivable treaties or diplomatic arrangements.

Nothing in our times has served more completely to illustrate the shallowness and falsity of modern diplomacy, even in the hands of able men, than what has been called the "Central American Imbroglio." Had the Submarine Telegraph been laid five years ago between America and England, what a world of folly, what frightful displays of Senatorial and Parliamentary ignorance, what floods of patriotic, Anti-British nonsense in the daily press, what embittering of national sentiment—might have been saved by the exchange of a few brief and pithy messages under the bellies of the deep-sea fish!

Our Military Parades.

The grand parade of the target companies on Thursday, though ludicrous under many aspects, was, we think, very useful as showing what they might be made under proper management. Twelve thousand men, most of them average shots, all in comfortable circumstances, and in possession of some education, and of a certain amount of esprit de corps, are certainly the raw material of an excellent body of troops. But no one who saw them defile along Broadway can have escaped a pang, let it be ever so short, at the lamentable proofs afforded by their dress and style of marching, of the woeful mistake they make regarding their true capabilities and real value.

Will all enthusiastic targeteers and firemen be good enough to feel assured, once for all, that ball practice on an occasional holiday drill, for a day or two in the year, feathers, tinsel, and miserable attempts to keep step, will never make them worth two cents a day as troops to act in masses? Their stiff bearing, their "lock step," their shouldered arms, and enormous bands of music, their beplumed and embroidered "staff," are all so many weak imitations of something they cannot be anyhow. Good, or even middling heavy infantry to form in a line of battle, they never will be. But excellent rifle men and skirmishers they may become if they like; and if it can be only knocked into their heads in some way that skirmishers are every year playing a more important part in warfare, that the improvements which are being made in artillery and projectiles of all sorts, renders it likely that in a short time close formations will be no longer possible, and that battles will be decided by sharpshooters en tirailleur, that America is the country of all others in the world, where manœuvres en masse would be most difficult, and bush-fighting most effective, and that patriotic volunteers can in no way show themselves so patriotic as in becoming smart skirmishers:—As soon as this desirable change takes place in the opinions of our martial youth, parades like that of yesterday will never take place. The unhappy "staff" who seemed so uncomfortable on their wretched jades, with the infantry swords hooked up under their arms; some in boots long enough for FREDERICK the Great, and some in trowsers too short for Smike, with uniforms of as many patterns as beshi-bazouks fresh from the plunder of the slain, will disappear from the scene. We shall no longer have the traffic in Broadway interrupted by the slow and painful defile of a series of awkward squads, each headed by a band as big as itself, and making the day hideous by a thousand discordant strains.

Instead of these absurdities and tomfooleries, more worthy of boys of ten than grown men, we would strongly recommend the leaders in this most meritorious, but most ill-directed movement, to encourage target practice amongst the different companies by all means in their power. It is a useful and healthy pastime. Let the companies be organized in regiments, brigades and divisions, and parade some place in the country half a dozen times a year, the rougher the ground the better. Let all adopt a loose, dark, serviceable dress, suitable for riflemen, and discard totally all attempts to imitate the stiff and starched gait and habiliments of troops of the line. There could be no better costume, as far as make is concerned, than that of the French Zouaves, having the fez cap, and instead of that, we would recommend the hat of the Sardinian "bersaglieri." Let them march invariably in open order, at the pas accéléré, without any attempt at keeping step, and with arms at the trail. Let them learn, in short, thoroughly the leading features in the drill of the French Chasseurs de Vincennes—learn to advance across country in a skirmishing line, keeping their distances and obedient to the trumpet call—to take advantage of inequalities on the ground, of bushes, hedges, stumps and stones; to load while lying flat, to dig rifle-pits and lie close in them, to push on under the fire of artillery, and dodge round-shot; to do well the work of an arm of the service which, in a war in this country, is precisely that arm which an enemy would have most reason to dread. Nothing could be more healthful and invigorating than exercise like this. No sort of drill is so easy to learn, and less irksome, and in no way could these 12,000 young men, who made such a sad exhibition of themselves on Thursday, render such good service to the State. As good chasseurs, used to the country, inured to long marches and tolerably good marksmen, such a force as this would render the advance of 40,000 of the best disciplined troops in Europe impossible in any part of the State of New-York. As they are, we cannot help feeling that a strong battalion of Zouaves would eat them up in half an hour. If they tell us that they don't pretend to be real soldiers, we reply that we know of no more stupid and childish occupation for adults than playing at soldiers.

THE CORONER RELIEVED.—One result of the inquest now pending into the conduct of Coroner CONNERY, has been to share the odium of some of the worst of his acts with other parties. The testimony published in the TIMES of yesterday shows that, in regard to the indecent treatment of Mrs. CUNNINGHAM, the Coroner was less to blame than some others. It was perfectly proper, and indeed necessary, that, under the circumstances of the case, some examination should be made, as it might reveal traces of the personal participation which Mrs. C. was at first supposed to have taken in the murder of Dr. BURDELL. But precedent, common sense, and common decency, required that such an examination should have been made by ladies—instead of which Coroner CONNERY committed the task to his son JOHN, a Police Officer, and Dr. WOODWARD. This of itself was sufficiently outrageous. But for the manner in which the duty was performed the Coroner does not seem to have been responsible. The credit and honor of that belong exclusively to Dr. WOODWARD, who seems to have supposed the fact of his being a physician a sufficient excuse for the widest departure from common decorum, and the most flagrant disregard of delicacy. Whether his brethren of the medical profession share this opinion, may, we hope, be doubted.

A FREE-SOIL PAPER IN TEXAS.—The Galveston News is very severe in its denunciations of the Quitman Free Press, a newspaper published in Wood county, for its "open and bitter hostility to Southern institutions." It professes to support the Southern Democracy, and still ventures to believe, and what is still more important to say, that the interests of Texas would be greatly promoted by substituting free for slave labor. And to render the case still more alarming, the News says that the Democracy of Wood county have elected the editor of this same anti-Slavery paper to represent them in State Convention. The News is candid enough to concede that "if the people of that section of the State, or any large number of them, desire to rid themselves of the institution of negro slavery, we suppose they have perfect right to do so in a legitimate and constitutional manner." This is a stretch of common sense which has not been attained in many of the Southern States. The time will come, however, when the question will be canvassed as preëminently one of home interest.

Tall Oaks and Little Acorns.

We meet—we had almost said daily—long-faced, discouraged, broken-down merchants and business men, who, in attempting to grow fast from little acorns to tall oaks, have embarked in speculations in land, breadstuffs, stocks, bonds, coal mines, ships, or in some hocus pocus, puff ball of a stone-dressing (or cheating) machine, by the gains of which they have had dreams and visions of a palace on Fifth-avenue, and other "fixins" to match. With open eyes the game has been played, but the result has been bankruptcy and utter ruin. Starvation now stares them in the face; their former good health, perhaps, has failed them; their family must be scattered; and the future is the very blackness of darkness.

The above is from the Independent. And yet, when the TIMES exposes the machinery by which "merchants and business men" are entrapped into these bogus speculations,—the Independent protests with great show of dignity, against the discourtesy and incivility which such a style of journalism indicates! It evidently believes in preaching against sin in the general,—and avoiding utterly the undignified style of pointing out individual evil for the purpose of warning the public against it.

Another Horrible Wife-Murder.

A young woman, the wife of ALECK. MULINIX, living near Manhattan, Putnam Co., was recently found mangled in a most shocking manner, under circumstances which left no doubt that she had been most foully dealt with by her husband. The facts are these: MULINIX rose, in the morning, to his father's house, and told him somebody had killed his wife while he was gone to feed his horse in the stable. He told others that his wife fell on the stove. Those who went to the house found that the woman's skull was broken, and she had received three blows, one with a shovel and two with an axe. She was breathing, but senseless, when first seen by the neighbors, and lived only about two hours. The breakfast table was standing with the victuals upon it, and the biscuits were still warm, therefore the murder had been committed but a short time. The parties had been married but three weeks.

SEIZURE OF A SUPPOSED SLAVER.

Thirteen of her Men Arrested.

The Steam-Tug John Birkbeck Libelled and her Crew Secured—Marshal Rynders in a New Character.

OTHER NEW-YORK SLAVERS.

On Thursday the schooner Merchant was seized while on her way out of the harbor, and detained on suspicion that she was intended for the slave trade. She is a fast sailing Baltimore-built schooner, formerly in the coasting trade between New-York and Richmond, and lately fitting out, at Pier No. 43, on the pretence that she was bound for Corsica.

The Merchant is one of several vessels now in port that have excited the curiosity, and caused some anxiety in the minds of the U. S. District-Attorney and Marshal RYNDERS for several days past. The general belief that there has been for some time a large number of vessels fitted out for the slave trade in this port, which the United States officers have not been able to detect, put a keen edge upon the wits of our new Marshal, who determined to mark his inauguration into his office by a brilliant achievement, whenever a genuine opportunity should offer. The Merchant was suspected, and the Marshal first satisfied himself that there was good ground for suspicion, and then made arrangements to prevent her getting away. Taking his brother, who is one of his Deputies, into his confidence, they altercated in keeping careful watch upon the movements of the suspected vessel. It was supposed that she would attempt to get under way on Wednesday night. A steam-tug had gone up to tow her out; Capt. FAUNCE, of the Revenue Cutter, was in waiting in the harbor, and up went Marshal RYNDERS to keep an eye on her, and if necessary give directions for her seizure. He was disguised, appearing on the dock in the character of a countryman—a difficult rôle for him to play, as one would have supposed—but he succeeded in fact, as the theatrical and musical critics say, he made a decided hit. The crew of one of the vessels near by were perfectly delighted with the "greenery" and the fat colored brother who held the position of cook, came very near having a fit of apoplexy, so great was his merriment at the refreshing innocence of our countryman. To play his part well, and at the same time get the information he wished, he found it necessary to be looking anxiously for a brother who was employed upon a steamboat that stopped somewhere in New York. Going along side a vessel that lay near the Merchant, he inquired of those on board if there was a steamboat anywhere around.

A man on board, whom the Marshal believed was stevedore, answered that there had been one there a little while before, but that it had gone away, and concluded by asking Countryman what he wanted with a steamer?

He said he had a brother on one and he wanted to find him.

STEVEDORE—Do you know the name of the steamer?

COUNTRYMAN—No; but I know she stops somewhere here in New-York.

The stevedors laughed, and several of the crew—the colored cook included—did the same. They were sure they had a countryman of the most unsophisticated character, so they asked him to get on board.

Our countryman demurred. They might carry him away out to sea, and then he wouldn't find his brother.

They assured him they would not, and, finally, after several well-executed ineffectual attempts, he ascended the side of the ship, but, although they invited him to go below, he would remain astride the guard, ready to jump off, should they attempt to carry him out to sea. He had heard enough of the tricks of New-Yorkers upon countrymen, and he did not intend they should "fool" him. Finally, however, he was induced to go forward, where they showed him the anchor and told him its use. The countryman appeared to receive some idea of what it was, but he had never seen one so large, and could not understand how they could get it up after once letting it down. They inquired "Where he was raised?" He told them "About two hundred miles North—above Albany, a good ways." He had come down to see his brother, who was employed on a steamboat, and he had been on board of more than twenty that day without finding him. He was bound to find him—"darned if he was't," if he had to look all night, because he must go back hum in the morning. The ship's crew winked at each other and the colored man roared. The countryman was mightily amazed at the sight of so many ships, and was curious to know where they were all going to. They told him some wonderful stories about many of the ships, the height of waves during a storm, and all about whales and porpoises and sharks. At length they came to the object of the countryman's affections. They pointed out the little schooner, and told him she was a "Blackbird." The countryman wanted to know if they caught blackbirds in her. They laughed again. The colored brother put down his saucepan and roared again. They asked him if he didn't know what a blackbird was. He thought he did. He had caught more than one. But what do you mean by calling that little vessel a blackbird? asked the countryman.

STEVEDORE—Why she's going to Africa after niggers.

COUNTRYMAN—What! she go to Africa! She ain't big enough.

STEVEDORE—Just the kind for that job.

COUNTRYMAN—Why she couldn't carry mor'n fourteen or fifteen.

STEVEDORE—Oh, yes she could. She could carry three hundred.

COUNTRYMAN—What! Why they'd starve. They couldn't get anything to eat.

STEVEDORE—They've got the stuff to feed them on board now.

COUNTRYMAN—What do they feed African niggers on?

STEVEDORE—On rice and such things. They've got lots on board now, in boxes and barrels.

COUNTRYMAN—But suppose the niggers didn't want to come and kicked up a row, what then?

STEVEDORE—Oh they've got lots of shackles on board—I saw them taken on board.

COUNTRYMAN—What's shackles?

STEVEDORE—Why handcuffs to put around their wrists and keep them still.

COUNTRYMAN—Oh, yes! when is she going?

STEVEDORE—She was going to-night, but now she aint going until to-morrow.

The countryman was now anxious to find his brother, and, as they had treated him very kindly, before leaving, he asked them to take a drink. They went off with him for that purpose. But the countryman would not go into the saloon. He would give the money for the drinks, but he wouldn't go in. He had heard about the "garrotters." They laughed again, went in and smiled, and the countryman departed, and soon afterwards resumed his real character—Marshal RYNDERS. On Thursday morning they were all on the alert, but the Merchant was underway before the Marshal could get on board his steamer, the Satellite, which was following the Merchant, which was in tow of the George Birkbeck. They passed down within fifty yards of the Revenue Cutter, for the purpose of discovering whether they were suspected. Finding all quiet on the cutter, they passed on and when just below the narrows, the towboat cast off; and soon afterwards another steamtug, the John Birkbeck, appeared with some Portuguese and Spaniards, who had not ventured to board the schooner at her dock. As the wind was light and they were anxious to get to sea, the John Birkbeck took her in tow as far as the Hook.

All this time the Satellite had been in motion, and soon she reached her. Capt. FAUNCE put some of his men on board the Merchant, turned her back, and then gave chase to the John Birkbeck. He soon overtook her, seized and brought her and all on board to the dock, under arrest. When the John Birkbeck was brought alongside the Revenue Cutter, Marshal RYNDERS proceeded to search her. Four Spanish sailors were found secreted. One behind a large trunk and another in the water-tank, in the hold, near the boilers. He had a book with him on which were the names of several vessels suspected of being slavers. The Merchant had on board a large quantity of rice, extra casks, corn-meal, handcuffs and a good stock of what is necessary to a slaver. Her Commander, Capt. STROM, was not on board. A Mr. JONES was in command. Both the John Birkbeck and the Merchant were put under the surveillance of the Revenue Cutter. Mr. JONES and his men, and the crew of the steam-tug were taken to the Marshal's Office, and from there locked up for examination. A hearing will probably be commenced before U. S. Commissioner [illegible] found in the possession of one of the crew of the Merchant, who was discovered concealed in a water-cask, the names of several are recorded—a fact which confirms suspicions of the District-Attorney, and will doubtless lead to their seizure in due time. Of such vessels as it is proper to mention, we give the following particulars:

[illegible] of the affair regards suspicion [illegible] slave trade is established [illegible] It is a fact worthy of [illegible] ever, that in the memorandum [illegible]

The bark Clara B Williams, one of the boldest, went to sea during the present week. Information was first brought to the District-Attorney's office about three weeks ago that she was intending to embark on a slave expedition. The District-Attorney, accompanied by Capt. RYDERS, went to the Custom-House, and found that the bark was clearing for Boston. The person claiming to be her owner and captain was notified that she was suspected, and that if he cleared her there she would be seized. The revenue cutter Washington, under command of Capt. FAUNCE, was instructed by Capt RYDERS to keep a watch upon the vessel at Atlantic Dock, where she lay, and not to permit her to go away until she got out proper clearance papers On the first night that the watch was set—it was Saturday, the 11th inst.—Capt. RYDERS visited her twice. The captain of the bark promised that on the succeeding Monday the proper papers should be made out for her departure for Boston. In the meantime it was discovered that the party whose name appeared on the registry bond, and whose residence was given as in Robinson-street, of this City could not be found there or elsewhere. On Monday another party, claiming to be the Captain of the bark presented himself. He said the design of going to Boston had been abandoned, and asked to have the vessel cleared for Cuba. On account of this sudden change of destination, and since the second party could not account satisfactorily for the double captaincy, the Collector refused to clear her until full bonded security was given for the vessel. Mr. WEINBERG, of the firm of WEINBERG & WEEKS, was offered, subsequently, as the required security, but as he had been tried (though acquitted) on a charge of fitting out a Slaver, the Collector would not accept him alone. Another man was then obtained, and the vessel bonded,—upon which the Collector, two days ago, allowed her to depart.

Since the interference, at the Custom House, with the departure of the Clara B. Williams letters have appeared from Havana, alleging that parties had come on from that city to New York to negociate for the purchase of the vessel for the Slave-trade.

The Clara B. Williams was built in Baltimore in 1854, and is 331 tons She is a fine staunch bark, and has, till recently, been engaged in the West India trade. PETER V. KING & Co were her former owners—the names of her present owners are not given. She is valued at $18,000.

The brig Putnam suspected of being a Slaver left a few days ago, having cleared for Havana. She is an old vessel having been built in 1825 and is only 187 tons. Messrs EVERETT & BROWN were her owners previous to the present trip. Her present owners are not known. Her value is only $5,000. She used to be engaged in the Carthagena trade. The fact has been stated in letters from Havana that this vessel had been purchased by parties in Cuba to engage in the Slave trade.

The brig Ellen another suspected Slaver lies at the present time off the battery roads to start on a voyage to New-Orleans it is all-gred. Notice was given to her Captain of his being suspected yesterday, and a request sent up from her to the United States District Attorney to board her and examine her cargo. The examination will be made to-day.

Trial Trip of the Niagara—Entire Success of the Ship and her Engines.

The frigate Niagara started upon her trial trip on Wednesday, P. M., having on board—in addition to her officers and crew—Mr. MARTIN, the Engineer-in-Chief of the Government; Mr. MURPHY and partner, of the Fulton Iron Works Company, the constructors of her engine; and the reporter of the TIMES. The anchor was weighed at 4:15 P. M., opposite Bedlow's Island, and steamed down the Bay without sail, against a strong flood tide. She turned the South West Spit in a space of twice her length, showing a quick attention to her helm. In one hour and forty-five minutes she passed the point of Sandy Hook, and at 6:20 P. M. was outside the Buoys, being just 2 hours and 5 minutes from her anchor—distance, 20 miles. The engine performing from 36 to 38 revolutions, working without noise or jar, and indicating a successful run.

During the night the engine continued to perform well, there being a heavy head swell. The Engineer-in-Chief having given orders not to crowd the engines, and limiting the amount of coal for the night, only 31 to 33 revolutions per minute were made, but the ship made from 7 to 7.5 knots an hour. During the night only one ton of coal per hour was consumed, and all the furnace doors were kept open. 23d, at 9 A. M.; engine making 30 revolutions, speed 7.4 knots. At 9¼ the order to put sail on the ship was given, there being a light breeze from the S. W. At 10 o'clock all sail was set, and also going under steam; engine making 35 revolutions; ship going off finely 11 knots by the log, and as steady as a die. 11 A. M., speed by the log 12 knots, when the mainsail and fore and main staysail were set; engine making 38 revolutions; the wind light from W. S. W, and weather pleasant. At 12 M. the lat (by observation) was 39° 50', lon. 71° 55', ship going 12 knots, with 34 revolutions of engine. At 12¼ P. M. set fore topmast, and fore and main topgallant studding sails; ship kept off S. E.; speed 12 knots; revolutions 34 per minute. At 2:45 P. M. hauled the ship on a wind, when, as the braces were hauled taut and the sails were filled, carried away the mizzen topgallant mast and royal mast (one stick.) Took in the light sails; engine 34 revolutions, and speed of the ship 13 knots; engines giving entire satisfaction, and the ship performing admirably in every respect.

The performances of the ship and her engines were like the foregoing, up to 8 P. M., when the sails were furled, ship headed N. W., the yards pointed to the wind, and continued to steam through the night. A fresh breeze blowing from N. W. 24th.—The ship has made 7 knots through the night, with a strong head wind, with only 33½ revolutions of the engine, and steam 15 pounds per inch. The last five hours of the trip the engine was driven as high as 42 revolutions, and the ship logged an average of 10¼ knots. At 3 P. M. made the Highlands of Navesink, and at 7 P. M. stopped the engine to put passengers on board a tug for New-York.

The combustion of the Niagara's engines is entirely expended in the generation of steam. No smoke or flame issues from her smoke pipes, which throughout the trip have been perfectly cool. From careful examination of indicating diagrams, the evaporation is found to be 9¾ pounds water to one pound of coal. The engines were not slowed or stopped during the trip, and not a belt or screw was started throughout; the chief difficulty of propeller engines, caused by the speed of the shaft—hot journals—was escaped entirely; in a word, the Chief Engineer expressed entire satisfaction with the working of the engines. The Engineer in-Chief of the Government has written to the Secretary of the Navy, expressing entire approval of the engines, and of the manner in which the contractors, PEASE & MURPHY, have fulfilled the contract.

The Niagara, as a sailing ship, fulfilled the highest expectations of Capt. HUDSON and his officers. She is perfectly easy in a sea-way, and steers like a pilot-boat; she makes no impression upon the water, for forty feet from her stem, where there is the slightest ripple, and breaks the water in the wake of the fore-chains. She leaves a perfectly smooth wake behind her.

The Pilot of the Niagara was Mr. THOMAS ARDEN. The least water she had in passing over the Bar was 33 feet.

The Niagara stopped at the light house and put her passengers on board a tug, which brought them to the City. She probably started for England soon afterwards.

Contract for Carrying the Mail across the Isthmus of Panama—The Tehuantepec Turnpike—The New-Granada Difficulty—Ben. McCulloch as Governor of Utah, &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Friday, April 24.

A contract has been made with the Panama Railroad Company for the conveyance of the mail across the Isthmus of Panama, at $100,000 a year. This is a reduction of the former rate.

Two sets of Directors of the Sloo Tehuantepec Company have been appointed, and will complete the road to its destination.

LEONARD WRAY has taken his seeds of the Imphee, a variety of the Sorghum, to South Carolina, where they are to be extensively tried.

There was no Cabinet meeting to-day.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, April 23.

The Government, without making very hostile demonstration upon New Granada, will simply keep it quiet and prevent either its authorities or citizens from doing mischief to themselves or to American interests. The best guarantee for the security of passengers and property on the Isthmus is the presence of an American force. When the Granadians shall be really bent on breaking up the road, it will be time enough to place a line of posts and troops thereon, and to send the mail and passengers accompanied by a guard of mariners. But evidence is wanting that the intents of the Panama people are so wicked as has been represented. President PIERCE expected no outbreak, and prepared against it by sending down a naval force some eight or ten months ago. The truth is that there is very little reason to expect any outrage from the people; nor is it so clear, as we have been led to believe by Mr. CORWIN's report, that the Panama riot of the 15th April, 1856, was wholly unprovoked by the Americans. It is now some years since the transit was opened, and there had never arisen any trouble with the natives until the unfortunate day above-named, though the road is exposed to their mercy.

The Attorney-General, as it appears, took the Cusick and Ramsay claim out of the hands of the First Comptroller, Mr. WHITTLESEY. Mr. WHITTLESEY had it under consideration, and had required the attorney of the claimants, JOSEPH WILLIAMS, formerly of Tennessee, to produce his vouchers or proofs of the expenditure and the loss of the claimants, in that enterprise. No statement ever had been made out, by the attorney, of loss and damages, by reason of the violation of the contract, when the Attorney-General requested the Comptroller not to proceed further in the case until he should examine it.

There is a radical difference between the two officers as to the principle which controls the case. Mr. WHITTLESEY considered that as the contract was to be valid if approved by Congress, the act of Congress providing for the relief of the parties was an approval of it, and established its validity. The Attorney-General, on the other hand, assumes that there was no valid contract, because Congress had not approved it. Mr. WHITTLESEY, if he drops the case, will do it upon the ground that the claimants can shew no actual expenditures or losses in preparing to perform the contract.

Generally, the present Administration will be as obdurate against private claimants as the last. Mr. THOMPSON, of Indiana, was lucky to get through as early and as soon as he did. But his was a strong one, and admitted of little dispute. Mr. GUTHRIE was willing to pay his claim, as is said here, but it was President PIERCE who prevented it. Mr. HEADICK was mistaken in his statement that Mr. THOMPSON's suit against Mr. GUTHRIE was thrown out of Court. Mr. THOMPSON's counsel, Hon. REVERDY JOHNSON, took special exception to this allegation

So trifling and feeble is the opposition to the Administration from every quarter that a charge of corruption against it is a perfect God-send to the hundreds of Administration organs and defenders, many of whom have not yet got their share in the spoils, while others have yet to win their way to favor. A dozen Herricks a day would hardly suffice their greedy appetite for such scandal as will enable them to show their devotion to the Administration. X. Y. Z.

[FROM OUR REGULAR TELEGRAPHIC REPORTER.]

WASHINGTON, Friday, April 24.

The Governorship of Utah has been tendered Major BEN MCCULLOCH, and it is believed that he will accept the appointment. A letter is now on its way to him requesting his presence in Washington.

The design of the Administration is to pursue a peaceful policy toward Utah, in order that the laws may be executed, and the rights of every inhabitant in the Territory protected without recourse to arms.

The Postmaster General has concluded a contract with the Panama Railroad Co. to convey the mails across the Isthmus until the expiration of the present contracts with the Steamship Companies, two years hence. The rate is $100,000 per annum.

The Departments have acted in nearly all cases where the commissions of federal officers have expired.

Although the rotation principle is not intended to be applied to the minor offices, and removals are to be made only for cause—as so declared—the Departments continue to be overwhelmed with applications—the Post-Office especially. At this time 500 letters, at least, a week, with documents inclosed, are received, soliciting appointments.

The charges against Mr. IZARD, Governor of Nebraska, having been withdrawn, he will be removed on the ground of public expediency. It is probable that his successor will be chosen from a non-slaveholding State.

The Trans-Atlantic Telegraph Company.

HALIFAX, Friday, April 24

The Provincial Parliament has just passed a bill which concedes to the Atlantic Telegraph Company the exclusive right for fifty years, to land upon the shores of this Province submarine telegraph cables. We understand that bills of similar import have also passed the Legislatures of New-Brunswick and Maine.

Among the passengers by the America, from Liverpool, last evening, was CYRUS W. FIELD, Esq., of New-York, the energetic general manager of the Atlantic Telegraph Company, who returns after a brief visit to Europe, fully restored to health.

Burning of a Work-shop of the Maryland Penitentiary.

BALTIMORE, Friday, April 24.

A fire in the Maryland Penitentiary last night destroyed one of the workshops and a quantity of machinery. The loss is about $30,000. None of the prisoners escaped, though it was evidently planned by some of them with that view.

The Parade.

To the Editor of the New York Daily Times:

In your report of the Independent Parade of the Citizen Volunteers, in yesterday's TIMES, your reporter was wrong in saying that the right of the line was the Frontier Guard. The right of the line was the First Ward Independent Battalion.

FIRST WARD.

[illegible] over had in this country, takes her farewell [illegible] at Burton's Theatre. During the long time she has been in the country, she has been scrupulously true to her engagements with the public never, to our knowledge, having broken them on a single occasion. She has justly won the admiration of thousands of opera-goers, and on this, the last occasion of her appearance here, we hope they will rally round her.

BENEFIT.—Mr. W. E. BURTON, the most noted, in his line, on the American stage, takes his benefit to-night. "The Game of Love" will be produced for the occasion. It is only necessary to mention these two facts.

PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.—The last, and the best, concert of the season will take place to-night at the Academy of Music. BEETHOVEN's "Heroica Symphony," an Overture by LITTOLFF, and a selection from MENDELSSOHN's "Midsummer Night's Dream," are the instrumental features. Miss BRAINERD and Mr. H. C. TIMM are the soloists.

Telegraphic Cables Across the North River

The crossing of the North River has always been amongst the most expensive and serious difficulties in maintaining uninterrupted communication over the wires between this City and Philadelphia, and not less than $60,000 to $75,000 have been expended by the different companies in the erection of waste near forts Washington and Lee for the purpose of swinging the wires across the river, a stretch of about one mile, but all attempts of this kind to keep up a regular communication with the Jersey shore have failed. Within the last year or two the House Company have laid down a substantial submarine cable between Forts Washington and Lee, which has worked very successfully, and we now learn that Mr. HEISS, the obliging and excellent manager of the Magnetic Company's line, has just laid down two large and very fine cables from the foot of Thirteenth-street to the Jersey shore, which is thought to be a much better point for crossing the river than at the Forts, further up. Each of the cables contains three conducting wires, and although very heavy, the cables were laid by Mr. Heiss without difficulty or accident of any kind.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

BAR-ROOM BRAWLS—ATTEMPT TO KILL.

On Thursday night a disturbance took place about some beer in the grocery at the corner of Sixty-Fourth street and Tenth avenue, between Gustave Beaman, the clerk of the place, and one of the customers named Hipner Hipner, was ordered out, but not going at once, Beaman discharged at him a pistol heavily loaded with powder and shot. Twenty-six of the shot lodged in Hepner's knee and leg. The wounded man was taken to the Twenty-second Ward Station house where ten of the shot were extracted. Beaman was taken in custody. Hepner's wounds were are not regarded as fatal.

A RIOT.

A crowd of disorderly fellows got into a fight in the Bowery, near Fourth-street, on Thursday, while waiting for the target procession. They used stones, knives and clubs, quite freely, but did not do much injury. Capt. Mansfield of the Seventh-Ward Police was soon on the spot and arrested James O'Neil and Francis Burke, two participators in the disturbance who were yesterday held by Justice Brennan.

☞ Lieutenant MAURY, continuing in the Rural New-Yorker his remarks on the planting of sun flowers as a preventive of chills and fever in marshy districts, suggests that water-lilies planted in marshes would have a similar beneficial effect.

FINE ART.
READY-MADE CLOTHING, &c.
It has been aptly remarked by critics that good taste, being intuitive, gems of art were to be seen on the walls of even unpretending mansions, and that the best and purest taste was not always to be looked for in marble halls.
Apply the inference in the adornment of the outward man, and where, for a series of years, has been realized the discernment that has given eclat to the Ready-made Clothing business, and by productions the most recherché in style exerted a subjection to the old regimen in petticoated, let the community answer and be assured that our petition but prompts us to more strenuous endeavors in a determination to retain the supremacy heretofore awarded our clothing. MOORE'S RURAL NEW-YORKER.

When [illegible]
And mark as sight [illegible]
What whispers [illegible]
And learn to cultivate sweet Flowers?"
The Rural.

When Seed-Time comes with busy round
Of sowing grain and tilling ground
What gives advice with logic sound,
And tells of implements renown'd?
The Rural.

What has for all its chosen theme,
Domestic peace and lover's dream,
Makes Matron's duties lightsome seem,
Contentment o'er the hearthstone beam?
The Rural.

Long may the "Model Paper" reign!
Its noble standard ever maintain—
Successful be its new campaign,
And may all friends of Worth sustain
The Rural.

MOORE'S RURAL NEW-YORKER (thus truthfully and poetically portrayed by one of its fair readers) is a first class, high-toned and progressive AGRICULTURAL, LITERARY and FAMILY WEEKLY, popular in both Town and Country, having a bona fide circulation far exceeding that of any similar journal. This extraordinary success has been achieved by earnest and continuous efforts to furnish a journal which should EXCEL all others of its class in Merit and Usefulness, and by expending thousands of dollars annually for able contributors, superior illustrations, and systematic and extensive ADVERTISING. In other words, by the proper use of Mind and Money, THE RURAL NEW-YORKER has become an "institution" which is recognized and patronized by thousands who formerly supposed that the great cities—such as New-York, Philadelphia and Boston—were the only producers of influential and widely-circulated Newspapers. The "fixed fact," however, that THE RURAL has a far larger subscription than any Agricultural, Religious, or (with a single exception) Political weekly, published in said emporiums, proves that the Atlantic seaboard does not comprise ALL the ports in the great Ocean of American Journalism. Numbering among its regular Stated Contributors such able and eminent writers as Lieut. MAURY, Superintendent of the National Observatory; Rev. Dr. DEWEY, Professor of Chemistry, the Natural Sciences, &c.; Dr. FITCH, the distinguished Entomologist; T. S. ARTHUR and other celebrities in the fields of Science, Literature, &c., THE RURAL is literally and valuable to Scholars, Professional Men, &c., as well as to Farmers and others.

The AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT comprises more and better information relative to the culture of Fruits, Flowers and Vegetables than any other journal, and will prove interesting and valuable to every owner of a Garden or Orchard, whether in City or country.

Both the People and the Press pronounce THE RURAL the BEST JOURNAL OF ITS CLASS! Vide the following

NOTICES FROM PROMINENT JOURNALS:

From the Rochester Daily Union

Moore's RURAL NEW-YORKER.—The success of this "Rural" Weekly has never been paralleled in this or any other country. Though published in an interior city, this first class Agricultural, Literary and Family Journal begins its Eighth Year with an edition of over Fifty Thousand. It has subscribers and enthusiastic admirers in all parts of the land, from Canada to the Gulf, and at this time subscriptions are pouring in by the thousand per day.

From the New-York Recorder.

The Rural New-Yorker is a paper the fame of which is not a blot. Characteristically Agricultural it is, in the broadest sense, a Family Paper, one which may be admitted without doubts as to its tendency. It has an immense circulation and merits perhaps ever still.

From the Chicago Daily Democrat.

We would call attention to the advertisement signed D. D. T. MOORE as indicative of the place to get the best Farm and Firesde Journal in America. The Rural New-Yorker has justly earned all its scientific and devoted editor claims for it.

From the New York Evening Post.

The frequency with which we publish extracts from the Rural shows our own appreciation of it. Lieut. MAURY, Dr FITCH, and other eminent writers, are regular contributors to the paper.

From the New-York Times.

The Rural is a very valuable paper, eminently practical in its character, and pure in its tone. Deserves and is achieving abundant success.

From the Rochester Daily Democrat.

The Rural has attained the largest circulation of any paper of the kind in the country or the world; and this preeminence has been achieved by careful management, first-rate tact, judicious enterprise and liberality."

J. R. STAFFORD'S OLIVE TAR.—WE COPY from the following from the editorial columns of the Boston Daily Ledger, of Feb. 19, 1857. Mr. Barnard, the gentleman alluded to, is a prominent citizen of Boston:

J. R. STAFFORD'S OLIVE TAR.—In the multitude of curatives that are almost daily offered to the public, it is very difficult to make a selection of any one that will prove valuable for all the purposes for which it is recommended. But in our opinion one specific has been discovered for complaints of the Throat and Lungs, that seems to be of inestimable worth. It is J. R. STAFFORD'S OLIVE TAR. From a pamphlet setting forth its many claims on those inflicted with the diseases above named, we learn that this Remedy is not to be taken internally, after the ordinary methods, but is used by INHALATION and APPLICATION. In this unusual way it performs its soothing and healing offices on the THROAT, LUNGS, NERVES, MUSCLES, JOINTS, and SKIN. OLIVE TAR, it is claimed, contains an electro-magnetic power, which is capable of restoring to the system its lost VITALITY; and this is performed alike by the inhalation of its odor, and the outward application of its fluid. Several of our Physicians often employ it for STERNAL INHALATION, and its curative properties they well understand. We know of many cures it has performed in cases of Bronchial difficulties in Coughs, Colds, and complaints of a similar character, and we are able to give it our full recommendation.

"We are informed by our fellow-citizen, John M. Barnard, Esq., that during a fit of sickness last Winter, he had occasion to make use of the OLIVE TAR, and found it even more efficacious than he had ventured to expect. He caused about three tablespoonfuls to be placed in a saucer over a basin of boiling water, heated by a night-lamp, and found that its odor was not only a real DISINFECTANT of the sick room, but a most pleasant soother of the irritation of his Throat and Lungs. He improved immediately in his health, and now uses the OLIVE TAR as occasion may require, in the reservoir of his furnace, satisfied that its volatile odor is of great service in rendering the atmosphere of his house both sweet and healthy at all times."

The above assertions are also fully verified by Testimonials from the following well-known persons:

And of many others equally prominent.

J. R. STAFFORD'S OLIVE TAR is sold at 50 cents a bottle, by the STAFFORD OLIVE TAR COMPANY, No. 16 State-st., (East side Battery,) New-York, and by all druggists.

RHEUMATIC, NEURALGIC, AND ALL other pains cease when J. R. STAFFORD'S OLIVE TAR is applied, because OLIVE TAR contains electro-magnetism, which it transmits to the body, increasing its VITALITY.

THE COURTS.

Application for Injunction to Re[illegible] from resuming any Control o[illegible] Police Department—Probable Mod[illegible] of the Injunction.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Hon. Judge Davies

The argument on the motion on behalf of Fernando Wood, for an injunction against the newly appointed Police Commissioners, was resumed yesterday (Friday) evening at 4 o'clock. The Court-room was crowded with spectators. The British Minister, Lord Napier, occupied a seat beside the Judge on the bench.

Ex-Judge Edmonds submitted to the opposing counsel the following points, as presenting substantially his argument in favor of the injunction:

I. It is competent for this Court to interfere by injunction, and its power is founded upon this simple elementary principle, that the power of the Court to apply the remedy is coextensive with its jurisdiction over the subject matter. 4 Kent's Com., Sec 58, Karshaw vs. Thomson, 4 I. C. R., 609—2 Story, Eq. I., s. 900, b. and note.

II. Where a statute is in violation of the Constitution, it is in the power, and is the duty of the Court to pronounce it void, and redress an act already done, or prevent a contemplated one, as the nature of the case may require. Kent's Com., 448 453. Taylor vs. Porter; 4 Hill, 144. Newell vs. The People; 3 Selden, 97, 98, 109, 119; 1 Story on the Const., Ch 4, Cooley vs. Davies; 5 Kernitan, 360, Wynchamer vs. People; 1 . 488.

III. The act in question is in violation of the Constitution, and void.

IV. The whole scope and purpose of the Constitution in this respect is to decentralize power and scatter it abroad over the State, viz:

1. The Senators once chosen in four or eight districts are scattered into thirty two districts.

2. The Assemblymen are elected in single districts, and not in counties, by twos and tens, and the like.

3. The State officers are chosen by the whole people, and not appointed by the Governor or Legislature at the seat of Government.

4. Legislative powers are taken from the same centre and conferred on County Boards of Supervisors.

5. Even the Judiciary is divided into eight provincial Supreme Courts, instead of one central Court.

6. And much of the appointing power once belonging to the Council of Appointment, or the Governor and Senate, is now diffused by general election throughout the State, or in different divisions of it.

7. In execution of this general purpose provision was made for County and City officers, that they should derive their appointment from the local power.

The Constitution, article 10 section 2, provides that such appointment shall be either by the electors, or the authorities of the City or County.

2. But this act provides that all the police force of this City shall derive their office not from any local City or County authority, but from the central power of the State.

4. This is claimed to be justified on the ground that the statute provides for a larger territory than any county or city limits, and for such territory formed into a district, creates a new office; thus bringing it within the last clause of that section, "that all officers whose offices may be hereafter created by law shall be elected or appointed as the Legislature may direct."

To this I answer:

1. It is not a new office. There are now in this City, under the present law, a Board of Police Commissioners; a Chief of Police; Captains, Assistant-Captains, Sergeants, policemen and doormen; station-houses; duties defined; compensation provided; provision for appointments and removals and general superintendence.

In all this both systems are the same, so far as this City is concerned. The powers and duties, and even the names are the same.

2. In all this there is nothing now except the extension of the same system over a larger territory.

If the Legislature can avoid section 2 of article 10 by providing new districts, then these twinge must follow:

1. It cannot matter how much territory is included in the new district, a few feet will be as good as so many acres of miles.

2. Then by mingling New York and Brooklyn together and making one President for the two or six or the two, the power of selecting the Mayors may be taken from the people and given to the Governor.

3. So the Justices, civil or police, may be thus appointed and not elected.

4. So the Sheriffs Clerks, Surrogates and District-Attorneys may be appointed by the Governor by merely joining two counties, or even parts of them, only so that there is embraced in the district something more than the territory of one county, be it ever so little or so much.

5. In fine, all that would be required would be to make the same persons, who, at one moment were county officers and city officers, officers of such new district with the same name and the same powers, and then they could be appointed by the Governor and not in the territory or district.

6. The statute is, also, unconstitutional and void, because it appropriates private property to public use without just compensation.

Section 15 gives to the use of the new Board all the public police property, &c., now in the possession of the Police Department of this City.

The provision in that section as to ownership, &c., though it may leave the fee in the City, yet appropriates the possession to the purposes of this statute, and that possession is property and cannot be taken without compensation.

Mr. D. D. Field, for the Police Commissioners, said the only question he proposed to discuss was the question as to the jurisdiction of this court to entertain this action. Before this action was commenced the Counsel of the Corporation had asked him for his opinion in reference to the constitutionality of the act under which these Police Commissioners were appointed. Under these circumstances, (he had not,) until he had furnished the opinion, felt himself at liberty to discuss the question of its constitutionality in any agreement before the court. What he had to say, therefore, would be confined entirely to the question he had stated, viz: whether this court, irrespective of the question as to the constitutionality or unconstitutionality of the law, had any authority or jurisdiction to interfere in any action of this kind to grant this preliminary injunction. He denied the right in toto. He denied the authority of the court to sit one moment in the case. He denied its power to grant the injunction either as a preliminary or as a final one. This was an application for a provisional remedy; for an injunction previous to the trial and judgment. The power of the Court to award this provisional remedy was given by law and defined. It would be found in section 219 of the code, and was as follows: "When it shall appear by the complaint that the plaintiff is entitled to the relief demand, and such relief, or any part thereof, consists in restraining the commission or continuance of some act, the commission or the continuance of which, during the litigation, will produce injury to the plaintiff, a temporary injunction may be granted, restraining such act." Two things, therefore, must concur. It must be a case in which the complaint showed a state of facts upon which, looking at them with the mind of a Judge, he (the Judge) could pronounce that the plaintiff was entitled to the relief demanded; and it must further appear that the plaintiff was in that condition in which he could not safely wait the process of a trial and judgment, but should have a preliminary or provisional injunction to prevent injury to him in the interval.

The power of the Court to grant a writ of injunction was restricted by the code, and it was only in those cases in which, acting upon the doctrines of his Honor's predecessors, as they had existed in this country and had come to us from the country from which we had derived our jurisdiction, that he (the Judge) could allow an injunction in any case, under any circumstances and in favor of any party. He must first see whether is be a case in which such an injunction by judgment could ever go; and then there was this restriction, which did not exist before the Code, that it could not go as a provisional remedy until it was further established in the interim that it would not be safe to let the defendant act as he was proposing to act. This was the language of the Code, and the doctrine which had at last to be acted upon by courts of justice. (Case of the Chemical Bank, in Abbot's Reports.) According to the law as it existed in this country and in England, there was no such thing known as a suit in equity by a private person to get an act of the Legislature declared unconstitutional and to enjoin its execution. The whole prayer of the plaintiff here was simply this: "The said plaintiff, therefore, prays judgment against said defendants, that the said act of the Legislature, entitled as aforesaid, might be declared unconstitutional and void, and that the defendants and each of them might be perpetually enjoined and restrained from exercising any power and authority under the said act." That was the case and the whole of it.

Now, what was it that gave a court jurisdiction, and when had it jurisdiction of an action? It had jurisdiction of the action when it had jurisdiction of the party and of the subject both. Now, he denied, in the first place, that the subject of this action was one in which the Judge had any jurisdiction at all; and he denied, in the second place, that even if the subject were one over which the Judge had any jurisdiction, that the plaintiff was a party who could seek any relief, or if he sought it, that he could obtain it.

The subject of action was the relief demanded, and the cause alleged for the relief. He denied that the relief demanded here was a relief that could be given for the cause alleged. That relief was that the Judge should declare an act of the Legislature of this State—a cardinal branch of the Government—unconstitutional and void, and that he should issue an order enjoining these persons who held their authority under the Executive, and were agents of the Government, from executing that law. And the cause assigned was that those lawgivers had corruptly evaded the Constitution, and he (the Judge) was asked to try, as a question of fact, whether in the minds of the lawgivers there was an intention to evade the Constitution. Now, as to the right of a Court to declare an act of the Legislature unconstitutional. The only right the Court had, in judging of an act of the Legislature, was incidental, and must be in reference to some case before it. It was not direct, and never [illegible] been, and never [illegible] ment [illegible] ing due subordination [illegible] there any law in [illegible] before the Court was found to [illegible] the constitution, the constitution being the higher law is followed and the statute [illegible] There was no such head of jurisdiction [illegible] ever had been as an action brought for the purpose of declaring an act of the Legislature unconstitutional. This was shown sufficiently by the motion which had been brought by a member of the Legislature in reference to the Canal bill; it was a principle of the French courts, and was upheld in the decision of Judge Marshall in the case of Marbury vs. Madison.

Now, as to the remedy demanded, viz., the injunction. This was an action brought for no other purpose than to ask from the county an injunction against the execution of a law. When, he should like to know, was ever any such thing done before? There was no jurisdiction anywhere to sustain an action for an injunction against the execution of a law. The Legislature was superior to the Court; it could take away the right to grant injunction from the courts for all time to come, and was it to be conceived that it gave the Judges power to enjoin its own acts or to enjoin persons whom it had commissioned to perform certain acts? If the Judge might grant an injunction against these gentlemen, he might grant an injunction against the Governor or the highest officers of the State.

And besides, a judge sitting in equity could not grant an injunction except in cases affecting property. That was a universal principle. The right to an injunction was incidental to the question of property, and that was all. (Attorney General vs. the Mayor &c. of Liverpool, 1st Mill & Craig's R., p. 199. Opinion of Lord Cottingham, 4th Mill & Craig's R., p. 205.) In this country no judge ever dreamed that he could interfere by injunction save to protect property. (Bank of the United States vs. Osborne, Auditor of Ohio. [illegible] the action, fraudulent or fair, of the legislative department of the Government could not be inquired into. (Fletcher vs. Peck, 6th Cranch, pp. 123, 128, 130.) "The question whether a law be void or repugnant to the Constitution, was at all times a question of much delicacy which ought seldom if ever to be decided in the affirmative in a doubtful case." And what would have been thought if the application had been made, as in the present case, ex parte upon affidavits for an injunction preliminary to the trial?

But, looking beyond the form of this case, it would be seen that this suit was in substance an action to try the title to an office. And when did the Courts ever get power to do that? It was perfectly well settled that they could only try the title to an office by an action in the nature of a quo warranto. This was implied in the 43rd section of the code. The whole question here was this, whether the Mayor should command the thousand men who guard the City as one of seven or as one of three? Now, supposing that he (the Judge) could in any case declare an act unconstitutional or prohibit its exercise on the ground alleged, to try the title to an office, was the plaintiff in this case in a situation to demand the exercise of that power? He (counsel) would say he was not. First, in reference to the plaintiff being a tax-payer, he (counsel) thought he could show that the Courts had not gone the length of this suit anywhere. The state of the law was this, and rote only, that in this Court (the Supreme Court) the right of a tax payer as a beneficiary or cestui-que trust against the Corporation, to sue for an alleged breach of trust was affirmed, and not beyond. The question had been fully discussed in the Christopher case, and in that pons asinorum which he (counsel) and his learned friend (Mr O'Conor) had argued—the Dubaum case, reported in 16th Barbour, 392. There the right to sue was limited to the case of a tax payer, an owner of real estate, against a Corporation, on the ground that the Corporation was using the fund of which he, in common with all the other taxpayers, was owner for an improper purpose. But this was no such case. There was no pretence in this suit that this law would not diminish taxes—none whatever. Mr Wood had averred nothing except that he was a tax-payer, but there was no allegation of injury foreseen, expected, or dreaded. In the Brick Church case, and in the Balance Dry Dock case, Judge Roosevelt said the Christopher case had been carried much beyond what the Court intended or would warrant, and the doctrine of the Supreme Court was not that a suit could not be sustained by a tax-payer against a corporation in any such case. In the Superior Court, the whole doctrine, as at first held by the Supreme Court, has been repudiated. (2d Duer, 668.)

The case went to the Court of Appeals, and the whole thing was reversed. They held that the Superior Court had been guilty of a usurpation of power. Chief Justice Denio said the Superior Court had no right to bring in the Attorney-General. A man cannot bring a private suit for a nuisance which is public, although it may be injurious to him in his private capacity. This disposed of the question whether Mr. Wood, as a tax-payer, could bring this suit. But it was said that he could bring it as Mayor. As Mayor, he was only one of the three Police Commissioners. He could not sue without bringing in his associates, or, in the event of their refusing, setting up the refusal in his complaint and making them co-defendants.

Now, as to the consequences of this action. An injunction would not restore the old Commissioners. They were gone irrecoverably. The new Commission might be stopped possibly, and there would be no commission at all. At this moment we were in a state of complete legal anarchy. There was no human being who had authority to command a policeman, except that authority which he (the Judge) as a conservator of the Peace could command. The new charter revoked all the former charters, eo nomine, and the moment this police bill was declared to go into action, that moment the authority passed into the hands of the new Commission, as New York when the flag was hoisted in 1789 to signalize the departure of the British, passed from under the authority of Great Britain into that of the Independent colonies.

Mr. Cutting followed, on the same side, and submitted several additional authorities.

Mr. O'Conor closed for the plaintiff. He argued at length, and with great perspicuity, that the law was clearly unconstitutional; that it was opposed, not only to the letter of the Constitution, but to its spirit; and that, as its unconstitutionality was certain, and not a matter of doubt, it was therefore a case in which the Court was competent to act. In reference to the alleged annulling, by the recently adopted Quarter, of all former acts he showed that it had not annulled, eo nomine, the Police law of 1853, under which the Mayor, Recorder and City Judge were constituted Commissioners, with the power of appointment, and the general annulling clause of all previous enactments was inoperative, because the act itself was void. He reviewed the authorities adduced on behalf of the defendants, and showed that the question as to the right of a tax-payer to sue a Corporation, as adjudicated upon by the Superior Court, was still pending in the Court of Appeals.

At the close of the argument, the Judge intimated that he would so modify the order as to except Kings, Richmond and Westchester Counties, from the operation of the injunction, provided the acts of the Commissioners out of the City and County of New-York did not affect the property or police department of this City.

An adjournment (it being twenty minutes to ten o'clock) took place till this morning at ten o'clock, A. M.

Board of Councilmen.

The Board of Councilmen met on Friday, the President, J. N. PHILLIPS, Esq., in the Chair.

The special order of the evening was brought up, being an ordinance to reorganize the Street Department. The document was read by the proper officer, the recitation occupying more than an hour. Its adoption being moved,

Councilman MCCAHILL asked for time to examine the ordinance. His observations were not of an extremely well-connected character; the laughter occasioned by his attempts at the utterance of Latin, and the loud shouting tone of his peculiar pronunciation, rendered it impossible to ascertain the drift of his remarks.

Councilman BRADY was opposed to the 69th section of the ordinance, which related to fire engines, hose-carts, and apparatus for the Fire Department. It is as follows:

SEC. 69. He shall continually inspect the fire engines, hose carts, hook and ladders, hose and other machines and apparatus for the use of the Fire Department, and with the consent of the Street Commissioner, shall repair the same forthwith, when any repairs shall be necessary, except that when the expense of such repairs shall not in any one case exceed fifteen dollars, he may cause them to be made without the consent of that officer, but no repairs without contract shall be made to a fire engine or other machine for the use of the Fire Department, the expense of which shall exceed two hundred and fifty dollars.

There had not been sufficient time given for the examination of the ordinance, but, if proceeded with, he would rather propose its adoption or rejection by sections.

Councilman CAMPBELL moved to strike out figures 3 and 4, so as to amalgamate the Bureau of Repairs with the Bureau of Supplies.

As an amendment, it was moved to make the whole matter the special order for Monday.

Councilman WARNER objected.

Councilman CAMPBELL hoped the amendment would be carried, inasmuch as, in his opinion, evidently nobody understands the paper upon which they were desired to legislate.

Councilman BOOLE explained.

The amendment was put and lost.

Councilman BRADY moved to strike out $250 on the foregoing section, and insert $75.

The amendment was carried.

It was moved that the report be accepted and the ordinance (as amended) be adopted.

On vote the motion was carried: affirmative, 43; negative, 3.

The house then read several bills a third time, granting the petition of Engine Company No. 12 for a new location, of Hose Company No. 9; of Hose Company No. 61, and thirty-four other bills, relating to fencing lots, flagging streets, constructing piers, remitting taxes, removing incumbrances, making sewers, placing lightning rods in bell towers, filling sunken lots, donating $500 to the Mechanics' Institute; in favor of fixing salaries of the Mayor's Clerks, removing remains from Potter's Field, and various other miscellaneous matters. Among which $5,000 is appropriated for the necessary arrangements of the 4th of July. The Board also read a third time the bill to increase the salaries of the officials of the Croton Aqueduct Department; and another to increase those of the Street Commissioner and his Deputy, the details of which we have given a few days ago.

The City Chamberlain was ordered to furnish a statement of [illegible] and overdrafts since his acceptance of [illegible] Board, when accordingly about to adjourn, [illegible] Committee of the Whole on the question of raising the salary of the Mayor to $5,000 per annum.

Councilman BRADY asked for explanation. Had the Mayor changed his mind? (A Member—He has.) The thing ought not to be a tempted. Why force it on him?

Councilman HASWELL said that the question had no special reference to FERNANDO WOOD.

Councilman PHILLIPS (President) said they were legislating for the office, not for the man.

Councilman BRADY was not opposed to increasing the Mayor's salary.

Councilman WARNER asked, Then why do you object?

Councilman BRADY, in continuation, But when the Mayor says emphatically he does not want it, I don't see why the Board should force it on him.

Councilman BOOLE liked consistency. They had increased several salaries, and tried to increase their own, and yet opposed the extension of this increase to the Mayor, who was very deserving.

Councilman JONES was opposed, upon principle, to raising the Mayor's salary. He could not do it, because the Mayor did not want it. It would be throwing $2,000 away. The salaries had been raised unthinkingly, of Croton Aqueduct officials and the Commissioner of Streets, and now the question is, whether the public will justify the Council in forcing it on the Mayor? Ultimately the motion was carried, that when the Committee rise they recommend the contemplated movement.

The question of raising the salary of the City Inspector to $5,000 was then proposed and carried, without debate. The House resumed, and the Board adjourned to Monday.

Fire in West-street.

About 7½ o'clock yesterday evening a fire broke out in the flour and feed store of J. & I. NORTHAM No. 164 West-street. About $1,000 damage was done, the loss is covered by insurance. The is supposed to have originated in the front office.

THE HATTING INTERNET.—One of the best evidences of prosperity is the increase of facilities it constantly demands for the transaction of its accumulating business. Little by little, as its outstretching spirit of enterprise is awakened by a contemplation of the possibilities of the future in comparison with the accomplishments of the past, it seeks for new channels to contain its overflow of good fortune, or such enlargements of the old as may adequately meet the necessities of the flood. This thought naturally strikes the most unreflecting while gazing upon the improvements just introduced by KNOX, the celebrated hatter, into his well-known establishment at the northeastern corner of Broadway and Fulton-street. For most men of business his store would have been considered quite large enough for every useful purpose. But his popularity has kept even pace with his endeavors to please the public, and the result is, he has been compelled to render his grand saloon as much more capacious, in order to accommodate the increase of trade of which he finds him self the recipient. It is now one of the most spacious as well as handsomest places of the kind in our City. It is an ornament to that section of the City, and shows at once not only how a man of energy may make his way up in the world, but how naturally an appreciative public will interest itself in his elevation.

HAVE YOU AMUSED YOURSELF WITH THOSE STEREOSCOPIC PICTURES?—All Broadway has been in a state of agitation since Thursday last, owing to the rare and beautiful display of "lenticular pictures from life" just opened by Mr. Cressaune, the agent of the London Stereoscopic Company. His office, at present, is at HALL'S Music Store, corner of Broadway and Park-place, where he delights every day the crowd of ladies and gentlemen with his wonderful assortment of views, social, civil, religious, and picturesque, which, seen through his surpassingly perfect stereoscopic cases, look as real as though painted on the retina of the eye. Nothing could be more finished, or more like nature. Mr. Cressaune sells these pictures for families at trifling prices, and his stereoscopic cases are made to close up, so as to go in the pocket. A prettier present for a lady could not be imagined. A more agreeable gift for a friend with a family of children never was devised. In fact, the "Lenticular Pictures" are all the rage now.

COD-LIVER OIL AND IODINE.

The amount of Iodine in Cod-liver Oil is not great, and yet Cod-liver Oil, it is said, has cured many a person of consumption. The fatty substance itself may have some effect in reproducing health by its nutritive properties, but so might good wine and roast beef, under the same circumstances. The only curative property contained in Cod-liver Oil is the Iodine, and that as a remedy for consumption, scrofula, palsy, and rheumatism, in fact for all diseases of the lungs, liver, heart and blood, is beyond all parallel. It cures quietly, quickly and effectually. But instead of swallowing a dozen bottles of Cod-liver Oil, to get the Iodine, you may obtain the same amount in one bottle of ANDERS' LIQUID IODINE or PURE IODINE WATER—the greatest medicine in the world—sold at $1 a bottle by ANDERS & FOSNIOK, No. 332d av., and No. 862 Broadway; C. H. RING, No. 192 Broadway; BARNES & PARK, No. 304 Broadway; Mrs. HAYES, Brooklyn, and all Druggists.

Brooklyn Water-Works.

The Commissioners of the Brooklyn Water-Works on Thursday last, accompanied by a few invited guests, visited the whole line of the work in progress. Returning they expressed themselves perfectly satisfied with what they saw and heard. During the present season the mains will be laid through the principal streets in this city, and it is believed that water will be introduced into the city by July, 1858.

The teachers of the public school on Myrtle-avenue called last Thursday evening upon Mr. STEPHEN HAYNES, who for some twenty-five years or more has fulfilled the thankless and difficult duties of School Trustee, and surprised him with the present of an elegant silver pitcher—a token of their esteem and grateful appreciation of his kindness to them. The gift is from the teachers—not the scholars. The presentation was a very interesting occasion. No one was found adequate to the task of saying how sincere was the teachers' regret that Mr. HAYNES is no longer in the Board of Trustees.

Another Body Found.

The body of an unknown female was found in Gowanus creek yesterday. The finding of dead bodies in this city is a daily occurrence, and not one in ten of them is identified.

FRIDAY, April 24—P. M.

The Foreign news by the steamer America at Halifax, a brief synopsis of which was telegraphed to the afternoon papers, is financially less unfavorable than the accounts by the previous arrival. The English funds had improved, and no further change had been made in the rate of discount at the Bank. The Liverpool Cotton Market had slightly receded, and the sales were again confined to the trade. Breadstuffs weak.

The market for Money in Wall-street today was generally dull, and the supply easy. The Brokers are not using a large amount on temporary loan, for notwithstanding the continued depression of Stocks at the Brokers' Board, the anxiety to sell is mainly from parties who have no certificates of their own, but hope to buy from their neighbors at a great sacrifice, when the day of delivery rolls round, and all the transfer books reopen. The Discount Brokers quote prime paper at 6@8 ₱ cent., 60 days to 4 months, and longer dates 8½@9 ₱ cent. Second choice paper 10@12 ₱ cent. The Sub-Treasury balance is reduced to $14,590,226. he receipts to-day were $115,878, and the disbursements, (of which $150,000 went to the Philadelphia office,) $310,219.

The Stock Market is still feverish, and some of the prices fluctuated through the day as follows:

Michigan Southern	60¾	60¾	60¾	60¾	61	61¼	61
Cleveland and Toledo	63¾	63¾	64	64¼	64	64¼	64
New-York Central	87¾	87¾	87¾	87¾	87¾	87¾	87¾
Reading	81¾	80¾	80¾	81¾	81¾	81¾	81¾

The Toledo transfers reopen to-morrow, and the Stock strengthened upon the near approach of the large settlements which have then to be made. The Erie books reopen on Monday. The Stock is assanited with much fierceness, and about 6,000 shares were sold, (without transfer, of course,) on the calculation that the payment of the scrip dividend on Monday will afford the means of supplying the Stock at lower figures. The Stock of the Michigan Southern is still much unsettled, although the announcement of the new board of management, elected in Michigan on Wednesday last, and which includes several well-known and acceptable New York names, was well received, and as this is to be succeeded in a few days by a full financial statement of the affairs of the Company made up to the present date, a turn in the character of the dealings in the Stock may reasonably be waited for. The Board of Directors is thus constituted: John Wilkinson, Syracuse; Edwin C. Litchfield, New-York; John S. Barry, Michigan; Chas. Butler, New-York; Ezekiel Morrison, Indiana; Elisha C. Litchfield, New-York: W. B. Welles, do.; John A. C. Gray, do.; J. H. Ransom, do.; W. M. Ve milye, do.; H. Keep, do.; and H. J. Redfield, do.—the last five being new members.

INTERESTING FROM EUROPE.

Arrival of the America's Mails.

OUR LONDON AND PARIS CORRESPONDENCE.

The steamship America arrived at Boston about 10 A. M. on Saturday, and her mails, dispatched South in the afternoon train, reached this City at an early hour yesterday morning.

Our foreign files contain little intelligence in addition to the simple telegraphic summary already published. The English elections were almost over, and, though the working majority for ministers in the new Parliament will be a large one, its precise strength is not yet known. The question of reform begins to be seriously agitated.

From a leading article in the London Times, we learn that the Ministerial candidate for the Speakership of the new House of Commons is to be Mr. EVELYN DENISON.

The London Advertiser states that Mr. SIDNEY HERBERT will likely go into the Cabinet in the place of Lord PANMURE.

In regard to the Neufchatel question, the Paris correspondent of the London Times, writing on the 8th of April, says:

"The Neufchatel Conference has not met to day, nor is it certain it will sit to-morrow. If not as important, this paltry affair threatens to occupy as much time, and give as much trouble, as the Russian protocols. The question of money is, it seems, the present difficulty. The King of Prussia, like a man of business, is anxious to make as good a thing of it as possible, and he haggles about his bargain. He will try to squeeze as much as he can out of poor Switzerland."

Regarding the difficulty between Spain and Mexico, the Madrid correspondent of the London Times, writing on the 4th of April, says:

"The Mexican question continues to be the most prominent and important of those at present upon the tapis, but it has made no visible progress since I wrote to you concerning it on the 31st ult. It appears that Señor LA FRAGUA hesitates to come to Madrid, unless he be received here in his official capacity, and that the English Government, which desires to see the quarrel made up, is endeavoring to overcome his scruples. As he has been assured that a friendly reception awaits him, that the Spanish Government is well disposed, and even desirous, to settle the matter amicably, and as he is doubtless aware that such settlement is most likely to be brought about by his presence at Madrid, it is not to be supposed that he will allow a point of etiquette, or a merely personal feeling, to stand in the way of the accomplishment of his important mission. If he did so, he would certainly be rendering an ill service to his country, and it is difficult to believe that he would be acting in the spirit of his instructions. Spain has strong grounds of complaint. Her subjects have been robbed, ill-treated, and even murdered, and it would be in bad taste for the representative of the country where those outrages have been perpetrated to put punctilious and unnecessary obstacles in the way of the reconciliation for which she shows herself willing."

Another letter says:

"Very active communications are taking place between our Government and those of France and England on the subject of the difference between Spain and Mexico. Our Cabinet hopes to obtain the moral support of those two powers; and in the event of the question going beyond a war between Spain and Mexico, their material support also."

It is reported that upwards of 10,000 Norwegians will proceed from Norway to Quebec during the present Summer. Several of these will remain in Canada, but the larger portion will pass on to the Northwestern States of America. Sir CUSACK RONEY had left England for CHRISTIANA to make arrangements for the transit of these persons from Quebec to their destination, and also to disseminate information with reference to Canada on behalf of the Government.

A letter in the European Times of the 11th instant, from a Lieutenant of the Coast Guard at Carlingford, Ireland, states that on the 2d instant a parcel containing about one hundred and fifty delivery notes of cotton was picked up on the beach at Greenore. They are dated at New-Orleans, each note specifying in writing a certain number of bales with the names of the exporters printed thereon, such as "BELL and BETH," "C. A. PARKER and Bro.," "T. C. SZYMANSKI' Press," &c. The latest date of any of these notes is Dec. 2, 1856. It is supposed that an American ship has been lost on her homeward voyage on this coast.

The amnesty by the Emperor of Austria on visiting Hungary, will be very complete, and will exclude only KOSSUTH.

BRITISH POLITICS AND NEWS.

Good Friday—The London Times on the Decay of France—The Coronation of Louis Napoleon—Austrian Amnesty—Preparations for the War with China—Letter from Mr. Bright—The New House of Commons—Ship Signals—The Sound Dues.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

LONDON, Friday, April 10, 1857.

This being Good Friday, and the weather remarkably warm, all the lower orders of London are holding their usual beery saturnalia out of doors, and the upper classes are immured within doors, although it were sacrilege to breathe the external air. Every occupation, except the sale of alcohol of some sort, is suspended, and the aspect of the British Babylon is altogether such as it wears only this one day out of the 365. By way of seasonable contribution to the physical, metaphysical and miscellaneous cogitations proper to the occasion, the great diurnal thinking-machine for the intellectual Saxon population of these realms, comes out this morning with a disquisition on, of all themes in this wide, wide world, the ruin of empires! Not exactly perhaps in the strain of VOLNEY, but quite as uncharitable, if a little less unchristian. The ruin of empires, you exclaim,—of the British Empire? Oh, dear no! That is warranted to last till Time shall be no more, and then, of course, it doesn't much matter what becomes of it. No, the empire that is being ruined is France; France, our loyal ally, our magnanimous friend; our shield and spear, our alter ego, our everything that is complimentary to her and to us. What, then, is there an end of the entente cordiale? Has the violent love had a violent death, in the manner the poet tells us in the fate of all fatuous attachments? Nothing of the sort. It is with the greatest affection, the kindest motive, the purest impulse, the most benevolent and gushing tenderness, that the British organ of international sympathy tells France confidentially, as if the secret was meant for her private ear only, that she is going headlong to perdition, and will soon reach that finale. But wherefore? What is it all about? It is about the very startling fact, just made known by the publication of the census, that the population of France, under the rule of him who said that the Empire is peace, is decreasing faster than it did under the rule of him who said that the Empire was war, and who meant what he said, which the nephew of his uncle does not mean, either in that or any other respect. Upon such a text you may fancy what a sermon is preached by such a moralist—the "candid friend," par excellence, of this Pecksniff world. Not content with so preaching, the preacher justifies by implication, while censuring ostensibly the preachings of native Muckleworths, who say, as our oracle says, but in far more emphatic phrase, that "France is smitten with inertness and sterility." Then comes the question why is she so smitten? A thousand pens, tens of thousands of tongues answer everywhere but in France, where neither tongue nor pen can give utterance to a thought distasteful to the imperial taciturnity who sits in uncrowned eminence in the capital, more and more nervous every day at the stifled sounds of discontent, and doubly nervous if he do not hear those sounds, for then he forbodes explosion, fancying it "the torrent's stillness ere it dash below." To such extremity does this latter apprehension carry him that he manufactures plots against himself, so that the simulated bustle of hunting down ideal conspirators may dissipate the terrible stagnation and ominous silence imposed on the country by the modern Tiberius. So he is called by LEDRU ROLLIN, in a long letter in a London journal to day, and giving circumstantial details of one of these pretended plots of which the republican himself is the chief intended victim. Whatever be ROLLIN's faults, falsehood at least is not of the number; nor is it of any of the exiles, whose number is so constantly increasing that it will assuredly affect the next census. The next! Who will take it? By whose order? Scarcely by his who has commanded the uncrowned rule. How long is it to be uncrowned? VICTOR HUGO, with endless iteration, says forever! and the Emperor appears to think that it is high time to falsify the prediction of the envenomed Voices, lest delay fulfill the prophecy. Accordingly he is hurrying the preparation with all possible speed, but no one knows to what precise period, locality, or functionary the preparations point. Not to be crowned by the Pope, the Pontiff of his own boyonets, would be to deprive the ceremony of that "blaze of triumph" which his histrionic majesty so much considers, and would be, moreover, the strongest possible satire on the leading feature of the foreign policy of Bonapartism. Yet there is no apparent likelihood whatever of his Holiness laying anointed hands on that ungodly son of the church whose private vices are so much the public scandal of France that they are denounced from the pulpit within hearing of the empurpled sinner himself, who fears to muzzle his sacerdotal censors. The fast-coming month of May is the time he is said to be anxious to consummate the coup d'état with a diadem, and in the storied City of Rheims, where CLOVIS was baptised, where PHILIP AUGUSTUS was consecrated, and where all the subsequent sovereigns of France have been crowned, except three, old NAPOLEON, oddly enough, being of the number. That the new NAPOLEON should be crowned here is out of the question, at least this year; and rather than to risk another year, he will try to be crowned somewhere or anywhere else. A coronation at Rheims without a Pope, would be "Hamlet" without the Prince of Denmark; and Pope there will there be none. Nor will there, apparently, at Paris either, where there is shortly to be a visitor whose recent experiences in imperial investiture will whet the pageant-loving appetites of his host to a degree that will hardly bear much longer denial, let the indulgence cost what it may. The Archduke CONSTANTINE, "the frank and open-hearted sailor" of the late British Commander in the Baltic, is to be in the French capital on the 1st of May, and the whole cornucopia of Bonapartean resources will be emptied for his entertainment during his stay. In imitation of the model of the uncle, who invited TALMA to Erfort to play before a pitfull of kings, the nephew has caught a real live sovereign for the forthcoming auspicious occasion, as the theatrical managers say. Respectable royalties of any sort are rather difficult to be got hold of, and the only available one is the King of Bavaria, the reigning king, as he is called, lest he should be confounded with the one who doesn't reign, unless it be in the heart of LOLA MONTEZ, should that lady still be troubled with such a superfluous appendage to her anatomy. It will, perhaps, delight her to learn that her example is being followed, and with every promise of like results, in another kingdom, that of Denmark, where the caprices of the left-handed spouse of the Scandinavian potentate, the Countess DE DANNER, have just thrown the whole Cabinet into fresh confusion, and they have thrown up their appointments en masse. But the lady, à la LOLA, has compelled them to resume their functions forthwith. If they won't tolerate her freaks, neither will she have patience with their resignation. They appealed to the Constitution; but her will is the law; and what is the Constitution compared to that? Accordingly, she has her own way, and all that is for it is to let her have it a little longer, when the chances are that she will exemplify the truthfulness of the homely adage about affording certain people a sufficiency of rope for a particular purpose, which runs in the heads of those so accommodated.

It is thought that LOUIS NAPOLEON will make the utmost possible efforts to get up a coronation for his princely visitor: but the moment is unlucky for the experiment, by reason of the cost, the idea of which will act perniciously on the elections, now on the eve of commencing; for, although the pretence of appealing to the public in France just now may appear very farcical, the mockery is susceptible of a tragic significance, should things take a sudden turn, as they at any moment may, all the multitudinous means of repression to the contrary notwithstanding.

It is questionable whether or not a stimulus be given to the spirit of disaffection in France by the comparative leniency about to be exhibited by a cognate despotism towards its political offenders. It appears that Austria, almost for the first time in the history of what Prof. NEWMAN calls the blood-stained annals of the house of Hapsburg, is about to try the effect of clemency in permitting the return home of the self-exiled Hungarians, with one exception; need it be added that that one is the one—KOSSUTH. How far this boon will be availed, because how far it is fairly meant, it is difficult to say. The murder of BATHYANI, the multiplied murders by HAYNAU, after the most solemn engagement to the contrary, and in face of the very laws which the murderers said were outraged, all forbid the supposition of sincerity; while the exclusion of the man preëminently dear to the Hungarian heart, stamps the overture with the suspicion of bad faith and with the reality of a most stupid policy. A pardon might have been safely offered to KOSSUTH, with all sorts of temptations to induce him to accept it. The impossibility of such acceptance, or the utter ruin of his influence if he were to accept it, is so palpable, that none but an Austrian could overlook it. But the offer would have done infinite good to the Imperial Government, and would have tended far more to the tranquillization of the Magyars than a century of any conciliatory policy likely to emanate from Vienna. It is not in the least probable that even the heroic KLAPKE, the defender of Comorn, or the not less heroic KMETZ, the defender of Kars, with the fame of which our General WILLIAMS (a dead parliamentary failure) ran away, would accept the smallest favor from Austria. Still, as just remarked, the offer may be a good stroke of policy on the part of Austria, though she lacks the wisdom to make the bolder stroke. Her anxiety to propitiate Hungary, even in this limited degree, shows that she apprehends the need of all her strength at the opposite extremity of her dominions, Italy, where she is making wonderful efforts to consolidate her position; and certainly circumstances assist her in an extraordinary degree. Thus a writer most hostile to her says today: "The exertions the Austrians are making at Pola, the Sebastepol of the Adriatic, will be felt by all Europe, if the canal of the Isthmus of Suez be carried through. They have tripled their navy since 1848, and they have now on the stocks the Imperador, of 90 guns and 800 horse power, a screw frigate, and two corvettes. If this canal be finished, and Italy properly governed, she will again become a great commercial country, and the Italian peninsula, from its proximity, be far more valuable to British merchants than distant China." Yes, if! Most omnipotential of propositions; best of peace-makers, as Falstaff, says; and best of war makers, too, when properly supported.

In reference to China, the preparations for the prosecution of the war against her go on with vigor, though a considerable change as to the justice of the said war appears to be coming over the British spirit. The total breakdown of the prosecution against the alleged bread-poisoner, ALUM, though the whole force of the law in a British military colony was brought to bear against him, and after his guilt was proclaimed from the housetops, as if there could be no possible doubt about it, has very much damped the anti-Celestial feu d'enfer which burnt in the British bosom only the other day. Then there is a most decided reaction setting in against PALMERSTON; or, rather, the Democratic spirit, hitherto altogether dormant, is beginning to wake up, and ask why it suffered its old and long-tried champions to be sacrificed to a meaningless cry in favor of a man notoriously the most unmitigated oligarch in the United Kingdom. The scandalous and incredible ingratitude exhibited by Manchester to COBDEN and BRIGHT is beginning to awake remorse there and resentment elsewhere.

A noble letter of BRIGHT's, dated from Florence, and taking leave of public life, was published yesterday, and has produced an extraordinary sensation, all the more vivid as the fatal truth bursts upon the public mind that the new House of Commons will be intellectually and morally the least reputable since the Restoration. Not a single man of the slightest influence, name, or promise has been elected; while many of the ablest debaters, and nearly all the independent men of the old House have been rejected. It is reported to have been a saying of Mr. BUCHANAN's, when he was Ambassador here, that every enemy of England should wish Lord PALMERSTON a perpetual lease of office; for it was a fact that he never had been in office without the prestige, the power, and the interests of England having suffered, and not always accidentally. The late history and the probable issue of the Central American question are not likely to cause this dictum of your President to be qualified either now or hereafter.

Passing to another subject, and apologizing for the postponement of a matter referred to at the end of the last communication, it is necessary now to call your attention to a less speculative topic than the foregoing.

About a year and a half ago the Board of Trade appointed a Committee, composed mainly of naval officers, and presided over by Admiral BERESFORD, to inquire into and report upon a code of signals to be used at sea. The defects of the existing system have long been felt, as the use of numerals, by limiting the range of which the flags are capable, rendered duplicate and index flags necessary, and thus produced so much complexity and difficulty of adjustment as materially to lessen the usefulness of the code. The Committee, therefore, in their report to the Board, made in September last, and published this week, have set aside the numeral system, and adopted one which seems to meet all the requirements of an efficient code. It is that of taking a number of flags, sufficient to effect a certain number of permutations by their transposition, each combination of two or more flags forming a distinct signal, and having a particular signification. The number of flags required (18) is only two more than are now carried by vessels using MARRYATT's code, which will be used, as regards the shape and color of the flags, as far as applicable. The letters of the alphabet, by omitting vowels, are substituted for numerals, and, by the use of eighteen flags, these are capable of giving 78,642 signals, each consisting of a hoist of not more than four flags. The Signal-book prepared by the Committee consists of two parts, one being the international, which, by translation, may be made an universal language of signals. The corresponding combination which any nation adopting the code may employ will always have the same meaning, in whatever language the signal may be expressed. This is a still further advantage of the new code, and affords ground for hope that, at some future day, all nations may agree to use one set of flags for commercial purposes. The report suggests that foreign maritime States should be invited to forward plates of their commercial signal flags, in order that a corresponding arrangement of symbols may be mutually agreed upon, should they think proper to adopt the code. In the case of the United States, the national vocabulary of England would be applicable, the language being the same. As regards the cost to shipowners, that will be lessened by the fact of the flags in use being available, so that those who have them would only require the additional ones.

Not altogether irrelative to ships' signals are ducs on shipping; and of these a word in conclusion.

According to the latest advices from Copenhagen, the Danish Legislature is already occupied with the disposal of the money to be paid by the various European States for the redemption of the Sound Dues. A bill has been brought in for that purpose by the Minister of Finance, Col. ANDREAE, who proposes to devote 1,200,000 rix dollars to the current expenses of the year, and 8,640,000 rix dollars (£1,600,000 sterling) to the liquidators of the British loans negotiated at 5 per cent. in 1849 and 1850 for the expenses of the Holstein war. The deficiency in the revenue occasioned by the loss of the dues will be in part made up by the saving which will be made in salaries hitherto paid to officials at Elsinore and other places where tolls have been collected. It may be interesting to American ship owners and merchants to know that the corvette Saga, 16, Capt. BIELKE, is now stationed in the Sound, opposite Elsinore, to receive the dues payable by vessels belonging to states not parties to the treaty of March 14, and thus save them the trouble and loss of time of going ashore for that purpose.

Mr. Bright's Farewell Address.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF MANCHESTER.

GENTLEMEN: I have received a telegraphic dispatch informing me of the result of the election contest in which you have just been engaged. That result has not greatly surprised me, and, so far as I am personally concerned—inasmuch as it liberates me from public life in a manner which involves on my part no shrinking from any duty—I cannot seriously regret it. I lament it on public grounds, because it tells the world that many amongst you have abandoned the opinions you professed to hold in the year 1847, and even so recently as in the year 1852. I believe that slander itself has not dared to charge me with having forsaken any of the principles, on the honest support of which I offered myself twice, and was twice accepted, as your representative. The charge against me has rather been, that I have too warmly and too faithfully defended the political views which found so much favor with you at the two previous elections.

If the change in your opinion of me has arisen from my course on the question of the war with Russia, I can only say that, on a calm review of all the circumstances of the case—and during the past twelve months I have had ample time for such a review—I would not unsay or retract any one of the speeches I have spoken, or erase from the records of Parliament any one of the votes I have given upon it, if I could thereby reverse the decision to which you have come, or secure any other distinction which it is in the power of my countrymen to confer. I am free, and will remain free, from any share in the needless and guilty bloodshed of that melancholy chapter in the annals of my country. I cannot, however, forget that the leaders of the opposition in the recent contest have not been influenced by my conduct on this question. They were less successful, but not less bitter in their hostility in 1852, and even in 1847, when my only public merit or demerit consisted in my labors in the cause of free trade. On each occasion calling themselves Liberals, and calling their candidates Liberal also, they have coalesced with the Conservatives, whilst now, doubtless, they have asseiled Mr. GIBSON and myself on the ground of a pretended coalition with the Conservatives in the House of Commons.

I have esteemed it a high honor to be one of your representatives, and have given more of mental and physical labor to your service than was just to myself; I feel it scarcely less an honor to suffer in the cause of peace, and on behalf of what I believe to be the true interests of my country, though I could have wished that the blow had come from other hands, at a time when I could have been present to meet face to face those who dealt it.

In taking my leave of you, and of public life, let me assure you that I can never forget the many—the innumerable—kindnesses I have received from my friends amongst you. No one will rejoice more than I shall in all that brings you prosperity and honor; and I am not without a hope that, when a calmer hour shall come, you will say of Mr. GIBSON and of me, that, as colleagues in your representation for ten years, we have not sacrificed our principles to gain popularity, or bartered our independence for the emoluments of office, or the favors of the great. I feel that we have stood for the rights and interests, and freedom of the people, and that we have not tarnished the honor or lessened the renown of your eminent city. I am now, as I have hitherto been, very faithfully yours,

JOHN BRIGHT.

RETIREMENT OF MR. BRIGHT FROM PUBLIC LIFE

From the London Times, April 10.

The enforced retirement of Mr. BRIGHT from public life, upon which he addresses his late constituents in the letter we publish to-day, is an event in our modern Parliamentary history which we cannot pass over without notice. Let men agree or disagree with his political opinions as they will, upon one point there can be no doubt whatsoever, that a well graced actor has left the scene. There was a vigor and fire in the man which we seek in vain elsewhere among the candidates for the orator's chaplet in the House of Commons. We remember well when the Reform Bill was passed it was anticipated that a number of rough untameable speakers would be sent up by the new-born constituencies to the House of Commons—men who would deal with the old Parliamentary rhetoric and the good old quotations from the classical authors, and all the received elegancies of the place, in no very reverential spirit, and who would yet earn for themselves a great name, and for their constituents greater influence and greater power in the political system. The late Sir ROBERT PEEL is reported to have said, when Mr. BRIGHT made his first effective appearance in the House—"Ah! here at last is one of those terrible men of '32!" Mr. BRIGHT and Mr. COBDEN are the only two instances which occur to us of men who have realized the anticipation, and of the two there is no doubt that Mr. BRIGHT is the one who had earned for himself by far the higher position in the House. Mr. COBDEN's name is associated imperishably with one great question, but out of that, it would be admitted, we presume, even by his immediate admirers, that he had not attained the same general reputation for high oratorical power as Mr. BRIGHT.

It is needless to say that the views of Mr. BRIGHT on many political subjects, and, we believe, upon all questions connected with the foreign and military policy of the country, have ever been essentially different from those which we have advocated. We cannot, however, in the hour of his trial and affliction, consent to turn upon a man who had attained so eminent a position. Who among those who rail most loudly at JOHN BRIGHT will ever do one tithe of what he has done, even with all the adventitious circumstances of birth and wealth upon their side? We are always ready and eager to give our tribute of admiration to any person connected with the upper ranks of English society who displays any extraordinary amount of ability, any great degree of courage, any peculiar aptitude for the public service; but why should we of the middle classes be ever affiliated to a hugh secret conspiracy for keeping down our own peers? That Mr. BRIGHT was hotheaded at times, and impracticable in his views, we admit, but then it should be remembered that the questions which have mainly occupied the attention of the house for the last five or six years have just been of that sort which would try his impracticability to the quick, without giving scope for the display of his more effective qualities. The man was in a false position! Had there been the remotest chance that his views could have been carried out in practice, he himself would no doubt have started back in amazement and disgust when he saw their consequences upon the eve of fulfillment. When half a-dozen prophets find themselves opposed to a majority of 600 it is astonishing with what vigor they will maintain their protest against the wickedness of the times. Put a prophet, however, at the head of the Board of Trade, and, if he were a man of real ability, he would at once descend from his altitudes and transact the business of his department in a satisfactory manner. That we believe would have been Mr. B.'s case. When the late election for Manchester was as yet undecided, we ventured to offer a few suggestions in Mr BRIGHT's favor, which have, as we have been informed, drawn upon us the displeasure of many of our friends in that city. It would, we still think, have been in better taste—more graceful, and more generous—had they allowed the necessary rupture, if rupture there was to be, to come from Mr. BRIGHT, instead of from them. Of his great abilities and great services there could be no doubt, and as little that the affliction which has lately fallen upon him was the result of over exertion in public life. It was, however, competent to them to say that the interests of the Borough and of the House could not be reconciled with the continuous absence of one of their members from his Parliamentary duties. This appears to have been their view in part, and in part their resolution has depended upon their strong desire to free the Borough from the electoral tyranny of the League. We know not if there be any more private and personal causes, but at any rate the blow has fallen, and Mr. BRIGHT, so far as Manchester is concerned, is banished from the House of Commons. We foresee a time when even Manchester may desire once more the services of that eloquent tongue and that resolute heart. Surely, the present House of Commons is aristocratic enough and "territorial" enough for all useful purposes, and we might have fonod our advantage in the presence of the bold Tribune who might even at times be over-fervid in armor. We believe even Mr. BRIGHT to have been conscientious in his views—no man could have produced the effect he produced upon his fellows without a great amount of earnestness and real conviction. We know him to have been one of the most eloquent men in the House of Commons, and as a man of high ability we regret his loss. We are not to be reckoned among Mr. BRIGHT's political friends; but let him feel satisfied that there are thousands of his political opponents who would rejoice equally with his friends at his full restoration to health and to his public career.

AFFAIRS IN FRANCE.

Plots Against the Emperor's Life—Count de Morny—Presentation of General Toddleben to Napoleon—Duke Constantine in Paris—Musical and Theatrical News.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times:

PARIS, Thursday, April 9, 1857.

The discovery of the late complot against the life of the Emperor, caused a veritable alarm among the police. A large number of useless domiciliary visits were made at the houses of prominent Republicans, and a very considerable proportion of the arrests in Paris, as well as at Lyons and elsewhere, were grounded upon nothing else than gratuitous fear. The hands of the London refugees however, were so clearly visible in this affair, that it is quite probable urgent measures will be demanded of the English Government against them. It is well to observe, however, that this affair was not countenanced by the men of standing in the Republican Party at Paris, not even by the third rate men of the party, and they are mortified at these frequent lame attempts at a disreputable act, perpetrated under the shadow of the Republican name. It demonstrates the impotency of the cause by showing it has the London Committee is forced to use, as its chief conspirators, men who formerly it would trust no further in a plot than the defence of a barricade. If NAPOLEON is assassinated it will be done by the hand of an isolated individual, by such a man, for example, as PIANORI, who has the courage and the determination to put his plan into execution without other counsel then his own head, or other aid than his own hand. The cause does not possess vitality enough; the interests at stake do not possess enough magnitude (in a French point of view) to enable a society to keep its secret.

The Count and Countess DE MORNY are expected daily at Paris, from St. Petersburg. The difficulty between M. DE MORNY and the Countess DE LEBON hee been arbitrated by the Emperor, and a decision pronounced in favor of the Countess for a sum which I have heard variously estimated at four, five and six millions of francs. From the position of amant, Madame DE LEBON promoted the Count to that of agent de change. It is true that the Count's position and rapid promotion in Government warranted this confidence on the part of the lady. Who, indeed, could take better care of the Countess' money, or secure her larger dividends, than the man who was so near the throne as to be able to gain for himself a sum of five millions annually out of railroad concessions and stock jobbing operations? So the Countess furnished large sums of money to M. DE MORNY, in the hope, no doubt, that she too was going to realize a rapid augmentation to her already handsome fortune. But there was still a little of camaraderie in the character of their transactions, and the Count, it seems, took advantage of this fact to avoid close settlements It was thus he went to St. Petersburg leaving an open account. Nothing was said by the Countess until M. DE MORNY got married. She then demanded a settlement; the Count made difficulties, and it was referred to the Emperor, who, as a personal friend to both parties, was capable of rendering justice. His Majesty's decision I have already mentioned.

In the case of M. DE MORNY's breach of marriage contract with Miss HUTTON, there is a point of which I have not yet spoken—a point which renders his conduct doubly reprehensible. As is usual in marriages in France between Catholics and Protestants, there was a contest between the family and the Count as to the religious instruction which should be given to the children. A compromise was at length agreed upon to this effect—that the males should receive Catholic and the females Protestant instruction. Immediately after determining upon the marriage with the Princess TROUBOUSKY, the Count wrote to Mrs. HUTTON to say that he had changed his mind, and that the children must all be educated in the Catholic faith. Mrs. HUTTON replied, refusing the concession. The news of the projected marriage at St. Petersburg then arrived at Paris. A letter of astonishment and recrimination was sent to the Count. He then replied that he was positively obliged to consummate the Russian alliance, leaving it to be surmised that he was acting under a peremptory order from his brother the Emperor. An appeal to the Emperor for arbitration was thus rendered impossible, and the Count escapes without trouble the consequences of his shameful conduct.

The presentation of Gen. TODLEBEN to NAPOLEON yesterday, by the Count KISSELEFF, Russian Ambassador, was attended with forms that ought not to pass without notice. Gen. TODLEBEN is unquestionably a man of great military genius; his defence of Sebastopol forever puts that question at rest. Moreover, if any people should cherish a high appreciation of that genius, it is the French. But this gentleman is but a General in the army, with the honorary title of Aide-de-Camp to the Emperor. See what takes place: He is received at a special audience, with a certain degree of parade, and the Moniteur announces the presentation this morning in a separate leading paragraph, in large type—in fact, clothed with all the requisites to give it the quality of a grand parade. Now there is a contrast to which I wish to draw attention. Within three years two EX-Presidents of the United States, both honorable and talented men, have been presented to the Emperor at the Tuileries. Neither of them obtained the honor of a private presentation, nor did their names appear in the Moniteur, in any form. I do not complain of the honor shown to the distinguished Russian engineer; he is entitled to it all. I complain of the disgraceful want of courtesy shown to the United States, in the persons of its late chief magistrates. Just a year ago Mr. BUCHANAN was presented to the Emperor, and although at that time the most prominent candidate for President of the United States, he did not receive the notice which has been accorded to Gen. TODLEBEN.

LOUIS NAPOLEON has a second cousin, a son of the Prince MURAT, formerly of Bordentown, N. J., and consequently born of an American mother, who is an officer in the Guides. Just before the commencement of the eastern war the young Prince JOACHIM MURAT was married to a daughter of the Prince DE WAGRAM, a match made by the Emperor himself. But the Prince, to the honor of his mother and his American education, made of his marriage a veritable affair of love, to such a point that, in answer to the wishes of his wife, he has steadily refused to abandon her to follow his regiment to the points to which it was ordered. The Emperor endeavored to persuade him to go to the Crimea, where he might gain promotion; he refused. He offered him, at the same time as his cousin, of Baltimore, Lieut. BONAPARTE, a company for the coming African campaign; another refusal. The Emperor, who loves the Prince, and has taken his refusals good-naturedly, is now going to appoint him, so it is reported, his Ordnance officer, a post of importance near his person.

The affair of the Polytechnic School, in answer to the energetic reclamations of the parents of the young men discharged, is to be arranged by their reinstallment to their former positions. But new regulations are to be put in force destined to meet similar contingencies in the future, and these regulations imply an almost radical change in the government of the school. The Emperor would gladly abolish the school and reorganise it on an entirely new basis.

The arrival in Paris of the two great Russian lions, TODLEBEN and the Grand Duke CONSTANTINE, and the Russian lioness, the Countess DE MORNY, are to be made the occasion of a series of brilliant fêtes, at the Court, the Hotel de Ville, at the Russian Embassy and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Notice of these fêtes has already been given, and the preparations commenced. I hope to be able to give you some sketches of these fêtes and of the distinguished guests of the occasion.

The first representation of the musical pot pourri of M. AUBER, called Marco Spada, at the Grand Opera, with the choregraphic duel of the two stars FERRARIS and ROSATI, is the theatrical event of the week. Marco Spada is a ballet drawn from the comic opera of the same name, produced four years ago at the Opera Comique of this city. The ballet itself is not remarkable, and only serves as a cadre to introduce the magnificent scenic effects so habitual at the Grand Opera, and the two illustrious stars of the dancing world, Mesdames FERRARIS and ROSATI. For a long time it was doubted whether these two ladies, ueturally jealous of each other, could be induced to bring their talents into such direct comparison as to appear in the same piece. But upon the condition that during the rehearsals each was to be allowed the privilege of claiming (within a certain limit) amendments suited to her powers, they accepted. But poor M. AUBER little imagined the sufferings through which he was going to pass by the exigencies of the two rival stars. Thus: one day he received a letter from MAZILIER; "Mon cher maître—6 mesures 6-8 très gracieuses pour Madame Ferraris, Mazelier." The next day: "Mon cher maître—8 mesures 2-4 non moins gracieuses pour Madame Rosati, Mazelier." And thus for fifteen days preceding the representation, the distinguished composer did nothing but add lengthened measures to his music to accommodate the lengthened leaps, bounds and pirouettes of his two coryphées.

The Court and a brilliant audience greeted the first representation of the piece. It was well received, and is in every respect a perfect success. But the great interest centers in the two chiefs of the corps de ballet. And in this it must be admitted that ROSATI is eclipsed by her trans-alpine rival. She is, in fact, but the tail to the comet. It is not perhaps so much the fault of her talent as the unsuitableness of the rôle in which she is cast. There is talk of her abandoning it; but it is more likely that her rôle will be emended, for she is a greater favorite with the public than her rival.

You know that in Paris, every theatre has an employed body of clappers, (called claqueurs,) who hold themselves in a great part responsible for the good or bad reception of a piece. The claque is in fact an institution, and the chief regards himself as an artist of the first importance in the house. He even arrogates to himself, as in the case of David at the Grand Opera, the title of Chief des Fauteuils de Reception. David sits in the third row of seats in the pit on the only seat that has a round back; at his sides are his son and his second-lieutenant; behind him sits another lieutenent and all the regiment, numbering on extraordinary occasions thirty persons. On the flanks sit the solitaires, poor music-struck individuals and aspirants for musical honors, who only pay half-price to Devid (that is his perquisite) and are not held to claque when their conscience opposes. According to a theatrical journal, on days of a first representation Devid does not dine, in order to preserve all his sang froid. After the curtain drops, if the piece is a success, he supe; if the piece has been coldly received, if he has had to work his regiment rudely, he has a fever and goes straight home to bed. After the first representation of "Marco Spada," David supped.

On this ballot of "Marco Spada," M. FIORENTINO, the distinguished musical critic, has just accomplished a feat of the first force. In the Constitutionnel he signs his own name; in the Moniteur he is known only as A. DE ROVRAY. M. FIORENTINI has, no doubt, good reason for desiring to remain the friend of both the distinguished artistes who figure in the ballet, and not to say more of one than the other was the great difficulty. But M. FIORENTINI is a man of talent. In the bulletin of the Moniteur you will find fifty-six lines for Madame FERRARIS and fifty-six for ROSATI. In the Constitutionnel there are ten lines for FERRARIS and ten for ROSATI. The praises, if weighed in the scales, would about balance. Then followed a line of résumé: "Madame FERRARIS was applauded (literally) fit to burst everything." "Madame ROSATI was applauded fit to break everything." After completing this extraordinary feat, FIORENTINO said to a friend, rubbing his palms in delight, "To-day I have accomplished my chief d'œuvre!" and that is Paris criticism.

Madame RISTORI and the Italian company commenced their series of dramatic representations at the Italian Opera, on Thursday evening of last week, with "Marie Stuart." On Saturday evening they played "Mirra," and on Tuesday, (first time at Paris,) "Ottavia." The great tragedienne was received with the same fury of applause which has always been extended to her before a Paris audience. Her company is the most mediocre possible. But this defect cannot be remedied, since it is impossible to employ first or even second-rate artists to walk on to a stage as a mere frame-work to an artist who absorbs all the applause. After "Ottavia," "Medea," and "Ptolomes," and a new piece by MONTIGELLE, Madame RISTORI will produce a translation of "Phèdre." Mlle. RACHEL, who is now at Thebes, somewhat improved in health, will, it is said, be at Paris for this representation—a trial which her physician, in the interest of her weak nerves, ought to veto.

"La Fiamminia," the great success of the Theatre Francais, continues to fix itself in the public favor with each representation. Madame MADELAINE BROHAN, wife of M. UCHARD, author of "Fiammina," is about to return to the Theatre Francais, from St. Peters. burg, at an annual salary of 18,000 francs, glad to tread again the boards to which she formerly lent so much attraction, and to add her charms to the success of her husband's piece. It is said that the great success of M. UCHARD as a dramatic writer is likely to bring about reconciliation between him and his wife.

"Les Faux Bons Hommes," the great success of the Vaudeville, has now been played at that theatre uninterruptedly for nearly two hundred nights.

"La Question d'Argent," of A. DUMAS, Jr., continues its success at the Gymnase, but it is not anticipated that it will run as long as the "Faux Bons Hommes," of the Vandeville.

Nearly all the Italian artists who have figured here during the Winter on the boards of the Italian Opera, have left for London, where they are to appear during the Spring season, either with Mr. LUMLEY or Mr GYE. The season has been more successful to Mr CALZADO than any of its predecessors for many years; but the amount of talent employed was unusual, and the director was thus always insured of a full house. With such a galaxy of stars as GRISI, ALBONI, FREZZOLINI, STEFFANONI, PICCOLOMINI, MARIO, GRAZZIANI, CORSI, it was impossible not to succeed.

HUME, the Spiritualist, it is said, predicted that ALEXANDER DUMAS, père, would live till he was [illegible] years old, and then be killed in a duel.

A machine has been invented in Italy, and put in practical operation in Paris, which, by means of electricity, registers music notes on paper as they are played on the piano. It is intended for the use of composers, catching the notes as they are conceived in the composer's brain before they are lost by the labor of transcribing.

MALAKOFF.

The Decline of France.

From the London Times, April 10.

People who moralize on history have never doubted that national greatness has its rise, its culmination, and its setting. Assyria, Greece, Carthage, Rome, and the rest, have passed away; Spain's [illegible] of an empire on which the sun never set has been transferred to England, the ruins of whose [illegible] is a popular writer has already figured a New Zealander as contemplating. Why, indeed, should not the great nations of the present time [illegible] supremacy to younger rivals? England and [illegible] are old in comparison with the other great [illegible] of the world. Even Austria is no longer the [illegible] Empire, and as for Russia, Prussia, and the United States, they are but upstarts of yesterday. We cannot wonder that all the historians and philosophers, all the theorizers about the progression and the march of empire, [illegible] in predictions of the decline which is the inevitable fate of the leading nations. There was, some years ago, a good deal of [illegible] nious foreboding in England,—the destiny [illegible] its day, had reached the apogee of [illegible] on. But, happily, the spirit of our people rejected all such discouraging [illegible] that a nation which is every day increasing in numbers, in wealth, and also, we may say, [illegible] sumptions, in morality and happiness, [illegible] colony to colony, and conquest to conquest, [illegible] be in danger of decline, and that to [illegible] an hour of collapse or an epoch of degradation [illegible] surd as was the conduct of the Lapulian philosophers who made themselves miserable about the approach of the earth to the sun after a long period of [illegible] tions. But if we feel ourselves young and [illegible] if we are just establishing our Colonial system, [illegible] taking possession of our Asiatic Empire, if we are building new Houses of Parliament and institutions, national collections in the same style, and [illegible] the same with our nearest neighbor, France is no [illegible] powerful, much richer than she was; she has a [illegible] tal which is the resort of the world, and a [illegible] which yields in magnificence to none. Liverpool Markets.

Per America.] LIVERPOOL, Thursday, April 9, 1857.

COTTON—The market has undergone no change of consequence during the week. The demand continues limited to the immediate wants of the trade; and the receipt free, imports being mostly brought to sale on landing, have given occasional advantage, but not sufficient to induce to alter our quotations. The stock of low dusty Cotton is increasing, and is almost unsalable. Business in Manchester keeps pretty good. We continue our quotations—Middling Orleans, 7 13-16d.; Mobile, 7¾d.; Boweds, 7 9-16d.

TOBACCO—Is quiet, without change in prices.

RICE—The improvement noticed in our last continued during Saturday and up to Monday, when it was checked by the unfavorable accounts from London and the Country Markets, as the reported declines of Cents in France, Spain, and along the Baltic. Good to prime Wheats, from their scarcity, command extreme prices, but the ordinary grades are scarcely so salable if not 1d. lower than on Friday. Flour was pressed in the early part of the week, when a decline of 6d. to 1s. was submitted to; since then holders have been firmer, and sales in a moderate way are making at about last week's prices. Indian Corn, owing to large arrivals, has declined, and Mixed is not salable over 2s 9¥ qr. To-morrow, being Good Friday will be observed as a holiday—we therefore omit our usual notice of that day's market. We quote Wheat—Red, 7s. 4d @8s. 2d.; Mixed, 8s. 4d. @8s. 6d.; White, 8s. 8d @9s. 2d. Flour—Western Canal, 37s. @38s.; Philadelphia, 38s. 6d. @39s. 6d; Ohio, 38s. 6d. @40s.; Indian Corn—Mixed, 30s.; Yellow, 31s. @31s. 6d.; White, 32s. 6d. @34s.

BACON—The public sales of Provisions on Tuesday were largely attended, and passed off with spirit. The offerings included some 6,000 boxes of Bacon, of which about 3,500 were sold within the following range of prices: Long Middles, Ribbed, 54s. to 55s 6d; Boneless, 57s. to 57s. 6d; Short Middles, Rib in 57s to 58s; Cumberland, 52s 6d to 53s. 6d. Old Shoulders found buyers at 37s. 6d. to 38s., and Old Hams at 52s to 56s. Subsequent to the sales some 1,500 boxes of Bacon have been sold at prices corresponding. The market closes firm, holders being indisposed to go on except at an advance on Long and Short Middles.

BEEF and PORK present no new feature, being quiet but firm. Extreme rates are demanded for choice brands of Beef. The late Order in Council prohibiting the importation of living animals from countries bordering on the Baltic, (whence, in 1856, there were received 222,538 of the 998,381 head of cattle, sheep and swine imported into the Kingdom,) is exciting attention as to its effect on future prices.

LARD has been unsettled during the week. Small sales by auction have been made, at 7¾. 6d. @72s.; there are reports of larger transactions, both for present and forward delivery, at figures somewhat less.

TALLOW.—"Composite" is quiet, at 54s @55s.

ALLEGED CRUELTY TO SAILORS.

The United States vs. Russell, Gordon, Burke and ...—The charges preferred against the officers of the ship Cultivator were partially investigated before Commissioner STILLWELL.

William Thomas sworn, for the prosecution: He said he was a seaman, and knew the ship Cultivator; Russell is Captain, and Oorden is chief mate; Burke is second officer, and Hebhard, I believe, third officer; he was a seaman on board, and came on board in Liverpool a month ago to day for a voyage to New-York; one lay two days in the river before going to ...; there were fourteen men in each watch; one ... Flavin was a seaman; McCoy, and George Palmer, and Jackson were seamen; I saw the second mate strike McCoy with a slung-shot on the head; it was something that was loaded, called a headbreaker; we were given water from the pump, (rain and salt water last accumulated); I saw the second and third mates knock Jack on down a useless.

John Whalen sworn.—He was on board and knew the parties; he was struck by Capt. Russell one day, and he was struck by the chief mate on the 1st of April; the right eye was blackened and cut; the 3d mate struck Jackson with a hatchet and knocked him down; they had pretty good food and ...

William Smith sworn.—He saw William Smith and Jackson struck; he saw John Flavin ill used by the Capt. and 2d mates; John Jackson was beaten on the head, with a bucket; the 3d mate beat Flavin with a heaving pin; the second mate told Jackson to swing the bowlines, they swung out; the first mate hove the bucket, at Jackson across the hatch and struck him on the back; the second mate took it up and hit him across the shoulders, and the third mate lifted the bucket and hit him on the head, knocking him down senseless. We had meat and mush, some half cooked, and were short of water.

The examination was, at this point, adjourned to Monday.

THE NEW POLICE COMMISSION.

Alleged Usurpations of the Rural Districts—The Mayor against the New Police Commissioners—Verbal Modification of the Injunction—Grant of a Writ of Qoo Warranto—Absolute Injunction Issued by Judge Roosevelt.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

SATURDAY, April 25.

Pursuant to the adjournment of Friday evening, the counsel in the case of Fernando Wood against James W. Nye, Simeon Draper, and the other Police Commissioners, met this morning before Judge DAVIES, for the purpose of settling the terms of the proposed modification in the injunction which had been issued by the same judge to restrain the Police Commissioners from assuming any control of the Police Department.

Mr. EVARTS, on behalf of the Commissioners, submitted the following as the form in which counsel for the defendants proposed the modification should be worded:

On hearing counsel for the plaintiff and defendants, ordered that the motion of the plaintiff for an injunction in this action, in pursuance of the order to show cause heretofore given herein, be denied, except so far as relates to the Police of the City of New-York, and to the property of said City connected therewith, and as to that the decision of the Court is reserved, and in the meantime the pending injunction is so far continued.

The Judge said he had put on paper his idea of the form of the modification, and would read it.

Mr. O'CONOR understood that his Honor would give plaintiff's counsel an opportunity this morning of saying how far it was practicable to work any modification of this kind. On carefully looking into the act he was persuaded that it was impossible to deal with it otherwise than as an entirety. These Commissioners were not to exercise any physical functions at all, strictly speaking. They were only to exert a sort of legislative controlling authority, and therefore they could not perform an act in any of the counties of this great Metropolitan district which might not in some way affect this City. If they gave an order, it would be a general order under their general authority. The Commissioners were directed to disregard County lines. Altogether the thing was made so completely a unit that he thought it was not at all possible to limit this restraint in such a way as to preserve any particular County or precinct from the effect of this act. The Court might as well undertake to enjoin the Department of War from defending a particular point, and to say, nevertheless, that it should be at liberty to defend the whole country except that point, while the surrender of that would be the surrender of the whole. His Honor would see, by the 4th and 5th sections of this act, that the whole subject was treated as one thing; and, therefore, if the act were to be enjoined at all, it was to be enjoined as an entirety.

No possible harm could ensue from allowing the matter to rest as it was until the Judge was prepared with his decision on the whole subject. In New-York City the Chief of Police was head of the Department, and therefore competent to control it, even if the Mayor were dethroned. And certainly no one would have the hardihood to say that Staten Island or either of the two remaining counties would suffer the slightest injury in the meantime.

Mr. EDMONDS, on the same side, urged that the counsel for the Commissioners had shown no reason why the injunction should not be continued. The only basis of this motion was what they regarded as a concession of counsel, that the injunction related only to property. This he denied. He admitted that it had been the practice of Courts to confine injunctions to property, but it was only a habit, as many cases show. There was no reason why any part of the injunction should be modified. When the case was first presented, it was distinctly upon the 31st section, to prevent this organization, which had been authorized by the Court. They (the counsel for plaintiff) moved promptly in the matter, because it was expected, as the Commissioners were at that time taking the oath of office in Albany, they would within twenty-four hours be prepared to take possession of the Police Department, whether political power, corporate privileges or corporate property.

If the Court granted the modification proposed, the Commissioners could meet in Brooklyn within an hour, and appoint twelve hundred policemen, to swarm over the whole district, including this city; and these would be sure to come in conflict with what was now the legal force. A conflict would thus be inevitable.

The Judge observed that he had been looking to see what could be immediately done by this Board in these different counties. He apprehended that they could do nothing until the Board of Supervisors had met, and he thought it would be better for all parties to let the matter stand precisely as it was until he should render his decision.

Mr. O'CONOR remarked that that was precisely what he wanted.

Mr. FIELD strenuously objected and said that when the opportunity offered he desired to speak on that point.

Mr. EVARTS, on the part of the Commissioners, contended that they were entitled to a reduction of the injunction so that it should not be larger than the rights of the plaintiff and the evils he complained of. It was plain that if there were a right to impugn and arrest a law, there was no right of this plaintiff to arrest it where it did not interfere with him. But it was said that the Court could not separate the legal part of the injunction from the illegal. If this was so the whole injunction would fall, as in the case of a private contract. The Court saw that it was illegal, and yet they were met with argument of convenience, and told that no harm could arise from keeping the illegality over Sunday. Where they had positive law and positive right on their side, they were not to be driven to the question of convenience. And the Commissioners were in haste to enter on the performance of their duties for the same reason that His Honor was in haste to render his decision, viz.; in order to perform the duty properly to the public and advance the best interests of the community.

After much discursive and desultory argument,

Mr. FIELD rose to reply for the defendants. With two opening and one closing counsel, he said, on the other side, he thought that for the Commissioners certainly no reasonable objection could be made to only two counsel, neither of whom had the right to close.

Mr. O'CONOR—Yes, you can bring six if you like. Numbers won't affect the case much, I am confident.

Mr. FIELD—Oh, yes. And you were quite confident last that you had convinced Court, jury and spectators that you were right in everything, and yet I don't know that you convinced anybody.

Mr. O'CONOR—I defy you to state on your candid opinion as a lawyer that you believe this act is constitutional.

Mr. FIELD—I defy you to state on your candid opinion as a lawyer that you believe you have the right to this remedy.

Mr. O'CONOR—Oh, that is only a legal quibble.

The Judge—Counsel will please confine himself to the argument.

Mr. FIELD—Yes, your Honor, but being spoken to I felt called on to reply.

The learned gentleman proceeded to argue the right of the defendants to the modification proposed. Nobody, he said, had ventured to assert that there was a particle of a right to restrain these Commissioners from acting in parts of the country outside of New-York. The injunction should not be permitted for a moment to cover the other counties; it was not asked as a favor but demanded as a right. Mayor Wood, neither as mayor nor as a tax-payer of New-York, had any right to interfere with the authorities of Brooklyn. The safety of the inhabitants of all these three counties on our borders, depended upon the police, whose management had been entrusted by law to these Commissioners. He accepted the case put by the learned counsel, (Mr. O'CONOR.) They might just as well ask for an injunction to prevent the Secretary of War from carrying on any of his duties, because, in some way, he was infringing upon the right of a private citizen, as to ask for an injunction to extend over these three counties on the complaint of the Mayor of New-York. They could not have a judgment in the case till June, at least, and it would not be decided in the Court of Appeals before October. And did they seriously propose that these Commissioners should be restrained until next Autumn, on the complaint of Mayor Wood, from performing their duties in other counties?

Mr. O'CONOR, in closing on behalf of the plaintiff, denied that anything at all had been conceded on his part, as was claimed by the other side. It was very extraordinary that the learned gentlemen should argue at great length and with multiplied repetitions that counsel for plaintiff had conceded that the law was valid, save as it affected New-York, or that the plaintiff had no ground of action except as to property. They had conceded no such thing. The injunction which they had applied for referred solely to the financial relations and public interests of the City of New-York. Not one single word had they said about these other counties. Not one single line or word was there in the injunction in regard to them. The injunction was not applied for or formed so as to reach them. It was a sheer afterthought, a late conception, a sort of grasping at a straw in the death flurry or despair of the case for the defendants, after the counsel for the plaintiff had closed their observations in the case, to call on his Honor to grant what they were pleased to call a modification of the injunction. It was a covert attempt by artifice to make his Honor repeal and render ineffectual the injunction which he had granted. So much for all that matter as to concessions, which was certainly pure surplusage.

His learned associate (Mr. EDMONDS), in proceeding to argue this matter, had been interrupted (and in the propriety of that interruption both he [Mr. O'CONOR] and Mr. EDMONDS himself acquiesced) by his Honor, who said that it was not necessary to argue any other than the specific question—whether any particular inconvenience or any inconvenience was likely to result or could possibly result in the administration of the law, the preservation of order, and the protection of property, in the three adjacent counties, in case this injunction should stand as at present during the short period that may elapse before the Court decides. He (the Judge) had called on counsel to lay their finger on any specific inconvenience to result from a delay for a few days. He asked them to address themselves to that specific, intelligent, simple, plain inquiry—an inquiry which indeed presents the only question at all calling for this extraordinary emergent action required from his Honor. But the counsel on the other side had been unable to point out a single disadvantage to arise from it, except so far as it would delay these commissioners from the enjoyment of the emoluments and honors of their office.

And the Counsel who last addressed the Court, when the Judge drew his attention to the point, instead of replying directly to the suggestion, ran into the same old argument about abstract rights, and about the desire of the Commissioners to enter on the performance of their duties, but not one single, sober, steady, appreciable fact. The Court had not asked counsel to go to work and get proof of this inconvenience. He had not put them to the pain and difficulty of establishing it by legal affirmative proofs. He had allowed them to resort to their own imagination to say anything that was plausible, or that would lead his Honor to suppose, not merely in a judicial way, but in a general way, that any evil would follow from this delay.

The modification to the original injunction permitted the Commissioners to perform the primary and principal act, which was at first forbidden, namely to organise. All that part of the injunction had no further operation. But the injunction had gone further. In addition to forbidding them to enter the office, the Judge had gone on to specify the particular things which in that office—if by any means they got in—they should not do. He had forbidden them to assume any control over the police force of the City and county of New-York; to enter into or take possession of any telegraphic apparatus, public police property, books, records or accoutrements now in possession of the Police Department of said City, or to exercise any authority or power over or in regard to the police of the said City and County of New-York, or to any of its offices, records or property. But the Judge had allowed them to enter on their office. There was not a single word in the injunction to restrain them from doing anything else except these acts.

The Judge so understood it.

Mr. O'CONOR—There is no difficulty in understanding it.

Mr. FIELD—Then there is no objection to saying so.

Mr. O'CONOR—We will see.

Mr. FIELD—(To the Court)—He (Mr. O'CONOR) does not want you to say so; that is the difficulty.

Mr. O'CONOR could perfectly well understand that if a traitor were allowed to draw up a law against treason he would make it strong enough to satisfy any ordinary scrutiny, and weak enough to permit him to escape whenever he saw fit to commit an act of treason. So he objected to letting those gentlemen against whom that injunction was issued determine its terms. He never would allow an offender to draught the law by which he was to be restrained. He would draw it himself if he could, because he wished to protect his rights; and if he were not permitted to do so in this case, he would ask the impartial Judge who sat between them to draw it in his judgment and wisdom, and according to his views of the force of language, and of the construction which that language may receive when it comes up for investigation before the tribunal of last resort.

They wanted license to go and do anything they might please to do there, tantum valeat. But his Honor did not sit here to give them any commission. He sat here to consider the modification of an injunction, and perhaps to admonish them to be very careful lest, under the appearance of doing something which they might seem to have a right to do, they should violate this injunction. This, the Court would perceive, was but a sensible, rational and perfectly practicable application of the Judge's power in the way of this injunction to the law of the land. These gentlemen had already had all which they said they wanted. They said that the law now allowed them to act in three counties unless the Judge restrained them. The Judge had not restrained them. They said they, we want you to tell us in so many words that you have not restrained us, and we want you to give us leave to act in Kings County, notwithstanding that you have only forbidden us to act in the City of New York. We want you to draw it up just in such a way.

But if the Judge tucked away the City of New-York under an exception like that, he would stultify himself; he would nullify his own injunction, and render it ineffectual and void. His learned friend (Mr. Field) had asked how long this state of things is to last, and had talked about a special term not sitting here till June next. Now, he would tell his learned friend just how long it would last, unless his (Mr. Field's) clients chose to play the game of evading a trial. He would engage to file against them, before the sun went down, a writ of quo warranto. He would engage to assert nothing against them, save that they were in possession of the office of Commissioners. His Honor could not sit at Chambers on Monday morning, and he would submit to His Honor's judgment, no matter what that might be. He would not ask to go to another Judge, but he would ask the other side to consent to a notice of trial on an appeal to general term, which was to sit next week, and the case would be found to be, before ten days, in a position to go to the Court of Appeals. Every lawyer knew that to be so, for there was no question of fact involved. The act of the Legislature and the entry into this office were all the facts which needed to be pleaded. In the month of June the Court of Appeals would sit, and his Honor might undertake to say that a case of such magnitude as this, involving the interests of this great metropolis, and affecting a great constitutional question, would be first to be heard.

Mr. FIELD—The Court is bound by law to hear it first.

Judge DAVIES—Yes, a quo warranto has always the preference.

Mr. O'CONOR was not putting the case on its legal precedence, but on the ground of its importance. The Attorney General was one of the counsel in the case, and would file a quo warranto immediately, if necessary, so that it was plain the question could be settled before the 4th of July.

The Judge, after private consultation with the counsel on both sides, made the following order, the modification being the clause in Italics:

It is ordered that the injunction heretofore made in this cause is hereby amended, to be read as follows:—In the mean time, and until the said motion be decided, I do hereby order, restrain and enjoin the above-named defendants, and each and all of them, from entering upon the duties of the office of Commissioner of Police, so far as the said duties relate to, or affect the City of New-York, as mentioned in the act entitled an act to establish a Metropolitan Police District, and provide for the government thereof, passed April 15, 1857, from assuming any control over the police force of the city and county of New-York, from entering upon or taking possession of any telegraphic apparatus, public police property, books, records and accoutrements now in the possession of the Police Department, and power over or in respect to the police of the city and county of New-York, or any of its offices, records or property.

HENRY E. DAVIES.

AN ABSOLUTE INJUNCTION GRANTED BY JUDGE ROOSEVELT.

As Mr. O'Conor, in his argument, intimated would be done—

Mr. Cushing, Attorney-General of the State, who is associate counsel for Mayor Wood, shot out a writ of quo warranto, and Judge ROOSEVELT granted an absolute injunction, restraining the defendants from interfering in any way whatever with the duties of the office of Police Commissioner.

The injunction is as follows:

The people of the State of New-York, in the relation of Fernando Wood, Mayor of the City of New York, vs. Simeon Draper, &c.

Whereas the complaint in this action demands judgment against the above-named defendants, that they be ousted from the office hereinafter mentioned, and restrained from exercising, as a pretended board, under an act of the Legislature of the State of New-York, entitled "An act to establish a Metropolitan Police District, and to provide for the government thereof," or otherwise, the respective offices of Police Commissioners in the City of New-York and heads of the respective Police departments of the Cities of New-York and Brooklyn, respectively, from exercising all or any part of the powers and authority which, before the passage of the said act of the Legislature were conferred by law upon the Board of Commissioners of Police of the City of New-York, or upon the Mayor, Recorder, and City Judge of the Cities of New-York or Brooklyn, respectively, as the heads therein of the respective police departments therein, and which relate to or are connected with the police government, police appointments or police discipline within either of said Cities, or within the counties of Kings or New-York; and whereas it appears, by said complaint, that the plaintiffs are entitled to the relief demanded, and that the continuance by the defendants in the exercise of any of the aforesaid offices, or any of the aforesaid power or authority, would be a violation of the rights of the people of the State of New-York respecting the subject of the action, to tend to render postponement unadvised; and whereas, it appears satisfactory by the affidavit of Fernando Wood, presented on behalf of the plaintiff, that sufficient grounds for this injunction exist; now, therefore, on motion of the Attorney General, on behalf of the people of the State, and on hearing Mr. Sedgwick and Mr. O'Conor of counsel in support of the motion, it is ordered that the above-named defendants, and each of them be, and they hereby are, commanded and enjoined wholly to desist and refrain from exercising, either of such pretended board or otherwise, the offices aforesaid, or any of them, or the said power and authority aforesaid, or any part thereof, until the further order of this court in the premises.

J. J. ROOSEVELT.

NEW YORK, April 25, 1857.

The subjoined papers are copies of the summons and complaint of the Attorney-General and the affidavit of Mayor Wood, on which the absolute injunction was issued:

Supreme Court, County of New-York.—The people of the State of New York, on the relation of Fernando Wood vs Simeon Draper, James Bowen James W. Nye, Jacob Cholwell and James S. T. Stranahan. To the defendants: You are hereby summoned and required to answer the complaint in this action, of which a copy is herewith served upon you, and serve a copy of your answer on me at the office of Theodore Sedgwick, No. 44 Wall-street, in the City of New-York, within twenty days after the service hereof, exclusive of the day of such service; and if you fail to answer the complaint as aforesaid, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

S. B. CUSHING,

Att'y General of the People of the State of N. Y.

NEW-YORK, April 25, 1857.

Same vs. Same—The people of the State of New-York, plaintiffs on the relation of Fernando Wood, Mayor of the City of New-York, by Stephen B. Cushing, the Attorney-General of said people, complain of Simeon Draper, James Bowen, James W. Nye, Jacob Cholwell and James S. T. Stranahan, defendants in this action, and show that at the time of the passage of a certain pretended act of the Legislature of the State of New-York, entitled "an act to establish a Metropolitan Police district, and to provide for the government thereof," on or about the 15th day of April, 1857, the office of Police Commissioners and member of the Board of Commissioners of Police of the City of New-York was, and ever since hath been and still is a police civil office of said City, the said Police Commissioners of right comprising such Board, being three in number—that is to say, the Mayor, Recorder and City Judge of the said City of New-York; and at the same time the office of head of the Police Department of the City of New-York was and ever since hath been and still is a public civil office in said City, of right belonging and appertaining to the office of Mayor of said City, and at the same time the office of head of the Police Department in the City of Brooklyn was, and ever since has been and still is a public civil office in said city of Brooklyn, of right belonging and appertaining to the office of Mayor of the said City of Brooklyn; and the said plaintiffs further say that after that time, to the 23d day of April, 1857, at the City and County of New-York, Simeon Draper, James Bowen, James W. Nye, Jacob Cholwell and James S. T. Stranahan, as a pretended Board of Police, under said pretended act, without any legal warrant, act or grant, whatsoever, intruded into and usurped the said several offices of Police Commissioners and heads of the Police Department in the City of New-York, and head of the Police Department in the city of Brooklyn, and then and from thenceforth hitherto, that is to say, for the space of three days, have unlawfully held and exercised the said offices of Police Commissioners and head of the Police Department in the City of New York, and head of the Police Department of the city of Brooklyn, and also all the power and authority which before the passage of said pretended act of the Legislature of the State of New-York, was conferred by law upon the Board of Commissioners of Police of the City of New-York, or upon the said Mayor, Recorder and City Judge of the City of New York, or upon the Mayors of the said cities of New York and Brooklyn respectively, as the head therein, and which relate to or are in any way connected with the police government, police appointments, or police discipline within either of said cities, or within the counties of Kings or New-York, and still do so unlawfully usurp, hold and exercise the said several offices of Police Commissioners and head of Police aforesaid, and all the power and authority aforesaid, in contempt of the people of the State of New-York, and in violation of the Constitution and laws of the said State, and to the prejudice of the said people. Wherefore the said plaintiffs pray that the said Simeon Draper, James Bowen, James W. Nye, Jacob Cholwell, and James S. T. Stranahan may answer and show by what authority they and each of them claim to hold, use or enjoy the aforesaid respective offices of Police Commissioners and heads of Police Department, and all or any part of the power and authority aforesaid; and the said plaintiffs demand judgment against the said Simeon Draper, James Bowen, James W. Nye, Jacob Cholwell, and James S. T. Stranahan, that they, and each of them, be ousted from the said office, and from all the said power and authority aforesaid, and every part thereof; and that the said relator be declared entitled to hold, use, exercise and enjoy all the powers, rights and privileges of the said offices of Police Commissioners and said Board of Police Commissioners, and head of the Police Department in the City of New-York, as he of right ought to have, hold, exercise and enjoy the same, under the laws of the State of New-York existing and in force at the time first above-mentioned, and that the said defendant pay the costs of this action, and that the said plaintiff may have such other or further relief in the premises, or both, as may be granted.

S. B. CUSHING, Attorney-General.

Same vs. Same—City and County of New York, ss.—Fernando Wood, the relator above-named, being duly sworn, says, that he is now legally and actually the Mayor of the City of New York, and that as such, by virtue of various acts of the State of New-York, is now, and for a long time past has been, the head and chief executive of the Police Department of the City of New York, and as such has the possession, custody and control of a large amount and number of stationhouses situated in the City of New York, telegraph apparatus, accoutrements, books, and other property, real and personal, all of which is exclusively used for the use of the said Police Department of the City of New-York, and also the charge, direction and government of the Police force or corps of the said Department, being about four of about twelve hundred men; and this deponent further says that he has read the complaint in this cause, and that the facts therein stated are true of his own knowledge. And this deponent further states that the defendants above-named have proceeded to organize as a Metropolitan Police Commission, under and by virtue of an act entitled "An act to establish a Metropolitan Police District, and to provide for the government thereof," passed on or about the fifteenth day of April, in the year 1857; that this deponent has taken as competent legal advice in the premises as he has been able to procure, and that he is advised that the act aforesaid is unconstitutional and wholly void; and this deponent further saith that he has been instructed by both branches of the Common Council of the City of New-York to resist all action of the said Police Commissioners under the said act, and that an ordinance has been duly passed by the said Common Council to that effect, of which a copy is hereto annexed. And this deponent further says that, unless the said Metropolitan Police Commissioners are enjoined from proceeding under the said act, and from doing any act to assert any power or authority over the said Police force or the property of the said Police Department, the most serious consequences may ensue to the peace and tranquility of the City, and that it is necessary to the rights of this deponent, and, above all, to the good order and government of the City, that the said Commissioners be enjoined as aforesaid until a decision can be had in this suit.

FERNANDO WOOD.

THE ELVES.
Lagoon.—The mountain forests of Pastoria are inhabited, it is said, by fairies and Elves, who, like the Phantom Dancers of Germany, delight to entrap travelers into their realms and torment them with their mischievous antics. Having the power of transferring the spirit, they often, in their malicious gambols, give life to the newly dead. Statues, rocks and trees are seen fantastically moving in the forest, but it is only during the DAY they retain their fictitious existence; at the approach of NIGHT they resume their immobility.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Cunard steamship America arrived at Boston about 10 A. M., on Saturday, and her mails reached this City at an early hour yesterday morning. We do not find in our foreign files much additional intelligence. Now that the elections in Great Britain are almost over, public attention is turned to the meeting of the new Parliament and the election of a Speaker, which will be the first question to test the strength of the different political parties. The leading journal criticises the pretensions of the three existing candidates—Mr. BANKS, Mr. FITZROY, and Mr. E. [illegible]—and declares in favor of the last, who has also announced as the Ministerial candidate for the high office. Mr. JOHN BRIGHT, ex-member for Manchester, has addressed his constituents in a valedictory letter, in which he intimates that he will not reënter public life. Our correspondence from London and Paris, published this morning will be found to contain interesting resumés of the news of the week.

Secretary STANTON, acting Governor of Kansas, has issued an address to the people of the Territory, in which he says that the authority of the Territorial Legislature is recognized by the Administration, and that its laws are recognized as valid—especially the act providing for a Constitutional Convention. That Convention, he presumes, will leave the question of domestic institutions to a subsequent vote of the people. A general amnesty for past prosecutions is recommended.

According to accounts, official and otherwise, which reach us through our files, the whole western border of Minnesota and Northwestern Iowa are in a great state of alarm on account of the hostile manifestations of the Sioux Indians, partial accounts of which have reached us by telegraph. The most horrible murders and outrages of every description are committed. The inhabitants of all the settlements in that region are flying to arms, and the women and children are being removed to positions of safety. General SHIELDS has taken command of a company, and gone in pursuit of the Indians.

The propeller Fanny Garner blew up on the Delaware and Raritan Canal, near Weston, N. J., on Saturday morning, killing the Captain and four of the crew, and seriously injuring three others. The propeller was totally destroyed, she being blown into splinters above the water. An account of the occurrence will be found under our telegraphic head.

A dispatch from Harrisburg states that a new political combination has just been developed in Pennsylvania, between a portion of the Democracy and the straight-out Americans, and that Ex-Governor GRAHY has agreed to accept their nomination for the Gubernatorial chair.

On Saturday Judge DAVIES modified the injunction against the Police Commissioners, by which they were restrained from entering upon their official duties, by the simple addition of the clause, "so far as the said duties relate to or affect the City of New-York." Judge ROOSEVELT, however, on the application of Mr. CUSHING, the Attorney-General, who is also one of the counsel for Mayor WOOD, granted an absolute injunction, by which the Commissioners are restrained from the performance of any official act anywhere. A writ of quo warranto was granted by the same Judge. The Police Commissioners met on Saturday by appointment, but did nothing.

The closing services in the Tabernacle took place before one of the most crowded audiences ever assembled within its walls. Rev. Mr. THOMPSON delivered an eloquent discourse, in which he reviewed the history of the building, and of the Church connected therewith. The ceremonies on this occasion were special, and of very singular interest. The demolition of the building will commence on Friday next.

The corner-stone of a large Catholic Church was yesterday laid at Clifton, Staten Island, by Archbishop HUGHES. Several thousand persons were present, and the ceremonies were very imposing.

The Mulberry-street Methodist Church devoted yesterday to touching reminiscences, it being the last day that they worship in their old building. They dedicate, soon, a new house on Forty-second-street, near Eighth-avenue.

The body of a young woman was found, yesterday morning, in the North River, at the foot of Reade-street. It was nearly nude—a small rope with a noose upon it was about the neck. An inquest upon it will be held this forenoon at the Coroners' Office. Deceased had long brown hair, and appeared to be about 18 years of age.

There were 293 deaths in the City last week—a decrease of 24 compared with the number of the week previous. There were 8 deaths from apoplexy, 4 from erysipelas, 36 from scarlet fever, 7 from disease of the heart, 9 from small-pox, 1 from sore throat, and 46 from consumption.

INDIAN TROUBLES IN THE NORTHWEST.—The details which we publish this morning of Indian outrages upon our Northwestern frontier are of startling interest. The official report of Major WILLIAMS, who was sent with three companies, of thirty men each, to check the murderous inroad of the savages in the upper part of Iowa, gives a graphic picture of the atrocities which have been perpetrated, and an alarming account of the dangers that seem to be impending. This report shows that a force of Indians, about 200 in number, having previously been on terms of friendly intercourse with the whites, suddenly appeared among them as enemies, and on the 27th of March commenced the work of murder and outrage. They spared neither sex, killing women and children as well as men, and accompanying their murders with acts of the most horrible outrage and brutality. The number of whites known to have been killed is 41, most of whose bodies were found, and buried by the expedition. At least 20 more are believed to have perished.

Major WILLIAMS states that it was evident the intention of the Sioux Indians to wage a war of extermination on our North-Western frontiers, and although he states that he has driven out of the Northern part of the State every one of the tribe, there is great reason to fear a repetition of their invasion and of the outrages which have already been committed. They are well armed and abundantly supplied with ammunition.

This matter will undoubtedly engage the early attention of the Government at Washington. We fear there is too much reason to apprehend at no distant day very serious difficulties from the various Indian tribes who have been planted along our Western frontier, as if for the express purpose of checking and turning back the tide of Western emigration. But it is the duty of our Government to afford prompt and complete protection to our settlers upon the Western border,—and we hope no time will be lost in taking measures to repel and chastise with the utmost severity any future inroads of this kind.

Manifest Destiny.

In commenting hastily upon the speech of the Ex-Attorney-General of the United States, which we published on Saturday morning, we found occasion to say of it that it embodied much of justice and truth in respect to that theory of the indefinite expansion and extension of American institutions, which is commonly known under the vague but available name of "Manifest Destiny," as well as in regard to the condition, prospects and obligations of party life in America.

Upon the first of these two themes we are disposed to speak somewhat more at length today, for it seems to us to be high time that the friends of American freedom and of American institutions should take a watchword which belongs to none but to themselves, out of the lips of men who abuse it to the service of all that is most hostile to the freedom and most deadly to the institutions of the Republic.

Mr. CUSHING was a prominent member of an Administration which did nothing to foster the freedom or to fortify the institutions of the United States. He was, on the contrary, an active instrument in the most audacious attacks which have ever been made upon the Constitution of the country, and upon the rights of American citizens. Instead of civilizing the Indian tribes out of Spanish-America, or emancipating Cuba into Republican greatness, he contributed the utmost of his ability to a scheme for barbarizing the borderers of our Western States, and for degrading a free American Territory into an imbecile and spiritless Province. The Government with which he worked added not one inch of territory to our dominion, nor one ray of glory to the confederate stars of our national banner. Were we, therefore, to judge Mr. CUSHING by his deeds, we should pronounce him a mortal enemy of American progress—a man either incompetent to conceive or incapable of executing any statesmanlike project of national aggrandizement.

But Mr. CUSHING is eminently an unpractical person. He is a man of words—unequal to fulfill himself in deeds; and accepting him, therefore, in his proper function, we commend him afresh as we commended him on Saturday for putting into a very forcible and impressive shape certain ideas more true than new, which must lie at the bottom of all our future national policy. Very admirably did he say that the final aim of the Providential history of the new world "is the foundation in America of Republican Empires to outcount in numbers and ontvie in strength the parent States of Europe."

That is indeed the work which we are to do. But how are we to do it?

How are we to "found" Republican Empires?—how are we to constitute strong healthy prolific States in those vast regions of the Western Continent which still invite civilization and await prosperity?

Here is the practical question—the question upon which the statesman pauses to solve it, while the declaimer soars over it, sublimely heedless, to expatiate in the realms of rhetorical space. And upon this question, the action of the great State of Massachusetts throws more of light than all the words of the oratorical gentleman who so gravely assures us that the "world is rushing by her to leave her in the lurch!" We have no fanatical admiration of the State of Massachusetts; we have frequent occasion to lament her obstinacy, and to smile at what we cannot help considering her somewhat provincial arrogance, but we know too well how important a part she has played in the development of our national greatness, and we revere too much her stately and steadfast devotion to the true principles of Republican prosperity, not to point all believers in the "Manifest Destiny" of the United States to the magnificent example which she, in common with all the great Free States of the Union, presents, of a righteously-constituted Commonwealth, affording to individual character, energy, and enterprise, a vast and unrestricted field of activity.

It is by the multiplication of such free and powerful States—States composed of men who not only "know their rights, and knowing, dare maintain, but know their duties too"—that the area of Freedom will be extended, southward, westward, northward, over the glorious expanse of territory opened by Heaven to the influences of American Liberty.

The brutalities, the uncertainties, and the speculative passions which domineer over the present, and darken the future of such nullifying and repudiating States as South Carolina and Mississippi, afford no guarantee of stability and power. Such States may flourish to-day like Cuba, only to waste away and disappear to-morrow like Mexico. Within the fatal circle of their institutions neither honest industry nor high ambition can live and thrive. They breed at once the instinctive loves and hates of barbarism; the love of unlicensed power and unlawful display; the hate of legalized rights and limited responsibility. Out of Mr. CUSHING'S own mouth comes their terrible rebuke. Dispatched by the Government upon a commercial mission to China, Mr. CUSHING sailed across the North Pacific before the thousand sails of Californian enterprise had whitened those placid waters. Standing now before the citizens of a maritime town of Massachusetts, and contemplating the almost miraculous change which a few years have wrought in the aspect of these once unvexed and desolate seas, he asks his hearers and himself what magic power has brought to pass those wonders beyond speech. And he answers his own question in words of most impressive truth. This change is indeed a miracle—not of demon-slaves driven under the lash of some magician taskmaster, but of American courage, American virtue and American genius working out our country's destinies under the preordained impulsion of Almighty God." Precisely so it is, oh least astute of ex-attorneys general! Precisely so! By no slaves, human or diabolic, has this change been effected, which in five short years converted the mission ground of a few Franciscan friars into the capital of a wealthy cosmopolitan State, and filled the silent ranches and deserted fields of California with busy, bustling, indomitable thousands of the Anglo-Saxon race!

Freemen have done the work! Freemen carrying to the furthest West the instincts and the hopes, the will, the faith, the hope and trust of English freedom ripened on our own free soil! And when the South shall learn to know and feel the meaning of this grand historic truth; when all the fierce and frantic sons of the cotton-growing, rice-planting States shall awaken to the perception that they are arraying themselves and their own uncertain industry against the irreversible, unconquerable movement not only of the human race and of the nineteenth century, but of their own people; then, and not till then, may we expect the wealthy, responsible, and truly powerful States of the American Union to perceive distinctly, and fearlessly to accept the tendency of events in the Western Hemisphere, and to surrender themselves without a hesitation or a thrill of doubt to the currents of "manifest destiny."

Those "viewless coursers of the wind," of which Mr. CUSHING so glibly and so grandly discourses, are held in the Almighty's hand. Their race depends not on their swiftness nor their strength, so much as on the aim of their career. God made us free and strong, and set us far from all the intrigues and vexations of the elder world, that we might establish justice as it had never been established before, and shame the nations of the earth into righteousness and peace. That "fatal movement" of which Mr. CUSHING speaks in somewhat Pagan terms, is no "fatal" movement at all, but a Divine proclivity of impulses most Christian, providential and sublime,—impulses which every touch of baser interests and of inhuman ambition arrests instead of assisting. Mr. CUSHING hails with exuberant joy the tardy sympathy extended to ourselves by England in the great work laid upon us by the will of Heaven. With him we welcome that late sympathy, but we desire that it may show itself in something more positive and powerful than protocols and after-dinner talk, and to that end we do propose, as he does not, to justify it by steady efforts in behalf of all the good we have achieved, now menaced by skeptical fanatics and unbelieving foes, before we stretch out the bands of our almost irresistible power to grasp the vast "America, wherein God wills that we should work out his eternal plans!"

Governorship of Utah.

The refusal of Major MCCULLOCH, a courageous and experienced soldier, to accept the Governorship of Utah, is to be lamented. It is, however, no matter of surprise. That any man not weary of life, and ordinarily cognizant of the value of peace and quietness, should volunteer upon a duty so difficult,—we might better say at once, desperate—as this appointment involves, is hardly to be anticipated; and unfortunately the applicants for federal service are not apt to be prompted by propensities of a suicidal sort. Major MCCULLOCH declines to close a not inglorious military career by leading a forlorn hope. Who else will head it?

For Utah, to be governed, must first be subdued. The Territory is in a state of rebellion, the more dangerous and difficult of repression because it is neither open nor violent. Anybody can quell flames that blaze out in broad daylight. It is the latent, volcanic, indetectible fires, that defy all usual means of extinguishment. Outwardly a child of the Federal family, and actually asking admission to the privileges of equal membership and adult honors, the Territory is really independent and defiant of Federal authority. Its scheme of ecclesiastical polity is essentially incompatible with republican institutions. Acts of Congress have as little energy there as acts of Parliament. Federal Magistrates are the scoff and derision of the people. In fact, from the first attempt to execute the Federal laws within the Territory, seven years ago, they have only been executed so far as they comported with the autocratic views of the Mormon hierarchy; in all instances of conflict they have been invalid. And those instances of conflict embrace all the points upon which public and private morality, the order and permanent well-being of society depend. The notorious licentiousness of the Mormons, the enslavement of their women, the multiplication and hopeless degradation of their children, the abandonment of all principles of good faith in their transactions with the "Gentile" world; the despotic character of the priestly office, are so many elements of barbarism which, left unchecked, must present the most extraordinary example of social degeneracy recorded in history. For licentiousness, those great Salt Lake cities of the Old World, Sodom and Gomorrah, present no more flagrant picture. For female debasement, we look in vain for a simile among the most effete of the Indian tribes. For the brutalization of childhood and youth, the Chinese may afford a parallel. The worst of religious madmen and bigots never held more unscrupulously to the doctrine of "no faith with heretics." A college of Things never bowed more implicitly to the will of their chief. And all these pernicious conditions are so compacted and bound together by an all-pervading and all-daring fanaticism, that to withstand them, or restrain them, or repress them, will require a concentration of personal courage, and powerful physical force, which will not, we fear, be brought to act upon them. The governor must be a soldier, prudent, resolute and indomitable. To select the wrong leader, or to support him inadequately, will merely give time for further consolidation of those mischievous powers in the person of BRIGHAM YOUNG, which the operation of the Mormon system hourly accelerates. The task is herculean. Compared with it, the office of Gov. WALKER is a sinecure; just as political fanaticism is a toy beside the fanaticism of a self-indulgent religion: a bonfire compared with a capital in flames.

More Fancy Stocks.

Mr. ELI THAYER, of Massachusetts, is the active agent and representative of an Emigration Company chartered by our State Legislature at its late session, and numbering among its members several men of known wealth, energy and business enterprise. The object of their incorporation was to promote Emigration from the Cities of the East into the sparsely settled sections of the West and South: and it commends itself to public favor by the public advantage of its plans, and to the individual judgment by the business-like character of the work it has undertaken. It is not easy to see upon what ground any active opposition should anywhere arise to a scheme which proposes to remove labor from a district where it is a drug, to one where it is in active demand. All parties and both sections would alike be benefitted by such an operation;—and if the transfer were made with judgment, caution and an honest purpose, it could not fail to result in positive and very decided advantage to all concerned.

But an officious and foolish friend can destroy the best and most promising project,—and it will not be Mr. ELI THAYER'S fault if this Emigration scheme does not find its place among the most ridiculous of the many failures which mark the history of modern speculation. Instead of presenting it to the public judgment upon its intrinsic merits, he is engaged in a systematic attempt to puff it into favor through the columns of the Herald, by the same machinery and in precisely the same way which carried Parker Vein up to 80, and pushed Potosi Lead upon the public favor as one of the most profitable and reliable enterprises of the day.

The following, which is the latest of Mr. THAYER'S bulletins, may be taken as a fair specimen of the fulminations by which he aims to induce the public to intrust their money to his investment:

WORCESTER, Wednesday, April 21, 1857.

Mr. BENNETT—Dear Sir: I take the liberty to send you a few extracts from the numerous and interesting communications recently received from the natives and citizens of the State of Virginia, earnestly soliciting for their "dilapidated State the surplus money and population of the Free States and of Europe."

We may hereafter submit to the public the views of citizens of Kentucky, Tennessee and Missouri.

The politicians of Eastern Virginia will probably now have time to rest and meditate upon their policy. Better offers have come from other and more inviting sections.

In a national and patriotic view of this question, it is obvious that a proper balance of power between the East and the West requires our strength at present on the Atlantic seaboard. Eastern Virginia, to this end, should have our surplus money and population for the next three years. But we shall not force our favors upon her at a sacrifice to ourselves. Profit, not patriotism, is the duty of business corporations.

Western Virginia has proffered a friendly welcome fit to be considered, perhaps accepted.

Kentucky has presented the strongest inducements yet offered from any quarter—pledges of good will and a cordial reception—cheap lands in abundance, full of mineral wealth, fertile, well timbered, healthy and accessible.

Missouri has not yet presented many claims. We wait for a more full display of her numerous attractions. Her undeveloped resources are without limit.

Let us continue to hear from the progressive sons of North Carolina and Tennessee. They speak hopefully and well.

Applications to go are as numerous as invitations to come.

Nearly two thousand men, women and children have applied for some position in the front ranks of the contemplated invasion. Every day swells the great Army of Industry.

To give individuality to this class of citizen heroes, as well as to indicate their friendly and peaceful purposes, they will hereafter be called The Neighbors. With subsoil plows they will commence their attack somewhere next September.

Where shall we go with our annual army of one hundred thousand "neighbors?" They will average in property at least $900 each, and will be worth to the State of their adoption not less than $1,000 each, making in all one hundred and twenty millions of dollars every year.

What State will most tempt this friendly invasion, that comes with churches, and schools, and presses, and the useful arts—that builds up cities, and towns, and villages, and palaces of labor—that brings commerce, and enterprise, and industry, and crowning wealth—that marks its path with cottages and vineyards, with corn fields and orchards?

We hope to hear further, through private letters and public journals, from Kentucky, Virginia, and Missouri.

Where shall we "strike in" next September with our subsoil ploughs?

Truly, yours, ELI THAYER.

Is there anything better than this in the entire catalogue of puffs of Parker Vein which we recently copied from the files of its "historian?" Is it possible to concoct a more magnificent programme of promises, whereby to entice eager and sanguine avarice into a surrender of its cash? What farmer, struggling to obtain a bare living for a large family from the sterile soil of New-England, who will not jump at the chance of joining this "annual army of 100,000 neighbors" and making in solid cash one hundred millions of dollars every year! We do not know what have been Mr. ELI THAYER'S antecedents,—but he has certainly studied, if not practised, to good purpose, in the school of fancy-stock jobbing and moonshine speculation.

That Virginia, Kentucky and Missouri offer marked inducements to labor when accompanied by capital, we have no doubt. But any attempt to force upon either of those States, or upon any other, a supply of labor beyond its immediate demands must end in ruin, which will fall the heaviest upon the laborers who yield to its allurements. There are lands in these States which have been exhausted by bad culture, and which may be bought cheaply and possibly be reclaimed. But money to be expended in manure, in extra labor, and in various improvements of every sort, is the main thing needed—and that can be expended to five times as good advantage in the fertile and unexhausted West. There may be opportunities of making money by buying farms in Virginia; but whoever proposes to try the experiment would do well not to rely with any great degree of confidence upon the absurd assurances and palpable exaggerations of Mr. ELI THAYER. A movement of this kind, to command confidence and success, should be managed with discretion and prudence. The business men whose names have been announced in connection with it, must know that nothing is more certain to bring it into distrust and contempt, and them as its backers into discredit, than the absurd overstatements and the delusive promises which form the staple of Mr. THAYER'S appeals. They sound much more like the rigmarole of the mock auctioneer, or the Herald's bald puffs of Potosi and Parker Vein, than the sober realities and simple facts upon which a business operation should rest for its basis.

PAY OF THE PARK COMMISSIONERS.—It seems that the reported amendment of the Central Park Bill giving the Governor of the State power to name the compensation of the Commissioners, did not pass; and that the bill finally passed as at first reported in the Assembly, giving them no pay; but allowing them three hundred dollars a year for their actual expenses, or rather allowing them their expenses in the discharge of their duty to that amount. The bill provides that in the event of the disqualification of the Commissioners, the Mayor and the Board of Aldermen shall appoint others to fill their places; so that if the action of the present Board by the Legislature should be decided to have been unconstitutional, the bill for the improvement of the Park will remain good, and a new Board will have to be nominated by the Mayor.

The First Commoner of England.

The Speaker of the British House of Commons is called the First Commoner of England, and the fortunate gentleman who has been selected by Lord PALMERSTON to fill this exalted position, Mr. EVELYN DENISON, is said to possess, in an eminent degree, all the requisite qualifications for the place, being a man of property, the representative of a great country, the relative of a Duke, in robust health, tall and good looking, possessed of a fine voice, a clear eye, a graceful and commanding figure; he is, in short, a model English gentleman, and calculated to command respect by his appearance as much as by his moral character.

But the first Commoner is, in fact, something of a misnomer, for by his election to the Speakership he is virtually promoted to the Peerage, and when he retires from his chair it is only to take his place, with a pension, in the House of Lords. The first Commoner, though he is supposed to represent the Commons of England, is almost always taken from the aristocratic, or governing classes; for it is but natural that the Ministry, which is always composed of that class, should take one of its order to be added to the Peerage. There appears to have been some thoughts of choosing the Right Hon. M. T. BAINES for this post, whose father, we believe, was the founder and editor of the Leeds Mercury, one of the most respectable of the English provincial papers; but whether it was the plebeian origin of Mr. BAINES, or some personal defect that caused his rejection we do not know. The Times stated that his health was not good, that he was too old, and that he was near-sighted, which were certainly objections. But Mr. BAINES replied in a letter that his health was perfectly good, that he could see as well as anybody with the aid of his glasses, and as to age, he was but one year older than the gentleman chosen for the place. We fear that Mr. DENISON'S relationship to the Duke of Portland, though it is only by marriage turned the scale in his favor.

Mr. DENISON is not yet elected, but his nomination by the Ministry is all the same as an election, and it is said that he will be chosen without a contest. What a contrast the election and position of a Speaker of the House of Commons presents to the choice and position of our House of Representatives. In one case the man represents the nation, and in the other he is only the representative of a party.

LAST SERVICE AT THE TABERNACLE.

History of the Building—Its Origin and Vicissitudes—Why it is to be Torn Down, and the Church Removed up Town.

The Tabernacle, with which so many honored memories are associated, whose every brick and corner stone, and beam, and rafter, and lath, are echoes of the memorable words that have been uttered there for religion and human freedom for nearly a quarter of a century, was the scene of a very interesting ceremony last night. The last religious service took place there. The last sermon was preached there. The organ pealed there for the last time. Within its walls not less than four thousand people had assembled, filling the aisles and blockading the entrances. Before and on each side of the organ was a choir of two hundred ladies and gentlemen, all of whom had at some period been connected as singers with the Tabernacle, under one or other of the two leaders of the choir, Mr. G. ANDREWS or Mr. W. B. BRADBURY, who also were both present and joined in the anthems last night.

The services commenced with an anthem composed by Mr. BRADBURY, specially for the occasion, the words from Isaiah, chap. 2, verses 1 and 2, "and it shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it. And many people shall go and say, come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob, and he will teach us his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for out of Zion shall go forth the law and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem." This anthem having been admirably sung, Rev. Mr. WOOD, Secretary of the Foreign Missionary Society, read the 132d Psalm, beginning, "Lord, remember David and all his troubles," and afterwards, the 122d Psalm, commencing, "I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord."

Rev. Mr. BADGER, of the Home Missionary Society, then offered prayer, after which Rev. Mr. THOMPSON, the pastor of the Tabernacle, addressed the congregation, and stated that their new House of Worship would be erected on the corner of Sixth-avenue and Thirty-fourth-street, at the junction with Broadway, so that in the course of a year or two the Broadway Tabernacle would still be in the heart of the City. During the building of the church the congregation would worship at the City Assembly Rooms, No 448 Broadway, where also the Sabbath School and Bible Class would meet. On Tuesday (to-morrow) evening the last prayer meeting will take place in the lecture-room of the present building.

The One Hundred Psalm, second part, was then sung, and Mr. THOMPSON commenced his last discourse, in the building in which he has preached for so many years. He read three texts—the first from Genesis, chap. xii., vs. 7 and 8. "And the Lord appeared to Abram, and said, unto thy seed will I give this land: and there builded he an altar unto the Lord, who appeared unto him. And he removed from thence unto a mountain on the east of Bethel, and pitched his tent, having Bethel on the west, and Hai on the east, and there he builded an altar unto the Lord, and called upon the name of the Lord." The second text was from Psalm 68, v. 10. "Thy congregation had dwelt therein: thou, O God, hast prepared of thy goodness for the poor." The third text Mr. THOMPSON read from Isaiah, chap. xxxiii., vs. 20, 21. "Look upon Zion, the city of our solemnities: thine eyes shall see Jerusalem a quiet habitation, a tabernacle that shall not be taken down; not one of the stakes thereof shall ever be removed, neither shall any of the cords thereof be broken. But there the glorious Lord will be unto us a place of broad rivers and streams, wherein shall go no galley with oars, neither shall gallant ship pass thereby."

We cannot follow Mr. THOMPSON throughout his eloquent discourse. He referred to the occasion which had called the large audience together, and dwelt with much feeling on the past history of the Tabernacle. From the year 1830 to 1835, he said, was a period much celebrated for revivals of religion in this City. In May, 1830, five gentlemen assembled together to consider the best means of promoting religious instruction among a large class of people who appeared to be indifferent to it. Foremost among these gentlemen were Rev. Dr. BLISS and Mr. LEWIS TAPPAN. The problem then was what it is now, how to keep out of the churches that spirit of exclusiveness which considerations of mere wealth foster among us, and to bring the Gospel to the Poor. The solution of the problem, it was decided, was the establishment of Free Churches. A young minister (Rev. JOEL PARKER) was brought here from Rochester, and commenced to preach to a congregation of 40 persons in a small room in Dey-street. Afterwards, in Washington-street, a building was hired; next the Dey-street Church was organized, and the Chatham-street Theatre was purchased, and turned from the house of Belial to a house of God, and the first prayer made in that building, so transformed, was made by a gentleman who had been an actor on those boards. In 1833 Rev. Mr. FINNEY began his labors in this City. From that time to 1834, four free churches were opened, and in 1835 a mechanic, working as a silversmith, united with others to build the Tabernacle at a cost of $60,000. It was completed in April, 1836. It was built to hold 2,500 persons, and would hold, when crowded, about 4,000. Mr. FINNEY was the first pastor. Afterwards came Dr. DUFFIELD, and subsequently Dr. JOEL PARKER. In the meantime a debt of $50,000 hung over the building, with a ground rent of $1,000 a year. "The two principal donors," observed Mr. THOMPSON, "had left it, and thus, though there was a bank of faith there, there was nobody to sign the checks, and when holiness declines, ground rents are a fearful drag." On July 6, 1840, the Tabernacle was sold at auction under foreclosure of mortgage, and was purchased by the late DAVID HALL for $35 000, little more than half its original cost. (It was purchased the other day for $17c.000. Mr. THOMPSON was himself installed as Pastor in April, 1845, and has remained in that office ever since. When it was organized as a Congregational Church, in 1840, it had but 67 members. Since that time 893 have been added to it, making 960 altogether, while [illegible] was sung by the whole congregation standing. Rev. Dr. LEAVITT delivered a final prayer, and Mr. FIELD dismissed the immense audience with the [illegible] numbers have been removed through [illegible] diction. Hundreds, however, could [illegible] within those walls for many years, [illegible] furtively wiping tearful eyes. The original [illegible] of the building, Mr. JOSIAH DYKE, was present [illegible] night. The organ, we learn, has been [illegible] at Poughkeepsie. So falls the Tabernacle.

Dreadful Steam-Boiler Explosion.

TOTAL DESTRUCTION OF THE PROPELLER FANNY GARNER—FIVE PERSONS KILLED AND SEVERAL SERIOUSLY INJURED.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Saturday, April 25.

The steam propeller Fanny Garner, Captain BIRD, belonging to JACOB SEUBERT, of Broad Creek, exploded her boiler this morning about 7½ o'clock, on the Delaware and Raritan Canal, near Weston, and about five miles from this place, killing the Captain and four of her crew, and seriously injuring three others, and totally destroying the propeller, she being actually blown into splinters above the water.

The boiler was carried forward some two hundred yards over a hill fifty feet high, through an orchard, and was nearly buried in the ground. Fragments of timber, iron, coal, barrels of eggs, and every description of produce were scattered from two to five hundred yards around. A part of her connecting pipe and a stick of wood was found in the woods over five hundred yards off. A dwelling house on the canal, and within fifteen yards of the explosion, escaped with only broken windows, from the fact that the force of the explosion carried everything over it. The report was distinctly heard at this place.

The boiler was new and had been in use only four weeks. Some of the bodies were horribly mangled—one was found in the bottom of the canal, and the head in a meadow opposite. Another had his head entirely blown off. The loss of boat and cargo is estimated at about $150,000.

The following were killed instantly—CORNELL BIRD, Captain; JAMES MCMAHON, MICHAEL MURPHY, PATRICK COMPORT and JOHN TROMBHILL, deck hands.

The injured are A. M. PLACE, a passenger from near Princeton, on a visit to his son-in-law in Round Brook; JAMES F. BARRETT, engineer, and W. M. MCELVERY, fireman—all seriously.

The Pilot, GEORGE E MITCHELL, was thrown out of his pilot-house window, and ANDREW J. MCGARRY, steward, out of his berth on the forward deck. Three were the only persons on board that escaped without serious injury.

He says the Administration has recognized the authority of the Territorial Legislature and the validity of the Territorial laws, and has especially recognized the act providing for a Constitutional Convention. He presumes that that Convention will submit the vital question of the domestic institutions of the State for the subsequent vote of the people, and thinks that Congress will then admit the Territory immediately into the Union as a State. He recommends a general amnesty for past prosecutions, and expects the presence of Gov. WALKER about the middle of May.

INDIAN OUTRAGES IN THE NORTHWEST.

Official Account of the Late Massacre by the Indians in Northern Iowa—Sixty Killed, Wounded and Missing.

FORT DODGE, Ia., Sunday, April 12, 1857.

To His Excellency James W. Grimes, Governor of the State of Iowa:

SIR: Being called upon by the frontier settlers for aid in checking the horrible outrages committed upon the citizens living on the Little Sioux River, in Clay County, in the Spirit Lake settlements, and in Emmet County, by the Sioux Indians, by authority you visited me, I raised and organized and armed three companies of 80 men each, which were as we proceeded increased to over 87 men each. We took up our line of march on the 26th of March, and proceeded up the west branch of the Des Moines River to intercept the savages, whom, report said, were about to sweep all the settlements on that river. By forced marches through snow banks from fifteen to twenty feet deep, and swollen streams, we forced our way up to the State line, where we learned the Indians were embodied 300 or 400 strong at Spirit Lake and Big Island groves. Never was harder service rendered by any body of men than by those 110 men under my command. We had to ford streams breast deep every few miles, and at all snow banks or drifts had to shovel roads and draw our wagons through by hand with rope ropes, also the oxen and horses. All were wet all day up to the middle at least, and lay out on the open prairies at night without tents or other covering than a blanket or Buffalo robe.

About 80 miles up we met those who had escaped the massacre at Springfield, composed of three men unhurt, two wounded, and one female wounded and several women and children, in all numbering some 15 or 20 persons. They had escaped in the night, carrying nothing with them but what they had on when they were attacked—had nothing to eat for two days and one night. They were about exhausted and the Indians on their trail pursuing them. Had not our scouts discovered them and reported, there can be no doubt but that they all would have been murdered that night. We found them in a miserable condition, destitute of every thing like clothing and food, three of them badly wounded and several of the women without bonnets or shoes. They had nothing on them but what they had the night they fled. The poor women wading breast deep through snow and water and carrying their crying children.

We halted at a small lake that furnished sufficient timber to make fires and warm them—furnished them with provisions and gave them blankets to shield them from the severe weather, and gave them all the relief in our power. Our surgeon dressed the wounds of the wounded, whose wounds were in a bad condition. We encamped there with them that night, posing sentinels and pickets, expecting to be attacked. Next morning we sent them on with our scout to what is known as the Irish settlement, to remain until we returned, the settlers above that point having abandoned their homes and embodied themselves at that place, where they were engaged in building a block house. We proceeded on our march, throwing out in advance some thirty scouts, reconnoitering and examining every point where the enemy might possibly be found—every point of timber, lake and stream was closely examined, and found very fresh traces of the Indians throughout the day. From these tracks and trails they had all taken their course for Spirit Lake, or in that direction. By forced marches we reached the State line, near Springfield, and encamped about sundown on the margin of a grove; detailed sixty men, armed with rifles and six shooters, with orders to cook their suppers and supply themselves with cold rations, each company their own; and be ready to march all night, in two divisions of thirty men each, and surprise the Indians before daylight next morning. Furnished them with guides, as the information we had just received was that the Indians were embodied at or near the trading-house of a half-breed by the name of Gardner.

We proceeded with great hopes of overtaking and giving a good account of them, but, to our great mortification, we found they had all fled upon the approach of 10 regulars from Fort Ridgeley. Woods & Dunn, traders, gave them the information that the pirates were coming, and whose movements they sent their runners to watch. Had they not sent to Ridgeley for troops we would most certainly have overtaken them.

The conduct of the troops from Fort Ridgeley is hard to be accounted for. On Thursday, the 27th of March, the Indians attacked Springfield and neighborhood. The citizens defended themselves as well as they could. The battle and pillaging lasted until night-fall, when the Indians withdrew. On Friday, in the afternoon, the troops from Ridgeley arrived, all well mounted on mules. Those troops lay at Springfield all day Saturday, and assisted in burying some of the dead. Their officers counseled with the half-breed, Gardner, who was the only one unharmed, and known to be acting with, and identified with the Indians, and woman squaw (he is married to a squaw) was, at that time, wearing the shawl of Mrs. Chilson, with other articles taken from the citizens. Said citizens lay over from Friday evening till Sunday morning, without pursuing or making any effort to overtake the Indians, who, they must have known, had taken on four white women as prisoners.

On Sunday morning he set out on their trail, and followed them half the day, finding their camp fires—a trembling three or four straggling squaws, let them go—and finding all kinds of goods thrown and strewn along their trail to lighten their load and expedite their flight. When he could not have been over half a day's march of them, he stopped and returned the same evening (Sunday) to Springfield. When he ordered the men to return, they expressed a wish to follow on, and said they would put up with half rations if he would allow it. His reply was that he had no orders to follow them.

On Monday he set out to Spirit Lake to bury the dead, &c. He went to the first house, that of Mr. Naples, found the dead body, buried it, and returned to Springfield. 'Tis certain such troops, or rather such officers, will afford no protection to our frontier settlers. Such men are not fit to protect our frontiers. Think of his conduct! his men all well mounted, turning back when he was not half a day's march off them; they loaded down with plunder, and horses and mules, and carrying off with them four respectable women as prisoners. The Indians were known to have some 25 or 30 head of horses and 8 or 10 mules, taken from the settlers. These Indians commenced low down on Little Sioux River, near the southwest corner of Buena Vista County, and proceed to break up and destroy all the settlements in that County, Clay, Dickason and Emitt Counties; then bore off to the West Branch as far as they dare. Throughout their whole course they have completely demolished every settlement, killed all the cattle, ravished the women, and most scandalously abused them. They stood over the men with their guns cocked, while they were engaged in their hellish outrages. Along that river they approached, and got into the houses through professions of friendship, and with a rush seized the men and arms, taking the people by surprise, attacking in such a way that one family could not help the other; all attacked simultaneously, robbed them of everything, and left them helpless in the midst of cold weather and deep snows. They did not commence to kill the settlers until they reached Dickinson county. There at Spirit Lake it appears that the ruffians had prepared to defend themselves, as well as they could, and from appearances they fought bravely for their families. The settlers at Spirit Lake numbered over forty souls, not one of whom is left to tell the tale. Finding that the troops from Fort Ridgeley had not buried the dead, I detailed 25 men to proceed to Spirit Lake, and reconnoitre that district, and if no Indians were discovered, to inter the dead, as an act of humanity. Guides were procured, and they set out under the command of Captain Johnson and Lieutenant Maxwell, of company C. They could find no Indians, but found their encampment, and a dreadful destruction of property. They performed the sad duty of interring the dead so far as they could not any. They found and buried 29 bodies—found the skulls and bones of those who were burned in the ruins of a house, which, with the one buried by the troops from Ridgeley, made in all 33 dead found at Spirit Lake—9 killed at Springfield, and 13 missing at the Lakes, certainly killed, it is supposed they are lying off at a distance, killed in attempting to escape; some two or three were found who had been shot in attempting to escape, four of their women taken off as prisoners, and three badly wounded.

I may sum up as follows: In all, 41 killed; 13 missing, no doubt killed; 4 badly wounded, two I fear mortally; 4 women prisoners, besides several men from Boone River and counties east of this, who crossed the Des Moines River with a view of going to Dickinson County and the Lakes, have never yet been heard from—supposed to be killed on their way.

From all appearances the Sioux Indians have determined to wage a war of extermination on our frontiers, as everything goes to show it at every point on the upper Des Moines, Big Island Grove, Spirit Lake, and all points where we found traces of them. They had left the most threatening signs, stakes set up and painted red, trees barked and painted, representing men pierced with arrows, &c., &c. At every point they broke up and destroyed all furniture, burnt the houses, and killed the cattle—over 100 head of fine cattle were found shot down and untouched in any way but knocking off the horns—I suppose to make powder horns. Their whole course goes to show that they intended to break up and stop the settlement of that north and northwest country.

Too much praise cannot be bestowed on the man I have had under my command on this occasion. Officers and men, without exception, have done their duty. They endure the greatest privations and fatigue without a murmur. For seventeen days they pressed forward on their march, waded rivers and creeks breast deep, and tugging waggons through snow-banks, sleeping on the prairies frequently in their wet clothes—expecting every mile, after reaching thirty miles, to meet the Indians, as their threat was at Sioux River that they would sweep the Des Moines River settlements. Our men suffered very much owing to the severe change and snow-storm. We have fourteen men badly frozen, and two lost. Capt. Johnson, of Webster City, and Mr. Burkholder, of this place, both frozen to death in a snow-storm. They were separated in returning from the Lake. From the state of the men who succeeded in getting back to camp, both of these men must be dead. Every search has been made for them, but no discovery as yet. So severe was the weather that those who were picked up and got in, were so much frozen and exhausted that they were crawling on their hands and knees when found, and three or four of them had lost their minds, becoming perfectly deranged, and knew no one. As near as I could ascertain, the Indian force was from 150 to 200 warriors, judging from their encampments, &c.; the number of Indians must be 15 or 20 killed and wounded. From the number seen to fall killed, and, judging from the bloody clothes and clots of blood in their encamp-ments, the struggle at the Lakes must have been very severe, particularly the one at the house of Mr. Marble. Eleven dead bodies were found at this house, together with several broken guns. They appear to have fought hand to hand.

I have to inform your excellency that we have driven out of the north part of the State every Indian, and can say that at present there are no Sioux in the State, unless it be that part near the mouth of Big Sioux. The whole body have fled in the direction of the Missouri, crossing the Big Sioux. I shall not be surprised to hear of an attack on Sioux City. I am satisfied that the greater number of these Indians were from the Missouri, as they were strangers to the settlers where they appeared, and a portion of them were half breeds. Never in the history of our country have so outrageous acts been committed on our people. We have no account of Indians committing such outrages on females as they have done—no doubt committed by the half breeds. It is to be feared that they will repeat their depredations, if some measures are not taken to prevent it. They are well armed and well supplied with ammunition. They took 17 kegs of powder with buckshot and lead from Woods, at Springfield, burnt his store, and killed him, &c. We have a host of destitute and wounded persons thrown upon us to provide for both from Little Sioux River and the Upper Des Moines River as well as our own frozen and disabled men.

I forward this hasty and somewhat confused report; will give another soon, more in detail.

I instructed Capt. Richards, Mr. Morrison and others, to forward to you the affidavits, &c., to apprize you of our marching to relieve the frontiers, &c. Very respectfully yours, &c. W. WILLIAMS.

The Massacres in Minnesota.

Correspondence of the Dubuque Tribune.

MANKATO, Sunday, April 12, 1857.

MR. EDITOR: In our last we endeavored to inform the public, through your columns, of the state of affairs on the Des Moines, and particularly at Spirit Lake. The messengers which had been dispatched to Fort Ridgeley, together with the soldiers, left here on the morning of the 23d, and proceeded to Springfield, on the Des Moines, 15 miles from the scene of depredations. They reached Springfield on the morning of the fourth of April, the soldiers still in doubt as to the correctness of the report; but, upon entering the town, what was their surprise to find that the Indians had been there; that, on Tuesday, April 2, a band of Sioux had attacked the town, killed seven, wounded three, and carried four women into captivity. The Captain immediately dispatched a company to the Fort for reinforcements and provisions. Among the killed was Wm. Woon, George M. Woon, Mr. Church, and Josiah Stewart. The attack was without provocation, and unexpected by the settlers. Williams Woon was an old resident of Mankato, and a trader at Springfield. It appears that in the commencement, he went out to the bank of the river to talk to the Indians, and as he turned about to go home, he was shot dead, and immediately set on fire; his body, when found, being awfully burned. Several of the citizens were temporarily absent, but have since returned. Those that fortified themselves, escaped being murdered. Two Indians were killed; one was shot by Mrs. Church, who loaded guns for the men in one of the houses. The names of the women we do not know, with the exception of two—Mrs. Marvel and a Miss Gardener. Mr. Cheffins, the messenger, who was sent first to the Fort, has since returned from Springfield, and says he buried five men in one grave the day before he left. He reached Isaac Slocum's, on the Watonwan river, 20 miles from Mankato, on Thursday last, and reached this place on Friday evening. Mr. Slocum sent down to Mankato for assistance, (as he anticipated danger,) by Mr. Cheffins, who brought the sad intelligence of the massacre.

A large meeting was immediately held, and 38 volunteers, well equipped, were sent to their assistance. They reached Slocum's on Saturday night, and found Indians there. Dr. W. F. Lewis was chosen Captain, and with a few men went over the tents, where they found nine Indians, who immediately ran at the appearance of the whites, throwing their hatchets into the air, and firing at the whites. The whites immediately charged upon them, and killed four. None of the whites were injured, with the exception of one man, who received a slight wound in the hand. This, it appears, was a signal, and immediately on the return of the whites to the house, it was surrounded by 150 Indian warriors. A messenger who has just arrived, brings the above statement, which is correct. Word was sent to Traverse de Sioux and St. Peters for assistance, and this morning fifty of the citizens of St. Peters arrived, under Captain Dond's command, and will probably reach the scene of battle to-night, as they left Mankato at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Another reinforcement will be up from Traverse in the morning to join the party. The settlers from that neighborhood, and in fact all through the country, are alarmed, and are fleeing into town with their families. The account from the town of Springfield is later from Mr. Cheffins, who, as we stated before, accompanied the soldiers there, and is correct. The other is corroborated by different messengers, who are going to and from Slocum's and this place. I will give you further intelligence as soon as received.

LATER.

The Shacopee Herald of the 16th says: "Fifty-three Persons Reported Killed." We are indebted to Henry Hinds for the privilege of copying the following portion of a letter, dated Traverse de Sioux, Monday, April 13, 1857.

Great excitement in the towns along the river, from an expected attack of the Sioux Indians. The inhabitants were awakened early yesterday morning by a messenger from Mankato, who reported that all the inhabitants have been killed as far as Watonwan, on the west. The whole number reported killed was fifty-three, and four girls taken prisoners. A company was immediately formed here and at St. Peters, numbering about 200; a portion advancing immediately. Mr. McLeon and myself left on horse at 2 o'clock P. M. for Mankato, where we arrived at 5 o'clock. Another message has just reached us that a skirmish was had with a body of Sioux Indians, 20 miles above Mankato, and several of the Mankato band killed. The Indians were killing and burning everything before them. We left Mankato just before midnight, and reached home at 1 this morning. The bells were rung, and a meeting called immediately, and another company formed, which marches at 11. The women and children are fortified in several stone buildings in town. The forces are in all under the command of Capt. Dodn. Yours, truly,

J. HINDS.

THE VERY LATEST.

We learn from W. D. Paddock, a resident of Mankota, who arrived on the Equator, on the 16th, that on Saturday last the citizens of Mankota, learning of the outrages committed by the Indians on the Watonwan, mustered nearly fifty men, and started for that point. On Sunday morning they discovered new traces of the Indians near the residence of a Mr. Slocum. As they approached, the Indians shewing a disposition to fight, the Mankota men fired upon them, killing some, but the number is not known. The Indians retreated to a grove and hid behind the trees. Another conflict occurred, when five Indians were killed, no whites. The Indians then retired to a block house, and on one of them making his appearance, he was shot by a Mr. Johnson. Just as the boat was leaving St. Peters, a messenger arrived, bringing intelligence of a battle on the Watonwan, between the volunteers under the command of Gen. Dodn and the Indians, in which the latter lost 19, whites none. Intelligence was received from the same source, that Gideon Fletcher was fortifying his mill, fearing an attack from the Indians, who heretofore were always on friendly terms with the whites.

On learning that a party of Sioux had arrived at the other agency, he had sent out one hundred Winnebago warriors to arrest them, and in the event of their refusing to come, to shoot them down. Mr. Riddock informs us that there are 53 persons missing and four women taken prisoners. He had been informed by the Indians weeks ago that "when the grass should grow, and the green leaves were on the trees, they would sweep the whites from the Blue Earth settlement."

I learn from a passenger in the Alhambra, (from Faribault,) that General Shields, with a company of volunteers, left Fairhault on the 15th for the seat of war. There is great excitement along the river towns. G. P. MELLEN.

Body of a Young Woman Found in the Water—Mysterious.

The body of a young woman was found in the water at Pier No. 31, foot of Duane street yesterday morning. There were no external marks of violence upon it. It was nearly nude, nothing being on it but a chemise. A small rope with a noose upon it was about the neck. Deceased had long brown hair, and appeared to be about 18 years of age. Coroner Gamble being notified, caused the body to be removed to the Coroner's office in Chambers-street, where an inquest will be held upon it at 11 o'clock this morning.

Marine Affairs.

LOSS OF THE SCHOONER GOLDEN CLOUD.

The schooner Golden Cloud, Porter, of and from Rockland, Me., with a cargo of lime for New-York, went ashore on Monday morning, 20th inst., on Gardener's Island, during a heavy easterly blow and thick weather. The vessel took fire soon after, and with the exception of the rigging, sails, chains, &c., which were saved, she, together with her cargo, were entirely destroyed. The G. C. was a good vessel, three years old, built at Vinal Haven, and owned by Capt. Porter and other parties in Rockland. There was no insurance on either vessel or cargo.

WHALING.

The schooner William Riley., Cobb, and sloop E. F. Brown, Hamlin, of New-London, have captured another whale, which is at present at the steamboat basin at Quarantine. This is the third whale captured by these parties this season in these waters. The first one, of 70 barrels, was lost in the gale of the 19th; the second one, of 40 barrels, we noticed last week. This one is about the same size as the last one, and will yield about the same quantity of oil. It was taken about three miles east of the tail of Romer Shoal, in six fathoms water. It is a bull, and measures about 45 feet in length. It is intended, if possible, to place it in one of our box docks, for exhibition. At the time of taking this one, several others were in sight.

The Boston Young Men's Christian Union have given a public exhibition, consisting of declamations, essays, and dialogues. The performances were well received.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

FELONIOUS ASSAULTS.

George Cooper, a canal-boat captain, was arrested on Saturday, by Lieut. Dalton, of the First Ward Police, for committing a felonious assault upon Harbor Master Brennan. Mr. Brennan, it appears, had occasion in the discharge of his official duty, to go on board Cooper's boat, when Cooper, for some reason not explained, assailed him most violently,—first striking him on the wrist with a club, and then chasing him off the boat with a pistol in his hand. The prisoner was committed for trial in default of $1,000 bail.

A German named Charles Bloom was arrested the same day for attempting to take the life of a Mrs. Krall, at whom he discharged a pistol. He missed his aim—the bullet passing over, but very close to Mrs. Krall's shoulder. The occasion of the assault was some grocery-store trouble in the Third Ward. Bloom was committed to the Tombs.

ASSAULT UPON A WOMAN.

On Saturday night, Patrick Fletcher, a mason, residing in Oak-street, committed an assault upon a Mrs. Purcell, living in the street, and beat her badly, that for a time her life was despaired of. He was arrested the same night, and was yesterday morning held to answer.

ARREST OF A FUGITIVE CHARGED WITH INCENDIARISM.

On the 3d of January last, the ship Ocean was destroyed by fire at Waldeboro, Maine. She was worth $65,000, and was fully insured in different offices in this City. An examination showed that the ship was destroyed intentionally, and suspicion rested upon a man named Daniel T. Watson as the incendiary. When sought for Watson was not to be found. He had fled the neighborhood. Information was sent to the police authorities of this City, and on Saturday Watson was arrested in this City, on complaint of P. W. Andrews, by Officer Masterson, of the Chief's Office. It is said that he confessed his guilt, but did the act at the solicitation of the owner of the vessel, who wished to get the insurance. Watson is detained until the necessary documents for his removal can be procured.

POCKET PICKING

Has been most extensively indulged in of late. A merchant from the interior of Pennsylvania was robbed the other evening in the Park of a wallet containing bank-bills, checks and other paper to the extent of $2,600, and the same evening at the same place, a gentleman was robbed of a valuable gold watch. At a Circus exhibition in Harlem, on Saturday night, several spectators had their pockets picked of various sums amounting in the aggregate to about $1,000. The "knucks" got clear with their booty.

BROKE JAIL.

Two of the six thieves who some time since broke into a public store in Jersey City, and stole therefrom a large amount of silk goods, with which they were subsequently captured in a boat, in a Jersey inlet, by ex Captain Walling, of this City, escaped from Bergen Jail on Saturday, and are supposed to have returned to their old haunt—the Fourth Ward of this City. There is a reward of $100 for their capture.

LONG ISLAND.

Fire in Brooklyn.

Saturday afternoon a fire broke out in a stable adjoining the mahogany yard of N. & J. W. Durrua, in Columbia, near Atlantic-street, owned and occupied by them, which speedily spread to the yard, and destroyed mahogany and other valuable woods, amounting to $10,000. A quantity of lumber in the yard adjoining, owned by Joshua Shepherd, and valued at $4,500, was also destroyed. Several adjoining buildings were slightly damaged, but were saved through the efforts of the firemen, who were assisted by the Union Ferry Company, with one of Worthington's steam pumps. The fire is supposed to be the work of an incendiary.

Mr. Shepherd is insured in the Jefferson and one other New-York office for $6,000, and the Messrs. Durrua for $18,000, in different offices.

The Webster Fire Insurance Company Again.

Bench warrants were issued on Saturday from New-York for the arrest of Loring Pickering and Chas. N. Bean, indicted for fraud in obtaining of Mr. Robt. Christie a hardware store located in the Bowery, valued at $10,000, and paying for the same in the stock of the Webster Fire Insurance Company. A civil action has been commenced in Kings County against each of the Directors of the Webster Fire Insurance Company, against the Island City Bank, and against Mr. James O'Brien, President of that institution, by Mr. Christie, to recover ten thousand dollars, the face of the stock held by him and received on payment for his hardware store.

The Sheepshead Bay Outrage.

The trial of Richard Lewis, in the Kings County Court of Sessions, before Judge Morris and Justices Emmons and Schoonmaker, for participating in this outrage, was brought to a close yesterday morning at 10 o'clock, when the Jury were discharged, being unable to agree. Nine stood for acquittal. The case was submitted to the Jury Saturday, at 11¾ A. M.

Governor of Utah.—We understand that the Governorship of Utah Territory has been tendered to Major Benjamin McCulloch, of Texas, and that there is every reason to believe that he will accept the office. It would be difficult to name another person who combines in himself so many qualities for the successful discharge of the duties of this important and delicate trust as are undoubtedly possessed by Major McCulloch.—Union, of Saturday.

The Deputy Sheriff of White County, Tenn., Mr. Vance O. Lowrey, was murdered on the 30th ult., at or near Sparta, by two men, named John and Jackson Baker. A servant of Mr. Lowrey, who attempted to save his master, was also severely, and, it is feared, mortally stabbed.

MONDAY, April 27—A. M.

The Foreign mails by the America at Boston Saturday, are to the 11th April from Liverpool. They only report to Thursday P. M., from the London market, the intervening day being Good Friday, when the Exchange is closed. The Court of Bank Directors on Thursday made no further alteration in the terms of loan and discount. The Gazette statement of the condition of the Bank to the 4th April, which appeared on the 11th, but was of course known to the Directors in advance, fully justifies the stringent measures adopted the week before. It shows:

Specie.....	£9,803,790	Decrease.. £683,837

In the succeeding week there were no further considerable withdrawals from the reserve of Bullion, and as the arrivals of Gold from Australia and other quarters were equal to £300,000, and there are advices of £1,500,180 additional on the way, a great part of the amount fully due, there was less apprehension of any additional restriction at the Bank. The main trouble of dear money, so far as American interests are concerned, would seem to fall upon the Cotton trade at Manchester where a large portion of the business in manufactures for export is done on long bills, the discount on which at high interest, is soon felt on the profit of the trade. The consequence is, the mills are worked close, and no extra stock of the raw material suffered to accumulate. One of our circular reports:

In Manchester a very fair demand has been experienced for Goods, and prices (with some few exceptions) have been well maintained. Yarns are in good request, and command improved rates, with a hardening tendency, and but for the sudden action of the Bank an increased business in both departments would have resulted. This movement has, however, caused many to withdraw from the market.

The same cause represses all appearances of speculation in Breadstuffs. In regard to the Funds, the London Times of Thursday, P. M., remarks:

The English Funds opened this morning with fewer signs of weakness, and the market throughout the day exhibited an improved tone, although a large speculative sale near the close of business caused a partial reaction from the advance at one time attained. Consols for money, which left off yesterday at 91¾, were first quoted 92⅜ to ½, whence, in consequence of purchases on the part of the public and the breaking up of the Bank Court without the announcement of any fresh restrictions, an improvement occurred to 92¾. Ultimately, however, there were sellers at 92½. For the May account the last price was 92½. The long continued speculation for a rise, which has lately interfered with every prospect of stability in the market, is now believed to have been brought within moderate limits, although the number of transactions carried over at high rates of interest to the next settlement has been sufficient to denote that there must still be many persons waiting to take advantage of any material improvement.

The repayments at the Bank to-day of advances made during the shutting were extraordinarily large, and, on the whole, they appear to have been effected without difficulty. Under the circumstances the regular applications for discount, were, of course, heavy, but it is assumed that the balance of receipts must have been such as greatly to strengthen the position of the establishment and to repair the adverse features which will, doubtless, be exhibited in the approaching Gazette return.

The quotations by this steamer for the American Funds dealt in on the other side, are not materially different from the previous advices. Mr. SATTERTHWAITE remarks:

There has been a moderate business doing in American Securities in London during the past week, with an increased demand for New-York Central Shares and Bonds, and for Michigan Central Shares. Illinois Central Shares have fluctuated, from sympathy with the decline quoted from New-York, and have been done at 30 and 29 premium.

The quotations at the close on the London Stock Exchange, were 90 ⅜ cent. asked for Illinois Central Bonds; sales of shares at 29¾ premium; sales of New-York Central Sixes at 82¼@⅝; sales of Michigan Southern Sinking Fund 71@72; New-York and Erie 3d mortgage, sales at 84@84½, and Sinking Fund at 83½. The Convertibles of 1871 held for 76 ⅜ cent., 74 ⅜ cent. bid. The London managers of the Great Western Road of Canada have declared a half-yearly dividend at the rate of 9 ⅜ cent. per annum, carrying over a surplus of only $18,304. This is the present English practice: the income divided up close among the Stockholders, and such further appropriations in the way of Capital or Bonds placed at the disposal of the Directors as, in general meeting of the proprietary, may be deemed expedient. In the present instance no provision appears to have been thought of for the damages likely to fall on the concern from the dreadful accident at the Des Jardines Canal. That followed very soon the close of the fiscal half year, but under the English practice, each half year must bear its own burdens. Hence on a net earning of £134,813 Canada currency, (equal to $4 to the pound,) £130,288 was divided to the stockholders, leaving less than one tenth of one ⅜ cent. surplus on the capital. This would be called reckless Railroading in the United States, yet the Great Western shares and the six ⅜ cent. Bonds of the Company are each worth 125 ⅜ cent. in London. The line of 283 miles involves $20,000,000 in stock and full $7,000,000 in debt. The gross earnings for six months were $1,575,920. The comparison with the New-York Central is:

	Miles.	Cost in Capital and Debt.	Half year's Revenue.
N. Y. Central.....	555	38,000,000	3,951,743

The Foreign Trade at the port of New-York, the past week, amounted, in the Import entries, including the Dry Goods table in our last paper, to $4,858,784, against $3,121,211 the week ending 26th April last year. The clearances of Domestic Produce and Miscellaneous Goods amounted to $1,249,688, against $1,052,959 the corresponding week last year. The Export of Specie for the week was $106,200, against $300,265 the corresponding week last year. In addition to this sum, $600,000 was sent by express to Boston for shipment to England by the Cunard steamer of Wednesday last, against $512,000 in the same direction the corresponding week last year. The steamer Fulton, from Havre, brought in $140,000 in Foreign Coin on Tuesday, and the Black Warrior, from Havana, $80,000 on Monday. The Sub-Treasury disbursed, over its receipts during the week, $475,783, of which $150,000 was sent to the Philadelphia Depository. The Specie movement of the week is not likely to influence materially the average reserve in the Banks, which stood on the last statement at $12,061,372. The change should apparently be rather against this sum, unless the interior exchanges have brought in more Specie than we have record of. As we have now reached the season of the year when the export demand for Specie usually becomes active, the following memoranda for the nine weeks of last year, intervening between this date and the 30th June, may not be uninteresting. And, although it is the opinion of our most intelligent Bullion and Foreign Bill Brokers that the demand will not be equal this season to last, our own view is and has been that the condition of the Banks and the Money market, and the prospects from the Sub-Treasury and California, equally and fully justify an export for the nine weeks beginning with the present week of $12,000,000, and we entertain little doubt that the market for Money and the reserve in the Banks will continue to rule easy under this accustomed Summer movement, which, though apparently heavy, will be almost sustained by the California and interior exchanges.

SPECIE MOVEMENT OF MAY AND JUNE, 1856.

Week ending	Export. New-York and Boston.	Bank Reserve.	Sub-Treasury.
May 3.....	$ 1,844,638	$12,830,227	$18,179,238

June 21.....	1,126,559	12,271,765	9,961,059
June 28.....	2,498,755	17,069,697	10,351,434
Total.....	$12,038,235 Av.	$15,039,806 Av.	$12,033,005
May 3....Specie in Bank and Sub-Treasury,			$36,029,635
June 28....Specie in Bank and Sub-Treasury,			27,421,131
Gain on reserve in city,			$ 1,391,596
Shipments of nine weeks as above,			12,038,235
Making income from California and Interior,			$13,430,431

The remarkable feature in the above is that the total of Specie in the City, as shown on the combined statement of the Sub-Treasury, gradually increased, rather than diminished, as this heavy export was going on. The case promises almost an exact parallel this season. We shall go into May with about the same Specie as last season. The proportion of Specie held in the Government Office will be a little larger, but the reaction of the Sub-Treasury and the Banks will be reversed through May and June this year, by the extraordinary cause of the New Tariff, as it was last year by the extraordinary payments on the Texas Indemnity.

According to the Custom-House returns, by months, the entries of foreign goods at the port of New-York, (exclusive of Bullion,) for the nine months of the fiscal or treasury year, from the 1st of July, 1856, to 31st March, 1857, inclusive, Amounted to.....$166,877,000

The Money Market through the past week worked remarkably smooth, and the demand from the Brokers was scarcely equal to the offerings on temporary loan. The applications at Bank for Discounts were not excessive, and the rates on strictly prime paper indorsed, outside of Bank, were 8½@9 ⅜ cent. Single-name paper is scanned with a good deal of particularity, and the terms made with money-lenders take a wide range from 10 to 15 ⅜ cent. Foreign Exchange is firm at 109¼@109⅝ on London, against 109¼@⅝ this time last year. The Specie engagements for the Arabia on Wednesday are about $600,000 in gold bars, and will probably exceed a million if the California steamer of 5th April should arrive in season. The Sub-Treasury holds $14,563,605, against $15,039,338 at the close of the previous week.

The Stock Exchange closed on Saturday from 2 to 3 ⅜ cent. lower than on the previous Saturday on several of the most active Railroad Shares. The market throughout the week was feverish and much unsettled, and the fluctuations on the Shares alluded to were in some instances 5 or 6 ⅜ cent. from one extreme to the other. The following will afford some idea of the general character of the dealings, beginning with the terms quoted at the close of week before last:

Toledo.....	65@65½	65½@64	66@66¼
Erie.....	45¾@43	43@43¾	42¾@42¾

New-York Central.....	86¾@87	86¾@87	87@87¼
Illinois Central.....	130@131	129¾@131¼	130¼@131¾
Panama.....	92	93@93	91¾@92

	Saturday week.	Last Saturday.
Chicago and Rock Island.....	96	96¾
Michigan Central.....	94½	95
Galena.....	102¾	101½
Virginia Sixes.....	92	91¾

Illinois Central Bonds.....	99¾	99¼
Erie of 1871.....	77¾	77
Delaware and Hudson.....	121	121½

There was a good deal of animation at the Second Board on Saturday, with a slowly upward tendency, but after the orders were pretty much executed, lower terms were offered, particularly on sellers' options on most of the list. The Michigan Southern and Toledo shares both improved after the reopening of the transfers. The former was bought with more confidence after the result of the yearly election was announced, and the balance sheet of the Company to the close of last year was made public through the American Railroad Journal. We publish this statement in another place, with the very judicious and dispassionate comments of the Journal edition, which go far to confirm our own impression that this important property has been unfairly, if not wickedly, dealt by in Wall-street, for the last three months. The success, however, with which it has been borne down from 90 to 60 ⅜ cent., would have been less marked, no doubt, if the present statement had been given to the public at an earlier day. The fault has been partly with those Directors who had the report in charge. Some blame also rests with the financial management, who, with a credit impaired by the libelous attacks upon it, found themselves in the hands of the Philistines, and unfortunately rested part of their moneyed arrangements with certain parties known throughout the Street as their worst and most inveterate enemies. All this has been corrected, and the new direction, no doubt, will soon put the finances of the Road on a more reliable basis. The primary misfortune appears to have been the absence in Europe for nearly two years of the old Treasurer of the Company, Mr. EDWIN LITCHFIELD, under whose administration in former years, the concern was kept free of emolument and the stock maintained at the highest credit, relatively with other leading roads. He properly understood and appreciated that part of his financial, as well as practical duty, which looks to the market credit of his stock as the surest means of sustaining the credit of his Company with money lenders and bona fide investors, who after all will look more or less to the list of the Stock Exchange sales—however perverted to the unscrupulous ends of the Bear interest for a year past—as the starting point from which to form their judgment of values. But Mr. L. has recently returned home and consented to continue in the new direction; embracing as it does a larger number of City men, always on the spot to render advice and assistance, than formerly.

The Toledo books of transfer reopened on Saturday, and the Erie books will reopen to-day. During the closing both stocks were sold freely and heavily for delivery ahead, without reference to actual supply or the condition of the money market. The consequence in the former case was, that when the Stock came to be delivered, the supply at the command of the Street was found so restricted as to cause an advance, before 3 o'clock, of 2 ⅜ cent. from the morning sales, and even after the transfers of the day were completed, the highest price was bid for Monday. The result appears to be that, from 21,000 shares in January, the moveable Stock of the Company in Wall-street has been cut down to about 10,000 shares of the 67,000 shares constituting the Capital, and there is a growing and commendable disposition manifested in other cases to reduce the scale upon which enormous short contracts are put out on the calculation that a few thousand shares, borrowed from day to day, can be made to deliver the whole capital once a week, or once a fortnight. Not only are the permanent Stockholders outside the Street learning to withhold the use of their certificates for such damaging object, but speculators for the rise and their commission brokers are gathering wisdom from the experience of the past six or twelve months. Even the Board of Brokers, as a body, have moved to confine speculative contracts within sixty days, and it is not impossible the limit may be cut down to thirty days, with a general resort to a 10 ⅜ cent. deposit on each side to make the contracts secure, whether against a rise or a fall. We do not doubt that such a reform would bring more good customers to the commission brokers than under the existing loose system, and the encouragement it holds out to that sort of hold Stock gambling which not only shocks confidence, but drives off legitimate business.

In regard to the Scrip dividend of 10 ⅜ cent. of the New-York and Erie Company, to be distributed this week, we understand that in addition to regular certificates for full shares, a printed scrip for fractional sums under $100 will be issued. Both will no doubt be generally held up by the bona fide holders of the old stock until a recovery in the market value from the present depression is experienced. And in regard to the dividend on contract stock falling due to-day and within the next few days, the privilege of demanding 10 ⅜ cent. additional stock, instead of settling the dividend at a price to be fixed at the Board of Brokers, will probably be availed of. There would seem to be nothing but fairness in this, as the market price of the dividend has been knocked down through no agency of the parties who bought stock before the closing of the books.

CHICAGO, ST. PAUL AND FOND DU LAC RAILROAD COMPANY, No. 12 Wall street,
NEW-YORK, Saturday, April 25, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

The announcement of the Chicago Tribune of the 21st inst., copied into the Commercial Advertiser of this evening, of heavy loss by this Company, by failure of DODGE, BACON & Co. of London, is entirely without foundation.

The temporary suspension of that house was followed by immediate resumption, as announced with favorable comments in the London Times and the papers of this City a few days since. They held only 122 of this Company's Bonds when they suspended.

WM. B. OGDEN, President.

Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana Railroad.

From the American Railroad Journal, April 25.

The meeting of the stockholders of this road was held at Adrian on the 22d instant. We have obtained from the report of the Company submitted at that time a copy of their general account, which will be found annexed thereto. This statement, with the report of the Company, has been looked forward to with unusual interest, for the reason that nearly two years have elapsed since a full statement of the affairs of the Company has been given, and from the extremely depreciated price of the Company's shares, implying a very considerable distrust of their value, on the part of the stockholders of this once favorite security. It was natural that there should be great anxiety to learn the actual condition of the company, and for any evidence which should tend to show the correctness of previous estimates of the value of this property.

While we would be very careful not to bolster up, or attempt to give undue credit to a Company, or to shield a board of directors from the just consequences of any improper acts, it is equally a duty not to allow a causeless panic to discredit or embarrass them. Any discredit or inconvenience thrown upon one company reaches to all others. The confidence withdrawn from the Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana Railroad Company, will, to very nearly the same extent, be withdrawn from the whole railway interest. This cannot take place, even in a slight degree, without great loss and injury to every citizen in the community, from the person who depends entirely upon the income from his property for support, to him who labors for his daily bread—and to all our monied institutions whose business and solvency depends in a great degree upon that of our railroads. It is for the interest of all classes, therefore, to see things just as they are, and to be removed as far as possible from sympathy with parties whose whole efforts are taken up in attempting to give to a particular stock a reputation, good or bad, to which it is not entitled.

With regard to the Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana Railroad, it is certain that the public have never been mistaken as to the value of the route of its main line. Chicago is the local point for the travel of a belt of country extending south from Lake Superior to Central Illinois, with a breadth of 600 or 700 miles, containing many hundred thousand square miles, having a population of 3,000,000, and which is increasing at the rate of 400,000 annually. The greater part of the travel of this extensive territory must be conducted East and West by the two Michigan roads. The distance is no greater over the Michigan Southern from Detroit to Chicago, than over the Michigan Central—placing the former in favorable relations with the Great Western of Canada and the line of which it is a part. But a large portion of the travel between the East and the West will take the south shore of Lake Erie, for the reason that it is studded with important commercial towns, which every man, traveling for business or pleasure, must take on his route, while there are none on the north shore. In fact, we know of no more favorable route nor one the value of which must more steadily increase with the great general progress of the country.

The cost of the road has not been excessive. Nearly 528 miles are completed at a cost not exceeding $17,000,000; or $32,000 per mile. The cost of the New-York Central, for 555 miles, is over $38,000,000; that of the Illinois Central nearly $26,000,000 for 704 miles. The cost of the Michigan Southern does not equal that of most other Western roads at corresponding periods. As upon all roads, something has unquestionably been wasted in the construction of this; but probably not so much as upon the average of roads, nor a sum sufficient to provoke remark from parties hostile to it. The cost per mile shows a reasonable degree of fidelity on the part of the Directors.

Nor is it probable that any considerable proportion of this road will be unproductive. It is made up of the following lines:

Toledo and Chicago.....	242 miles.
Goshen Branch.....	132 miles.
Detroit and Toledo.....	58 miles.
Monroe and Adrian.....	37 miles.
Jackson Branch.....	41 miles.
Canstantine Branch.....	4 miles.
Michigan City Branch.....	14 miles.
Total.....	528 miles.

The three last named roads will probably be a burden to the Company, but their cost has not been large. The Company was required by its charter to build the Jackson Branch. The Goshen Branch will, we think, pay its way, though it would have been better for the Company not to have undertaken it; but was thought by all to be a wise move at the time, and was one for which the Directors are free of censure. The completion of this road will shorten the distance between Toledo and Chicago some 20 miles, by a line which can be run over in two hours less time than the old one. The two will not interfere for local traffic, which, after all must be the main support for both lines.

It was also unwise to commence the construction of the Detroit and Toledo Road without a more ample provision of money. The road was most unquestionably needed, and will, we have no doubt, prove productive in itself, while it must add largely to the business of the main line and the Goshen Branch. Detroit is now a city of some 60,000 inhabitants, and moving ahead with equal pace with the most prosperous Western cities. It is the most desirable market for Southern Michigan, and for large districts of Ohio and Indiana. Neither branch of the Michigan Southern could well afford to be without a connection with Detroit for the accommodation of their local traffic. The Detroit and Toledo Road will also connect Detroit with the Wabash Valley, the Dayton and Michigan, and the Cleveland and Toledo Roads, all first class works. There can be no reason why the stockholders of the Michigan Southern should complain, except so far as the construction of this line has tended to embarrass the Company.

We see no cause of distrust in the prospective earnings of this Company. For the past year, they amounted to $2,714,849 on 297 miles of road, equal to a per centage of gross receipts of nearly 25 per cent. on a cost not exceeding $11,000,000. We believe the Detroit Branch will be equally productive on a probable cost of $1,800,000. This would add $450,000 to the receipts of the past year. Allowing the balance of the Road to add as much more, and we have $2,600,000 as the gross receipts of the whole, or equal to 21 per cent. With good management, one half this sum will cover expenses of all kinds, leaving over ten per cent. for net earnings. We have no doubt that 1858 will produce an equally favorable result.

There seems, therefore, to be no doubt that the stockholders have a property as valuable as they ever supposed it was. How then is the excessive depreciation of its stock to be accounted for? Unquestionably to the large floating debt it is carrying and to a culpable silence of the Directors, for nearly two years, as to the condition of the Company. These two great mistakes led to the selection of this stock

The Tehuantepec Question—Proper Course to be Pursued—The Garay and Sloo Grants, &c.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Saturday, April 25, 1857.

The views which you have taken of the interesting and complicated Tehuantepec question are correct. This Government must acquire from Mexico a clear, explicit, and untrammeled right of way across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, and, of course, the right of the navigation of the Coatzocoalcos. This right must be conceded directly and unequivocally to the United States Government, and not indirectly through any private company or contested grant, either to American citizens or foreign subjects.

But it is objected that, by this course, the Government will trample upon private rights. The plain answer is, that the Government may acquire the right which is thus sought, subject to any equitable claims which private citizens may have in regard to it. Mexico, in any treaty which may be made with the United States, may herself stipulate for the payment of their claims to a certain and liberal amount. Mexico, on the other hand, may insist, as she has heretofore done, that if these parties are or should be aggrieved by her action, they must seek their remedy through her judicial tribunal, and that these awards shall be the measure of the sum to be paid to the claimants.

These may be the views of some of the members of the present and late Administrations on the subject.

But two other modes of proceeding have been pressed. The Garay Company show their original grant, which Mr. WEBSTER mentioned as valid still against Mexico, and also produce a Mexican decree transferring to Mr. FALCONNET the entire interest of the grant made to the Sloo or mixed Company, and the assignment of the same to Mr. HARGOUS.

The United States Government is urged by the Hargous Company to say to Mexico "you must permit Mr. HARGOUS and his co-grantees, under the Garay grant, to proceed with the execution of the Tehuantepec Railroad &c., under the terms of that grant.

If this be not done, the United States Government may, by negotiation with Mexico, obtain a direct grant, or may purchase the franchise of the Hargous grant, with the assent of Mexico. In either case, the Hargous Company claim an indemnity to the present amount of five millions.

The proposition of the Sloo or mixed Company to the Government, is to give them a liberal contract for conveyance of the United States mail across the Tehuantepec Isthmus, and thus render operative the fifth article of the Gadsden Treaty, which gives the United States the right to protect the interests of American citizens and of the Government upon the transit.

As the terms of the Sloo grant expressly stipulate that it shall not be transferred to any foreign Government, it will be necessary for this Government, if it should wait to purchase the Sloo grant, to obtain the assent of the Government of Mexico as well as of the Company.

If the Government purchase the privileges of either party, they will take that grant which is the most liberal, and the most traveled—that is—the Garay grant, and perhaps require that Company to buy off every right which may be left to the Sloo Company.

The Garay grant embraces a cession of sixty miles of territory on either side of the railroad, and the right to colonize the same. It was this colonization clause which rendered this grant so odious to the Mexican Government, though it might render the grant the more valuable to the United States.

The Administration has, as yet, come to but one conclusion on the subject—to wit, that they must acquire the right of way across Tehuantepec for the United States. Whether to do it through the instrumentality of these two companies, or by direct concession from Mexico, is the question.

The late Administration leaned in favor of the Hargous plan.

The Sloo Company deny the validity of the mortgage and assignment of the same to HARGOUS, and insist that these parties must look to the judicial tribunals of Mexico for relief. They ask for the support of their Government through a mail contract.

But the personal difficulties existing between the members of the Sloo Company will certainly prevent them from proceeding with their work, though the Mexican Government is desirous that they should do so. No one, under present circumstances, would invest in the stock, and if the railroad be not begun before next February, they forfeit the grant entirely. X. Y. Z.

FROM AN OCCASIONAL CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, Monday, April 27, 1857.

Ex-Secretary of State, Mr. MARCY, takes a great interest in the measures which are in progress of arrangement by the Administration, to establish the most felicitous means of communication between the Eastern portion of the Union and its Pacific Coast. In view of the probable annexation, before any great lapse of time, of Sonora and Lower California, this is becoming every day more important, especially as the relations which Great Britain has established with the Central American States, may be turned, at any moment, to our disadvantage. The opinion of Mr MARCY is said to be, that the utmost sagacity, moderation and activity will be requisite, to make such an arrangement that the Tehuantepec right of way may be secured, on terms that it will be suitable for us to accept, and which will require no subsequent modifications; but he none the less judges that it ought to be done and speedily. It appears, therefore, that the course which Mr. CASS is understood to have resolved on is likely to meet with approval from every quarter, and to be regarded as the inauguration of a national measure of the highest importance.

The speech of Mr. STANTON, on his arrival in Kansas, is variously interpreted here. Ultra men of both sides take ground that it is the first avowal of a Pro-Slavery Platform, by the Walker Administration, and that it foreboded the encouragement by the new Governor, of the adoption of Slavery as a State institution. Others, more moderate, have come to an entirely opposite conclusion, and maintain that as the "shadows before" are of an exclusively Free-State complexion, no pains have been thought necessary to conciliate the Anti-Slavery Party, while the utmost verge of courtesy is approached in dealing with adversaries, who are so soon to be finally and forever worsted. The emphatic declarations of Gov. WALKER, before leaving the Capital, are quoted, iterated and reiterated that Kansas, in his opinion, was decidedly destined to become a Free and not a Slave State; that, while he should make it a "point of honor" to see that the will of the majority of the people was carried into effect, he had no doubt that the popular voice would exclude bondage from the Territory. Whichever opinion may be correct, Gov. WALKER ought not, in any case to be held responsible for any other acts and deeds than his own. The Herald stated, some time ago, that Mr. WALKER had sent out a message by the hands of Mr. STANTON, declaratory of his future policy. This was apocryphal. Excepting the short letter, which was published a month since, Mr. WALKER has given nothing to the public since his appointment.

The statement in some of your papers that the recent opposition to Mayor WOOD is interpreted here as identical with hostility to Mr. SCHELL is untrue. Mr CROSWELL is in Washington, and has sought to promulgate the same opinion, but he has not been successful. It is, on the contrary, well understood that not only Mr. FOWLER, but also the new Surveyor, Mr. HART, and Messrs. SANDERS, SICKLES, HASKIN, COCHRANE, &c., &c., who have sought to restore Democratic unity at Tammany Hall, and a reform in the organization of the party, are desirous of corresponding, in detail, with all of the wishes of Mr. SCHELL, as far as is consistent with the duties of their respective positions. The peculiar relation which was manufactured for Mr. SCHELL, while he was in Washington, by a few busy-bodies, and the position it placed him in towards your Mayor, rendered it obligatory upon him to suffer his name to be used, up to a certain point, in favor of City Hall influence. That period has forever gone by. The questions of the Sachemship and of the General Committee are settled, and Mr. SCHELL is believed to have no other wish than to acquiesce in the will of the majority, and to act, as he has always done, for the general good of the party. The effort which is being made to represent him as a tool of Mr. WOOD, and as dissociated from his colleagues, is equally slanderous to himself and to them. Letters have been received here which show that the failure of the conspiracy to perpetuate the "one man" tyranny at Tammany Hall is a subject of perhaps more hearty congratulation to Mr. SCHELL himself than to any other person interested. It is certain that all those who have been portrayed as his enemies in your City are precisely those upon whose alliance and aid he now counts for support during the trials of the coming four years.

The Printing Contract—Know-Nothing Troubles.

ALBANY, Friday, April 24, 1858.

Certain legal proceedings growing out of the failure of THOMAS & LATHROP, of Buffalo, have disclosed the fact that one-half of the contract for executing the Legislative printing for two years from the first of January last, is owned by J. C. DANN, the President of the State Council of Know-Nothings, and DENNIS BOWEN, a conspicuous member of the Order. DANN is cashier of one of the Buffalo banks, and BOWEN is a lawyer of fair standing, having received his legal education in the office of that noted firm FILLMORE, HALL & HAVEN. The revelation of their connection with the contract has excited considerable speculation in political circles here. There are two versions of the circumstances under which they became interested in the enterprise. I cannot at present ascertain the truth of the case. One story is, that they were large creditors of the bankrupt firm, who, you will recollect, were the proprietors of the Commercial Advertiser, Mr. FILLMORE'S home organ, and when the affairs of the concern approached a crisis, THOMAS & LATHROP, they being the nominal contractors, assigned to DANN & BOWEN their remaining half of the contract; the other half having been previously disposed of, in order to secure D. & B. from loss. Possibly this may have been the case; but the proprietary interest in this half is now vested absolutely in them.

The other story is, that DANN and BOWEN were originally parties to the contract, made so at their own request, through the influence of the Know-Nothing State Officers, with a view to reimburse the money which those patriotic "Americans" had expended in the scheme to elect MILLARD FILLMORE President of the United States. This is the more probable representation of the facts. The contract was a purely Know-Nothing affair at the ontset. THOMAS & LATHROP, who had already become swamped, chiefly by identifying themselves with the project to elect FILLMORE, made an ambiguous, juggling sort of bid, for the printing, which the State officers accepted, after two or three competitors had been bought off or ruled out. The scheme was well conceived. The Statesman people were interested in it, to the extent of one-fourth, and it comprehended a plan for bringing one of the State officers into the editorial department of that paper, at a high salary. Everything was going on swimmingly—all concerned in it were prospectively growing rich—the State was to be fleeced, as usual, and Know-Nothingism was blatant with joy; when it occurred to one of the persons interested that the profits of the contract might not come up to their expectations, if a Republican Legislature should see fit to cut the printing down to a low, economical point—a proceeding not at all improbable, with some of the most odious Know-Nothings in the State doing the printing under a bargain tainted with foul suspicion. So they sold out one-half the contract to an estimable gentleman of this city, who came near being seriously damaged by being found in bad company. How the Statesman concern were satisfied, I am unable to say; but the prevalent opinion is, that they were bought off BOWEN & DANN.

If THOMAS & LATHROP could have been kept upon their legs a year longer, the interest of DANN & BOWEN in the contract would not have been known, and the statement made in the Legislature that a Democrat of this city held the whole of it by assignment from the Buffalo firm, might have been accepted as true. But this disclosure puts a new face upon the whole transaction. While it uncovers a deep-laid Know-Nothing intrigue—for DANN'S election as President of the State Council, which is now moving to perpetuate and extend this organization, was included in the scheme—it will necessitate a scrutiny into the affair by the Legislature next Winter; and those who are familiar with the manner in which some of the business of the State has been performed, will not need to be told that this scrutiny must be so extended as to embrace the selection of the depositories for the Canal tolls, the appointment of Canal Officers, the allowance of contractors accounts, and various incidental matters, in which outsiders have boasted of making large sums of money, that could not have been honestly earned.

The present State Officers will then be in private life, it is true; but it was decided in the case of J. C. MATHER that a public officer was liable to impeachment after his term of service had expired.

Appointment of Major Ben McCulloch as Governor of Utah—A Northern Man to be Governor of Nebraska.

Correspondence of the Baltimore Sun.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, April 26.

The delay in the appointment of a Governor for the Territory of Utah has been occasioned by the difficulty of finding a suitable man who would accept the post. It has been offered to and declined by several gentlemen. Before Major BEN. MCCULLOCH accepted the post of Marshalship of Texas he had been consulted by some of his friends upon the subject of this Governorship. It was thought that as a man of character, courage, address and humanity he would be able to meet and master all the difficulties of the situation. He then expressed a willingness to accept the office if he should be appointed. But Senator RUSK and others, who were deeply impressed with the importance of securing the services of Major MCCULLOCH in the construction of the wagon road from El Paso to Fort Yuma, could not spare him for service in Utah. But it now appears from a paragraph in the Union that the Government is obliged to resort to Major MCCULLOCH as the most suitable man for the place, whose service they can command.

It is probable, therefore, that the "Saints" will soon be provided with a "Gentile" as their Governor, instead of their "Prophet, Priest and King." BRIGHAM YOUNG cannot be stripped of his priesthood, nor of his gifts for prophecy, by the secular authorities, but his political and military rule will be modified by its subjugation to the authority of Governor MCCULLOCH and General HARNEY. That a conflict will take place between the United States authorities and the Mormons is not improbable.

It is decided to remove Gov. IZARD, of Nebraska. His removal has been delayed by the charges preferred against him, and the propriety of affording him an opportunity to refute them. But all charges affecting his moral character have been withdrawn, and he will be superseded in a few days. It has been stated that a Southern man, as heretofore, would be selected as Governor of this Territory. But, inasmuch as Southern men have been appointed to KANSAS, and as a Southern man will be selected for Utah, it is believed that a Governor for Nebraska will be taken from the North.

Another Heiress Elopement.

From the Cincinnati Daily Times.

The citizens of Xenia (Ohio) have been greatly agitated by a very strange case of elopement that has turned up in their midst, during the present week. The parties are a Miss SALLIE MARTIN, aged seventeen years, and a man named BOYD, of rather doubtful repute, and of bad association. Miss MARTIN is the daughter of the late Dr. MARTIN, of Xenia, and is worth in her own right $70,000. She has been of late under the care of two maiden aunts, who have raised her in total seclusion from company. Miss SALLIE became acquainted with BOYD about a month since, and, notwithstanding the vigilance of her guardians, managed to have stolen interviews with him at certain intervals.

On Tuesday morning last it was discovered that the young lady and her lover had fled. The entire community was thrown into excitement, and arrangements were made to pursue the fugitives, and, if possible, bring BOYD to justice. It was ascertained that they had taken the night train to Springfield, and passed the night at the Werden House, in that city. The pursuers then left for Urbana, for which place BOYD and his victim had departed. Here they were again too late, as BOYD, after making an attempt to procure a marriage license, had hurried on to some other point. In his application to the proper authorities at Urbana, BOYD swore to the young lady's age as being eighteen years, but, being rather closely questioned by the Judge, became frightened at the prospect of a charge of perjury to which he had laid himself open, and, tearing up the license, left the office in a hurry.

The citizens of Xenia have made the matter a community affair, and should BOYD, who has made himself obnoxious to them in more ways than one, fall into their hands, they will fix him securely in some way or other.

Mr. HERRIES moved "That the Association most cordially accept the resignations just tendered, and do hereby recommend the brethren thus separating themselves to the mercy of God through Jesus Christ." [Hisses.] There was no second. The Secretary, Mr. MARSHALL, proposed that the resignations be indefinitely tabled. Lost.

The motion was renewed to table the subject for one month. Carried.

The next subject in order was the proposal of 93 new members. Under the rules their election cannot take place until the next regular meeting.

The Essay of the evening was then read by AUGUSTUS MAVERICK, Esq.—Subject: Christianity, theoretical and practical. The matter was discussed briefly but vigorously.

The resignation of so large a number of active members and of prominent clergymen was not wholly unexpected, as may be seen from the following, which, though marked confidential, was quite generally circulated yesterday.

[Confidential.]

No. 189 PEARL-STREET, Friday, April 24, 1857.

DEAR SIR; Try and be at the meeting of the "Young Men's Christian Association," Monday evening, (27th inst.,) with at least one new member to propose. The opposition seem determined to "crush out" the Association, if possible.

We can and must match name for name, as they expect to announce one hundred resignations. If we do our duty, their designs are easily frustrated, and the truth triumphs. "A word to the wise is all sufficient."

"Little drops of water—
Little grains of sand, &c."

If you cannot be present, send me the names (if you secure any) before Monday, 4 o'clock P. M., to my office; or after that to No. 32 Waverley-place.

Yours truly,
GEORGE P. EDGAR.

The due ($2) must accompany the names.

The following is the list of officers for the ensuing year, nominated last evening:

President—ROBERT BLISS.
Vice-President—CEPHAS BRAINERD.
Corresponding Secretary—RICH'D C. MCCORMICK, Jr.
Treasurer—E. S. BROWN, and 15 Directors.

Mulberry-street Church.

The congregation assembling in Mulberry-street Methodist Episcopal Church, being about to migrate to a more commodious location up town, last Sabbath was devoted to farewell reminiscences. The floor of the building was moderately filled, the gallery was nearly empty. After the usual preliminary exercises, Rev. Dr. BANGS sketched the early history of the building. Bishop JANES next addressed the assembly. He cited many marked instances of conversion occurring during his pastorate over that church, and expressed, in endearing language, his warm sympathy with their future interests. He hoped that the amount might only be appreciable in eternity of the moral good directly as well as indirectly attributable to their Christian activity. He spoke of himself, regretting, from motives of delicacy, that it was unavoidable. This was the last congregation over which he had exercised the pastoral charge.

Rev. E. L. JANES (brother of the Bishop) was the next speaker. He alluded in brief and affectionate terms to his connection with the church as pastor, from 1845 to 1847, when, said he, "by Episcopal authority, or more correctly, by ecclesiastical law," his connection with them terminated. He spoke of many scenes yet upon his memory, alluding to the deathbeds of MARY A. LYON, JULIA M. DIGHTMAN, and ANNA MARIA POLHEMUS, as of memorable interest.

Rev. Mr. OSBORNE, the present pastor, then detailed some financial statements. In 1836 the number of church members was 106, the collections amounting to $41. In 1846 the members were 277, and there had been a corresponding increase in subscriptions. In 1856 the contributions to the Missionary cause had been $2,000; to the Bible Society, $200; Tract Society, $1,047; Sunday School Union, $1,114; Superannuated Preachers' fund, $225;—total, $4,622; while in 1857 they had contributed $1,000 to Missions, $2,055 to the Bible Society: $1,307 to the Tract Society; $662 to Schools, and $200 to the Superannuated Preachers' fund,—making a total of $5,214, or an increase of $600 upon the previous year. This would show that, with the separation of the up-town John-street people, they had increased their collections. The liberality and progress in giving, had increased faster than the ratio as to numbers. He argued thence an increase in the spirituality and benevolence of the church. The records show that 450 had been received on probation during the period of their history. Other churches could show 500, and some a smaller number. The Methodist Episcopal Church was as yet only in its infancy, and if, with her ministerial intelligence, activity and power, she would suffer herself to be carried away from her selfishness, it was impossible to say what she might not accomplish. Our Christianity, said Mr. OSBORNE, requires to be more humanized. If defective, it is in its application—in the want of a deeper sympathy and a warmer love for human nature in its capabilities.

After singing and the benediction, the meeting adjourned to hold in the afternoon a love feast.

We are informed that the church and congregation (colored) known as St. Philip's, formerly of Centre-street, but recently worshiping in Stuyvesant Institute, have bought the building in Mulberry-street, (organ and all complete), for $30,000.

Of this church, PETER WILLIAMS, the father of the first pastor, was purchased out of Slavery during the Revolutionary war by the Trustees of the old John-street church. The church book records the transaction, wherein the value of his watch is assessed at five pounds, money of that period.

The New Port Bill and the Pilot Commissioners.

The Board of Commissioners of Pilots, Messrs. ROBERT TAYLOR, CHARLES H. MARSHALL, E. E. MORGAN, RUSSELL STURGES and G. W. BLUNT, who are made the Pilot Commissioners under the new act, met for consultation on Saturday last, at No. 69 South-street, but did not organize. They have not yet decided to accept office under the present law, and meantime they have addressed the Chamber of Commerce and Board of Underwriters—by which bodies they are appointed—for instructions in regard to their new duties. It is their intention, if they agree to continue in office, to require a rigid conformity to all the provisions of the Port bill.

The section restraining all persons from throwing ashes and cinders into the waters of the harbor from off any steamboat, will cause some flurry among steamboat proprietors, but is deemed highly necessary, as this refuse material is found to be a large component of the substance taken out of the slips by the dredging machines. It was stated to the Commissioners that five scow loads, or about one hundred and twenty tons, were dredged from one spot where a steamboat had been lying during a single season. What disposition will be made of coal cinders here after by steamboats, we cannot even guess.

The section which requires every vessel when discharging or loading coals, brick, and all other loose materials, to fasten canvass or other cloth between the pier or bulkhead and the vessel's side, in order to prevent any such material from falling into the water, will be rigorously enforced by the Commissioners. This practice prevails in London, Liverpool, and most of the leading seaports, and it is only a wonder that we have not adopted it here before. Few persons have any idea of the quantity of rubbish which accumulates in the course of a few years from this source. A great deal of coal is dropped into the water from coal barges while unloading at the docks, or when discharging into a steamer; so much so, indeed, that some enterprising individuals drive a lively trade by fishing it from the bottom with oyster-tongs and rakes. One man at the Cunard docks, Jersey City, grappled coal enough from the bottom of the slips last winter to supply his family with fuel during the cold season, and out of his abundance he sold $150 worth. This section will not prove very troublesome to shipowners, since any old sail will answer the purpose of stretching between the wharf and the vessel.

The section which prohibits the throwing of iron, lead, or any heavy substance upon a pier, or dragging it over the same without adequate protection to the planking, will save a good deal to pier owners.

It has been the practice to dump the mud and sand taken from the slips a little way out from the ends of the piers. The current soon brings much of it back into other slips, ruining them. A provision in the new act requires the mud and sand dredged out to be removed to some place above high-water mark, or deposited within a bulkhead for filling, or in some place to be approved by the Commissioners. The vicinity of Bedloe's Island has been spoken of as the most available place for this purpose, where there is very shoal water, and whence it would not be likely to return and impede navigation.

But this will cost probably about three times as much as it now does, which is seldom over 13 cents a cubic yard. Most of the slips require dredging as often as once in four or five years. The dredging machine is a floating apparatus, carrying a steam engine by which the mud is hoisted up in large buckets and thrown into a scow alongside. The latter when full is pushed out into the stream and its contents suddenly let out through a false bottom. Some of the dredging people say that if the deposit thus discharged is washed into the slips again, the reason is simply that it is not carried far enough out; that as the thing is now managed, the Street Commissioner appoints an inspector whose duty it is to see that the work is properly done, and in some cases, through collusion with parties who are employed to do the dredging, he permits them to remove the mud and sand to any distance from the ends of the piers they see fit, sometimes not more than twenty feet.

If this is really the case, and if the mud and sand carried well out into the channel does not return again by the action of the tide, the Commissioners may decide that the present mode of dredging shall remain, especially as the following language of the act, "or in some place to be approved by the said Commissioners," seems to make the locality optional with them. The cost of dredging a slip ranges from $1,200 to $1,500, and the annual expense to each averages not far from $300. At the present rates of wharfage, the owners of piers say that their investment scarcely pays six per cent., and accordingly they made an effort at the late session of the Legislature to get the wharfage rates on merchandise increased, but the influence of Western flour men and others was too much for them.

Those who are familiar with the appearance of our wharves cannot help observing an immense quantity of useless lumber always lying about where it is not wanted, and left lying an indefinite length of time. This is all to be reformed, as the new law directs that merchandise remaining on any pier or bulkhead for more than twenty-four hours shall be speedily removed by the Commissioners, on the complaint of a person interested. On Saturday the Commissioners took a walk from Burling Slip as far up as Roosevelt-street, and found a very miscellaneous array of water casks, anchors, chains, &c., "lying around loose," enough in all to cover an acre of ground.

The practice has been much in vogue for boats and small vessels to make fast to buoys, and particularly are vessels accustomed to anchor close to them, by which means their anchors often foul with the buoys and drag them from their place. By a section of the Port bill, all this is expressly forbidden under heavy penalties.

In regard to the provision which prohibits shadpoles from being set in the waters of the harbor, the Commissioners seem to be agreed to enforce it. Shadpoles stud all parts of the river channel, compelling vessels to do a good deal of dodging or be snagged. Vessels rubbing against them lose their copper sheathing, and steamboats are perpetually damaging the buckets of their paddle wheels. Many old poles are broken off below the surface of the water—of course a terrible nuisance, and sending many crafts to the bottom.

The section requiring the name of the owner, or one of the owners of a lighter, together with his place of business, to be painted on the side of his vessel, is not open to objections, as it has always been customary with other vessels to have their name and place where owned, painted on the stern or side in a conspicuous position.

The Commissioners are understood to view some of the sections of this new law without favor, and hence their communication to the Chamber of Commerce and Board of Underwriters. We shall know in a few days whether they will resign or stand to their post.

Cricket.

The various clubs of our City and vicinity are making vigorous preparations for the approaching cricketing campaign, and the prospect is that it will be one of the most successful seasons on record. The New-York Club will commence play at Hoboken on Monday, May 4, at 10 o'clock A. M. The St. George' Club will do the same the following week. The "Long Island," "Brooklyn," and "United Club of Kings County," will commence operations early in May. The two latter will play on the new grounds at Bedford. The former on the same as last season. The grounds adjoin near the terminus of the Fulton Avenue Railway. Three important matches will take place early in June, viz.: The New-York Club vs. St. George's; New-York City vs. the United States; and Eleven English Players vs. Eighteen Americans. From the prominent players in these matches, eleven will be selected to contend with the Canadians in September.

The Tammany Democracy—Meeting of the General Convention.

The Convention selected to make arrangements for the formation of a new Democratic General Committee met last evening at Tammany Hall. The attendance was full both inside and out. The Convention was called to order at 8 o'clock by WILLIAM D. KENNEDY, Father of the Council. The following temporary officers were then selected: JAMES T. BRADY, President; ISAAC BELL, Jr., and JOHN CRANE, Secretaries. Mr. BRADY, on assuming the Chair, made a brief address. He alluded to his return to the Old Wigwam, and expressed his congratulations at the reunion of the party. His remarks were loudly cheered. The Convention then proceeded to the election of permanent officers.

ELIJAH F. PURDY was selected as Chairman, and SAML. VANDERHEYDEN, Sr., and ALFRED CRANE, Jr., were chosen Secretaries. ISAAC BELL, Jr., TOWNSEND, and CHARLES MILLS, Sergeant-at-Arms. A Committee, consisting of Messrs. Cochrane, Clancy, Bradley, Sweeny and Brady, were appointed to submit rules and by-laws for the government of the Convention. A Committee of one from each Ward, to be appointed hereafter by the Chair, was to report a plan for the selection of a General Committee. The Convention adjourned until May 18.

MARINE COURT.

LIABILITY OF COMMON CARRIERS—ALE SPOILED BY THE FROST.

Tracy vs. Cromwell and others.—The plaintiff is a brewer. The defendants are the owners of the Baltimore and Portland Line of Propellers. On the 26th day of January last, the plaintiff made a contract with the defendants to transport 30 barrels of ale to Boston, by the propeller West Port. The ale was to be stored in the hold of the vessel on that day, and the vessel was to sail the next. The goods were accordingly carted off to the Company's pier in the North River and received by one of their agents on the dock. The West Port left New-York on the 21st of January, was expected back on the 26th, and advertised to sail again on the next day. It seems, however, that, owing to the inclemency of the weather, and the fact that the propeller, on her voyage, towed a vessel, in distress, to Hiannus, on the Sound, she did not reach Boston until the 7th of February, returning to New-York on the 11th, and sailing again for Boston on the 13th. The ale was not shipped until the 13th of February, laying on the defendants' dock, from the 26th of January until that day. By exposure the ale was entirely spoiled by the frost; and when it reached Boston, on the 14th of February, the consignee, Mr. Haskins, refused to receive it. Thereupon, Bishop, the agent of defendants at Boston, stored it, and the plaintiffs have never heard of it since. The contract to ship the ale was made by an agent of the defendants; who, at the time, supposed, no doubt, that the West Port would be in port on the 26th of January, and ready to sail on the 27th. But in that he was mistaken, and the result was that the ale became entirely valueless. The Court gave judgment for $220, the value of the ale and the barrels.

THE ELVES,
Legend.—The mountain forests of Pastoria are inhabited, it is said, by Pixies, Sprites and Elves, who, like the Phantom Dancers of Germany, delight to entrap travelers into their realms and torment them with their mischievous antics. Having the power of transferring the spirit, they often, in their malicious gambols, give life to the newly dead. Statues, rocks and trees are seen fantastically moving in the forest, but it is only during the day they retain their fictitious existence; at the approach of night they resume their immobility.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The steamship Empire City arrived at New-Orleans yesterday, with California dates to the 6th inst. The only item of news reported from California is the failure of the Pacific Express Company—liabilities not stated.

By this arrival we have some additional intelligence from Nicaragua. The retreat of Lockridge is fully confirmed. The Costa Ricans have taken possession of Punta Arenas and seized the steamer Bogue, with a great amount of ammunition and six pieces of artillery. The Empire City had on board one hundred of Lockridge's men, who had been conveyed to Aspinwall in British vessels. Generals Wheat and Hornsby are on board the Illinois, now due at this port. Private dispatches from Aspinwall state that Walker's position at Rivas is impregnable, and that he would be able to hold out for months. The steamer on the other side brought no direct intelligence from him. The Transit Route is stated to be open to the Pacific.

A letter from the wife of Crawford, the Sculptor, to a gentleman in Philadelphia, is published in the Evening Bulletin of that city. She gives a clear, and of course reliable, account of the progress of her husband's malady and his present condition, from which we infer that the symptoms are favorable, and that there is a probability that he will ultimately be restored to health, though he may lose the sight of the affected eye.

A collision occurred on the Ohio River on Sunday, between the steamboats Rainbow and Julia Dean, by which the latter was sunk immediately, and five or six persons were drowned. The cargo is a total loss, but is insured. The Rainbow was very little damaged.

The Aldermen resolved last night that all the important bills passed by the last Legislature, with reference to the City of New-York are null and void, for the reason that no apportionment was made by the Legislature first in session after the taking of the last census, and that they will protect citizens from the enforcement of the laws complained of. They also resolved to ask the Corporation Counsel's opinion, whether passing the Councilmen's ordinance of reorganizing the Department would be a recognition of the constitutionality of the new Charter.

At the Board of Councilmen, on Monday, an ordinance reorganizing the Croton Aqueduct Department was adopted, with some modifications, as detailed in our report. The Mayor forwarded two vetoes—one upon the construction of maps for the use of projectors of street alterations; the other against donating $2,000 for a work on sacred music for the blind. The bill was passed to a third reading raising the salaries of the Mayor and City Inspector to $5,000 respectively, and affirmed by 35 votes to 12. The Board then adjourned till Tuesday.

The Board of Supervisors yesterday received an opinion from the Corporation Attorney adverse to the legality of the bill of James Taylor for supplying dinners to the Board of County Canvassers for 1856. A resolution was adopted equalizing the salaries of the Ward Assessors to $700 a year.

The Convention to make arrangements for the formation of a new Democratic General Committee held its first meeting at Tammany Hall last evening. The following permanent officers were chosen:

Chairman—Elijah F. Purdy.

Secretaries—Alfred Chancellor and Samuel Vanderheyden.

Treasurer—Isaac Bell, Jr.

Serjeant-at-Arms—Charles Mills.

The proceedings were very harmonious.

The investigation into the charges preferred against Coroner Connery, relative to his conduct of the Burdell inquest, was continued yesterday before Judge Daly. Mary Donahoe testified that if the Coroner used the saying, "you carry your tail behind you," to her, while a witness, she did not hear it; and that if he had, and she had heard it, she would have considered it complimentary to her honesty and integrity,—knowing, as she did, the meaning attached to it in Ireland. Dr. Woodward was called by the respondents, with reference to the personal examination of Mrs. Cunningham; and the cross-examination of Mrs. Denison was concluded. The case comes on again on Saturday.

Judge Nelson delivered a most important decision in the United States Circuit Court yesterday in the case brought by Captain Graham against the firm of Meyer & Stucken, to recover the value of the steamships Ocean Bird and St. Lawrence, conveyed to them by a usurious contract as he alleges. The motion decided was a motion for a ne exeat, to prevent Stucken from leaving the country, and the merits of the controversy were not therefore brought up. The defendants, however, denied the jurisdiction of the Court over the case, because Stucken is a Consul, claiming that the only Court where the suit could be brought against a Consul was the United States Supreme Court. Judge Nelson, however, decides in favor of the jurisdiction of the Circuit Court, and the suit must therefore proceed upon its merits. The motion for the ne exeat was however denied on the ground that this action was an action for damages, and not one in which a debt was already due.

The demurrer to the complaint, argued at the same time, was not decided.

At the meeting of the New-York Young Men's Christian Association, last evening, one hundred and seventy-nine members of that Society, including several prominent clergymen of this City, announced their resignation of membership. The movement had been anticipated, and to match it the names of 92 new members were proposed immediately after. The resignations were not acted on—the subject being tabled till the next meeting. The alleged motive for this wholesale desertion of the Society, on the part of its early friends, is the desertion by the Society of its early aims and intentions. The parties going out protest emphatically that any late action of the Society on the Slavery question has not affected them.

The Mayor of Brooklyn last evening sent a communication to the Common Council relative to the Jersey Water bill, and suggesting that counsel be employed to look after the interests of Brooklyn. After a short discussion a resolution was adopted, employing Ex-Judge Greenwood and Henry C. Murphy, Esq., with the Corporation Counsellor, to look after the interests of the city. The intention is to prevent in any event the new bill from going into operation in that city.

American Loyalty.

None but friends should quarrel: when strangers disagree there is insult behind each angry word, and blood at the back of insult; but with an intimate companion—one whose vein we know, and whose humors we can rally to the utmost verge of good-natured endurance—with such a one there is nothing more delicious than a tiff.

Thus with our brothers of the South, we have had, occasionally, some oratorical and journalistic jousts—we failing to perceive the snm of all human wisdom and philanthropy in the Institution they so dearly cherish; nor having yet been able to appreciate, from a South-side point of view, that paternal affection which sells two colored children at the auction-block to get the price of plumage and bijouterie for the one egitimate white.

Nevertheless, we must acknowledge that the bitter retorts of the South on our mercantile avarice and manufacturing oppression, are not without more truth than is agreeable:—they have a peculiar way, also, of putting forward strong points Sonth of Mason and Dixon's line, and the practical pleasantries elicited in reply to our joccse animadversions, have more than balanced the account.

We question their divine or constitntional right to extend the system of human bondage over virgin soil; they answer by razing the foundation of a town just huilt by the pioneers of our opinion. We challenge their legitimate dominion over the labor and lives of responsible and immortal beings, and we inveigh against the coercive measnres designed to keep their "servants" in the ignorance that is essential to submission. Our challenge is promptly met by the creation of a bogus insurrection, the hanging of some score of valuable chattels, the burning alive at the stake of as many more, and the whipping half to death of several hundred refractories all round the circle of the neighborhood in which we are supposed to have excited the rebellion. As to the ignorance part of the business, they will thrust a Northern lady into the jail with common felons, for the crime of having striven to teach some piece of colored goods to read the Bible; they will tar and feather and triumphantly ride on rails as many Down-East Missionaries as they can conveniently lay hands upon; and having disposed of all these little matters with a zeal which shows that their hearts are in the work, they cheerfully inquire—do we need any further proof that their dominion is absolute and divine, and "really for the best interests" of the people ruled?

Now, clearly enough, this condition of accusation and retort would amonnt to a state of war if existing between two parties who were not the best friends in the world. It requires the strongest honds of interest and affection—and even a higher bond than these—to hold together a companionship that has so many points of contradictory opinion. That saving bond is found in the deep-rooted loyalty of the American character; and it is for the want of perceiving this cohesive moral element that strangers from all parts of the earth, and men of limited views amongst ourselves, have always labored, and are still laboring under the delusion that our Union is one day destined to go to pieces amid the distracting currents of some great national crisis.

Loyalty, in the abstract, is the moral control that keeps men faithful to their promises;—the loyalty of a wife means chastity; the loyalty of a soldier, conrage; the loyalty of a courtier, homage; and the loyalty of republican citizens, the submission of the minority to whatever may either be, or seem to be, the will of the Majority expressed through those channels which both have consented to look upon as the legitimate tests. This loyalty to the ascendant voice, it is, which keeps, has kept and will continue to keep our Union fundamentally unshaken. It is a new and higher development of the old feudal principle that held the mail-clad Barons obedient even to a woman's ruling, if that woman chanced either to inherit, or to have personally acquired, the promise of their allegiance and support. We bend no knee to individnals: there is not a country in the world where hero-worship—save as the excuse for a holiday—is at so sad a discount; the glories of the first Bonaparte could not swerve us from our allegiance to the majority; nor could the humbler pretensions of General Franklin Pierce throw ridiculo on the Abstract Idea of which, four years ago, he became the unequal representative. We feel no hesitation in asserting that loyalty, in its political sense, is the distinguishing characteristic of Americans; and that it will be found of us, on examination, that we are more obedient and submissive to the rulers of our own creation, than ever were the feudal lords and tributary serfs of Europe to the despotisms imposed on them, either by force or fraud, or both these agencies united.

Six months ago the nations of the old world stood on tip-toe for the steamer that should bring the news of our disruption: they quoted the enthusiastic ballads in which our Northern political songsters declared that the hour to do or die had come, and that, not only must all Slavery be upset, but that all slaveholders must be exterminated in the shortest order: they placed these enthusiastic rantings side by side with the equally fiery bombast of our Southern rhetoricians and stump orators; and from the virulent antagonism of speech and song it was deduced as incontrovertible—the prophets rejoicing in their belief—that last Fourth of March would only inaugurate the chaos of conflicting sections, and that the White House would be the prize contended for hy the North, East and West upon one side, and the South, with its hirelings and conscientious doughfaces upon the other!

But see the actual result! One might as well look for the snow that fell last year, or the penalties due from our City contractors for the non-fulfillment of their engagements, as attempt to discover any trace of these quasi-treasonable ebullitions in the press or public mind of the present day. Our loyalty accepts Mr. Buchanan as it would have accepted Stephen Branch or the Four-cent paper man, had either been the popular choice;—and with every confidence in the ability and personal integrity of the present Executive, the country awaits the practical results of his Administration before pronouncing judgment upon it. But even those who dislike it most meditate no more violent methods of redress than voting it out of power four years hence.

The License Law—The Liquor Dealers and the State Temperance Society.

The Liquor Dealers' Association of this City have been, and still are, very active in devising ways and means to break down or evade the operation of the new License Law. They complain of the stringency of many of its provisions, denounce it as a violation of their rights, and will do everything in their power to prevent it from being enforced. They allege that it is almost as bad as absolnte prohibition—that it will deprive at least three-fourths of those now engaged in the sale of liquor of the opportunity to carry on their business, and subject the remainder to restrictions and conditions of great severity. They are discussing the policy, therefore, of taking steps to resist its enforcement, and test its constitutionality in the courts of law.

The Liquor Dealers are aided in this endeavor to break down the law, by the Executive Committee of the State Temperance Society, which has just issued an address in which the Liquor Dealers are virtually assured of their hearty and effective coöperation. The ground taken by the Committee is simply this: that they are committed in favor of total and absolute prohibition,—that the License Law only secures partial prohibition, and that consistency requires them, therefore, not in any way to favor its enforcement! That we do not misrepresent the Committee will be seen by the following extract from their address:

> But this law is stringent and even partially prohibitory in its provisions. True—and that is the gilding that secured its passage—more than that—it is the tempting bait by which it was thought the whole temperance army would be marshaled in its support, and after they had bravely done battle under its banners, and effectually driven from the field all the little unlicensed grog-sellers to be found in the State, the large vendors could then enjoy unmolested their gains made according to law.
> We present one other consideration. Let us advance actively enlist in the enforcement of this law without adopting it as our law, identifying ourselves with it, abandoning prohibition, and planting ourselves upon the license principle. Suppose this done, what is our position before future Legislatures? The present law is a very stringent one. Under it all the smaller dealers are driven from the field. At the next Legislature a cry comes up for the modification of the law. They desire it larger monthed, longer throated, more democratic. We go in for prohibition. "But," say the larger venders, with a sardonic grin, "you have abandoned that. You have gone in with us on the license system. You are our allies. We are under very many obligations to you for that, but we hope you will be consistent, and preserve your principles, without incurring any further obligations." The only open questions that can hereafter be discussed regard the greater or less stringency of the license law; and on those questions we doubt not we shall be together still, for our interests and your principles both lie in the line of stringency."
> Upon the strength of those considerations mainly, the Executive Committee are clear in their convictions of duty. Having reached the prohibitory principle and planted themselves on it, they can never abandon it. If they stood alone they would stand there still. Their voice will be raised in no other cause, their efforts enlisted in no other principle. If the moral forces in man are insufficient to carry out this principle fully, taking years, or generations, or centuries, even, if necessary, for its development, they will leave it to others to tell the melancholy story. For themselves, their course will be as unfaltering as if marked out by destiny.

It seems difficult to believe that sane men, —blessed with the ordinary degree of common sense—can decoive themselves npon a grave question of social morality by snch a jugglery of words as this. They concede that this new License Law is "very stringent"—that it is "even partially prohibitory in its provisions,"—that nnder it all the "smaller liquor-dealers are driven from the fiold." By their own acknowledgment its enforcement would close the thousands of petty rum shops which blot the face of the State,—which feed nine-tenths of the drunkards,—which supply the poison which maddens and embrutes the great mass of those nnhappy creatures who are the victims of this demoniac passion. It is at these paltry rum-holes that the streams are fed which desolate the homes and hearts of the poor,—clothe the wife and children with rags and cover them with the shame and sorrow of the drunkard's lot? No man who knows anything about the facts of the case doubts that nine-tenths of all the ruin, all the sorrow, all the crime, all the nameless and inconceivable woes that flow from drunkenness, come from these small dens, where the liquor is cheap, and poisoned, and whither the poorer classes are sure to go for their supplies. Yet the Executive Committee of the State Temperance Society refuse to aid in enforcing a law which, as they concede, will shut up these dens and stay the tide of desolation and of death that issnes from them,—lest they should hereafter be accused by party opponents of having favored something short of total prohibition!

This is the madness of fanatical partisanship. It transcends the worst extremes of the most reckless and unprincipled political faction of the day. It deliberately and consciously sacrifices thousands and tens of thousands of victims to the demon of Intemperance, on the altar of its own fancied consistency. It turns a deaf ear to the cry of the widow and the orphan, and the still deeper wail of the wife and children of the drunkard, lest it should at some futnre time hear the whisper that it had changed its ground or acted in connection with men who hold a different faith. It seems strange that sensible men should be able to deceive themselves by such bald and transparent sophistry as this,—and doubly strange that they should mistake it for principle and true consistency.

The Committee have embodied their determination in regard to the License Law in the following resolutions:

> Resolved, That in the stringent provisions of the License Law, and its partially prohibitory character, we discern only the gilded covering of internal rottenness, and that to escape the one we are quite willing to forego the other.
> Resolved, That we know nothing, will sustain nothing, and act for nothing but prohibition, and that we will leave to those who have procured the enactment of this law, and are interested in sustaining it, the labor and effort that may be necessary to secure its effectual observance.

The Liquor Dealers and the Executive Committee of the State Temperance Society are agreed that they will not snstain the License Law. They will leave to others "interested in sustaining it, the labor and effort that may be necessary to secure its effectual observance." If the Temperance sentiment of the State supports the Executive Committee, the Liquor Dealers will be victorious: the law which trammels their business will be broken down,—and there will be no longer any legal obstacles in the way of the traffic in rum. But if there is any considerable portion of the community which prefers the public good to party pride—which deems it more important to preserve life and character than party consistency—and which believes duty to consist in doing all the good possible under the circumstances of the case, trusting in Providence for an enlarged sphere and new opportunities of public service, we may still hope for some beneficent results from the new law.

The Condition of the Streets.

The City Inspector, Mr. Mabbett, received yesterday a report, by which it appears that there are daily committed, in the Fourteenth Ward alone, over eight thousand seven hundred violations of the law, in respect to throwing garbage into the streets. Multiply this amount, or half of it, by the number of Wards in the City, and we have an aggregate of abomination, by the side of which party wranglings for place, and even the atrocious rascalities of some of the municipal heads of departments, appear as nothing. Summer is fast approaching, the streets are in an unprecedentedly filthy condition, and there appears to be no remedy. The various reports which the City Inspector has lately collected, show that the Police peremptorily refuse to enforce the law against those individnals or families who violate it. If, here and there, a culprit is arrested, he is at once discharged by the magistrate, and returns to his dwelling to repeat, with increased impunity, the offense for which he has deserved to suffer punishment. We cannot expect that a Providence will annually interfere, as it did last year, to protect us from disease and pestilence, yet the remonstrances of the Health Wardens, and the outcries of the press and the public are totally unheeded, while every endeavor is being made to effect a return to the old system of Ehlingism, by which the pockets of a few individuals are filled at the expense of the health and welfare of the City, and the lives of perhaps thousands of its inhabitants.

Earnest hopes had been entertained that the Thirteen Wards of the City, which were committed by the Mayor, Comptroller and Commissioner of Streets and Lamps to the charge of Mr. Reynolds, as the lowest bidder under the recent advertisment for contracts, would be better attended to. Promises were freely made that a new epoch was about to be inaugurated, and that, ere many days had elapsed, the public would rejoice in the unwonted spectacle of entirely cleansed thoroughfares. We sincerely regret the necessity of announcing that a fear is gaining ground lest the hopes thus raised should, after all, be disappointed. A spasmodic effort was made to exhibit certain portions of the lower wards, in a better light than they had previously appeared in; but the usefulness of the contractors came to a sudden stand still, and the City, as a whole, is nearly as badly off at the present moment, as it was one month ago. To what this is owing we neither know, nor is it our business to care. The fact is undonbtedly true, that the specifications of the late contracts remain unfulfilled, and that nnless a change for the better takes place, tax payers and the public interest will severely suffer.

Reports are in circulation that the real cause of inaction, on the part of the contractor for thirteen Wards of the City, is a simple matter of unsettled relations between himself, a Street-Sweeping Machine Company, under the direction of the gentleman who became his security, and Mr. Robert A. Smith, the patentee of the said machines. Now the public do not care a straw for these misunderstandings, but desire simply, a fair and bona fide fulfillment of the conditions of the agreement which has been made, or that it should be rescinded, and steps taken at once to hold the contractor's security responsible for the loss. It is true that Manchester, Liverpool, Paris, Birmingham, and other large cities of Europe, are now cleaned at no expense to the people, by the aid of machinery, and that New-York is far behind the age in its sanitary arrangements. It is also notorious that the principal obstacle in the way of the introdnction of a great reform in sewerage, street-cleaning, and the uses to which dirt, offal, refuse, and manure may be applied, has been created by speculators, monopolists, and the greedy hordes of corruptionists who have swarmed around the departments, and fed upon the treasury. Nevertheless give us clean streets—make any sort of beginning in the way of improvement—and we shall willingly tolerate a reasonable amount of delay in carrying out its details.

After the 1st of May, the superintendence of the streets will have forever passed away, under the new charter, from Mr. Ehling, and will be assumed hy Mr. Morton, the new City Inspector. We learn that a high opinion of this gentleman is entertained by those who have at heart the cause of reform, and that he is determined that the requirements of the charter shall be fulfilled at every hazard, and the streets be henceforth properly attended to by the contractors. These latter gentlemen have still the opportunity of deserving public gratitude, and of raising themselves to an enviable position in the estimation of all good citizens. In order, however, to do this, they must at once so arrange the difficulties among themselves that a prodigious practical improvement may take place, from the inefficiency and inactivity of the past few weeks.

Personal Controversies in the Press.

We regret to perceive that two of our amiable cotemporaries,—the Herald and Tribune—are engaged in one of those unseemly controversies which are quite too common with the Press of this country, and which do so much to lower the standard and impair the influence of Journalism. We have nothing to do with the subject in dispute, which is too purely personal for anything more than an allusion in our columns: but it seems that the Herald is very severe in its comments upon a speech which it declares was made hy a gentleman connected in some way with the Tribune's editorial department, whose name we do not choose to repeat lest we should fall into the very error which we deprecate. The Herald, which to do it justice, is somewhat less scurrilous in this case than usual, intimates that the gentleman in question was drunk at the time he made the speech,—that he uttered in the course of it a great variety of falsehoods,—that he has not brains enough to be an Editor, and is much better fitted for the humbler post of waiter in a hotel, than for any position in connection with a newspaper, together with snndry other suggestions equally complimentary in their personal bearing. The Tribune in reply gives the Herald to understand that no such speech was made, and that no such gentleman as the one assailed was present on the occasion referred to;—and imitating our example in the matter of Potosi and Parker Vein, it refers to the columns of the Herald for evidence of the truth of its statements. Now we beg to repeat that we have no intention of taking any part in this bitter warfare, and still less of expressing any opinion as to which paper is justly responsible for having commenced it. Nor do we "proffer any opinion as to the general conduct of either of our belligerent contemporaries." It may be as the Herald alleges, that the gentleman whom it assails was present at the dinner, that he did make a speech, that he did utter a great many falsehoods, that he was drunk, and that he would do much better public service as a table-waiter than as an Editor. Or, on the other hand, it may be, as the Tribune intimates, that all this is utterly untrue. It may be either way,—or neither way, or both ways,—"or it may not." We "say nothing on either of these heads."

But we respectfully suggest that the Public Press has become so important to the education, intelligence, good government and well-being of the People, that Editors ought not thus to enter the arena as gladiators, and blacken each other's reputation, without seriously considering their responsibilities to the public. "Can we not amend in this respect?" "Are the issues which divide us so frivolous, the questions which convulse the country so unimportant, that we can only render our columns readable by pitching into each other?"

We are pleading the cause of Editorial courtesy, and will therefore conclude by commending to the careful and serious reflection of our two cotemporaries, who are just now indulging themselves in one of the exhibitions which we so much deprecate, the following excellent remarks from the Tribune of the 14th inst.,—as especially pertinent to this occasion:

> "Each is able to fling a good deal of mud at the other, some of which will naturally stick; and yet there is little justice in the imputations to which either is quite plausibly subjected. We have such faith in human nature that we believe both of them will live to be ashamed of this warfare, in which nothing really can be gained by either, while in the eyes of too many the character and position of the Public Press must be seriously degraded. It is wrong in the conductors of public journals to put the worst construction on each other's acts and motives, and strive to blacken each other's reputations. No lasting advantage can be secured to the assailant in such warfare, while the standing of the Press is lowered and its influence for good seriously impaired. May we not hope for a general and salutary reform?"

The Natural Result of a Needless Controversy.

The Young Men's Christian Association struck last night upon one of the rocks among which its rash young pilots have been cruising for the last six months. Nearly two hundred of its most active and efficient members withdrew last night, not from any decline of interest in the objects for which the Association was organized, but because of the wide departure from those objects which, in their judgment, have marked its recent action. A glance at the names of the seceders, which we publish in another column, will show that they comprise some of the ablest and most useful of the members of the Association.

Our readers are aware that the subject of Slavery has been the disturbing element in this matter. Some members of the Association who were very active and zealous in the late political campaign, insisted upon carrying the discussions to which it gave rise into the meetings of this body. Stimulated hy a portion of the press, both secular and religious, they persisted in requiring from the Association declarations of opinion, as well as discussions, upon the subject of Slavery. The inevitable result of this movement was to divert attention from the practical purposes for which the Association was formed, introduce strife and dissension into its meetings and convert it substantially into a political clnb. The party who favored snch action obtained the ascendancy and accomplished their purpose. The result, which might easily have been foreseen, has been the withdrawal of those who do not consider it the province of an association of young men, formed for purposes of practical improvement and of mutual religious advantage, to enter actively into the political and partisan conflicts of the day.

It will be a matter of general regret that an Association which had so large and so inviting a field of usefulness, and which was doing so much practical good, should have been thus interrupted and crippled. We trust, however, that those who have declined to act further with the present organization, will not abandon the work in which, previous to this unhappy misunderstanding, they were laboring with such good results. In so large a City as this, there is certainly room for two Associations of the kind, if differences upon other topics prevent unity of action in regard to the great object, concerning which all should be agreed.

Remarkable Reasons for a Censorship of the Stage.

The boldness of Rev. Dr. Bellows in advocating theatrical amusements, has elicited a great variety of comments from our cotemporaries and awakoned a spirit of investigation into the character and influences of dramatic representations which may lead to some wholesome results. The Express advances the opinion that a censorship of the stage should be established. "We would have the stage," says the Express, "placed under a vigilant and rigid censorship." If our cotemporary had started this proposition but a few weeks sooner, it is very probable that another hatch of Commissioners might have been created at Albany, with power to regulate our public amusements, and a levy made upon the managers for examining the repertoires of their houses every night, something like that which the Port Wardens are authorized to make on shipowners for examining the hatches of vessels just arrived from sea. It would only be a difference of damaged merchandise or damaged morals, and the morale are certainly of the greater importance of the two. The Express would not only have a censorship of the stage, but it would require all places of public amusement to be closed at ten in the evening. Among the reasons advanced by the Express for such extreme measures against the theatre are the following, which, we must confess, do not strike us as conclusive:

> "Queen Victoria did not venture to bestow the honor of knighthood on Charles Kean, simply because of his profession. And what actress, however distinguished, has escaped the most atrocious calumnies?"

E. M. Still Lives.—We are most happy to learn, from a communication in the Journal of Commerce, that Mr. Meriam, of Brooklyn Heights, is still alive in Albany; and, though he suffers much, is confident of being restored to perfect health. We have indulged, occasionally, in a light paragraph at the expense of E. M., and have not attached much importance to his bulletins of yesterday's weather, but still we believe him to be an eminently kind-hearted and useful gentleman, who, like many other humanitarians, cares not how much he is laughed at so long as he can render any service to his fellow-beings. E. M. has his little eccentricities, which he does not attempt to make a secret of; but they are perfectly harmless, at least to others, while his persistent labors in chronicling [illegible] from certain causes which [illegible] have, no doubt, been productive of a vast amount of good. It is reported that E. M.'s business in Albany has been to prevent the passage of improper laws which would be likely to affect, injuriously, the people of this City and Brooklyn. But we fear that he was not very successful in his mission during the past Winter. We hope soon to have evidence of his return to his barometers and hydrometers on Brooklyn Heights, by seeing his well-known initials again to one of his weather bulletins in the daily papers. We could better spare a better man than E. M., assuming that there is one.

Wise a Good Deal Beyond What is Written.—Our State Canal Board is establishing some very remarkable precedents in the management of the public works under its supervision. Our readers probably remember the attempt which was made at the last Session of the Legislature, to impose upon articles coming from the West through Lake Ontario via the Oswego Canal to Syracuse, the same tolls as they would have paid upon the Erie Canal from Buffalo. The good sense of the Legislature rejected the measure. The Canal Board has now taken the matter in hand and assumed the right to exercise precisely that discrimination in imposing tolls which the Legislature refused to permit.

From Oswego to Albany by way of Syracuse the distance is 211 miles. But at a point 56 miles from Oswego the State has improved and made navigable the Oneida River, which connects with Oneida Lake;—and by taking this route canal boats can reach a point 55 miles East of Syracuse on the Erie Canal, saving 24 miles of Canal travel. The Board has decided that merchandise taking this short cut, must pay the same tolls as if they had come by Canal the whole distance. In other words, for the sake of increasing the revenue, they must pay tolls on twenty-four miles of Canal more than they use!

We shall probably find the Board deciding by and by that boats from Syracuse must pay the same toll as boats from Buffalo. And if they do not impose tolls on the Hudson River and Lake Champlain, it will probably be because they do not need the money. They have certainly just as much right to levy tolls on those waters as upon Lake Ontario and Oneida Lake. It is not easy to estimate the wisdom that will be lost to the State when the majority which just now controls the Canal Board goes out of power.

The New Cent.—The new cent which we have heard so much about, and which has been so long coming, will soon be in everybody's pocket, and the old copper nuisances which we have carried so long will disappear as suddenly as the Spanish shillings and sixpences which have been driven out of existence by the dimes and five-cent pieces. In a few years from now, that phrase, so expressive of extreme and utter destitution which we hear so frequently—"nary red"—will have lost all meaning, and the editor of some future Notes and Queries will be puzzled by letters from antiquarian quidnuncs seeking for information as to its origin. The new cent is not red but a light grey, and one of its great recommendations, besides its small size is, that it has none of the coppery scent of the old coin.

Terrific Attempt to get up a Tea Panic.—One of the evening papers has been trying very hard to get up a panic in relation to tea. Its last splurge on the subject contains the following terrific caution:

> "This is the state of affairs in China. The residents at the ports dread poison, to such an extent, that they will not touch it UNLESS WHOLLY FOREIGN, and our citizens still continue to drink tea with impunity."

We imagine that tea drinking with impunity will continue for sometime longer.

Personal.

A correspondent says that Ex-President Pierce has been spending several days in Concord, N. H., making arrangements to return to his quiet home. The General is said to have purchased sixty acres of land at the north part of the town, upon which he intends to erect a splendid mansion. He will be heartily welcomed home again, as he has many friends who admire the man personally, though they may have but little faith in his political policy.

Ralph Waldo Emerson made his appearance in a Boston pulpit last Sunday. Mr. Emerson was formerly a Unitarian clergyman, but he left the pulpit fifteen or more years ago. Mr. Emerson discoursed, on the present occasion, to a crowded audience in the Music Hall. There was no reading of Scripture, prayer, or benediction attending the service.

An article in the Cincinnati Commercial of Saturday, contains the following:

> Mr. Buchanan, it is well known, has suffered terribly from the prevailing epidemic, and is by no means at this time in good health. A gentleman of our acquaintance, passing through Washington a few days since, happened to hear confirmation of this fact from Mr. Buchanan himself. He was in the vicinity of the Treasury Department building, about nine o'clock in the evening, when—we take the liberty of quoting from a private letter: "I saw, passing a gas-light, a couple of gentlemen, one of whom, although I had not seen him for over sixteen years, I almost knew to be the President. I stepped alongside, and a glance informed me that I was not mistaken. The old man totters. His legs are weak. A half-stumble drew some remark from his companion which I did not hear. His reply was: 'I am not right. My health is not recovered;' adding in sort of begging tone, 'but I am getting better.'"

Mr. and Mrs. Beck and their two children, who were believed to be among the dead bodies found in the cars, after the Desjardins Canal Railway accident, are actually living now at their house on Gerrard-street, in Toronto, not having been on the cars that day at all, although their bodies were supposed to have been recognised.

The Congregationalist reports that $1,000 has been collected and presented to Rev. Mr. Finney for his ministerial labors in Boston since December. The ladies collected $500 additional for Mrs. Finney, who has addressed meetings of her own sex with great acceptance. Besides this, $8,000 has been subscribed toward the $20,000 for the Finney professorship at Oberlin, several persons giving $1,000 each.

The Andover Professors, Park and Phelps, in connection with Dr. Lowell Mason, have for some time been engaged in the preparation of a new collection of psalms and hymns, which is now in in such a forward state that its publication may be looked for in the course of a few months.

The Howard Association of Norfolk have presented Miss Annie M. Andrews with a beautiful gold medal, in token of their appreciation of her philanthropic services during the pestilence in that city in 1855.

Mr. Donald McLeod, whose Life of Mary Queen of Scots has just appeared, has taken up his residence in St. Louis for the purpose of editing the Sunday Leader of that city.

Hon. S. A. Douglas has been invited hy the Tennessee State Agricultural Bureau to deliver the annual address at the State Fair, in October.

ITALIAN OPERA.—There was a splendid house last evening, to welcome Mme. GAZZANIGA in the tragic rôle of "Lucrezia Borgia"—a rôle in which her great dramatic powers, and her wonderful declamatory eloquence have full verge, and in which her personal appearance contributes to historical fidelity. Lucrezia was not a dark-eyed, swarthy-skinned Italian, as many imagine, but a blonde, like Mme. GAZZANIGA.

The performance was in every respect an excellent one, and as such deserves general commendation. Madame GAZZANIGA gave special force and meaning to passages that are not usually electrical, and throughout evoked new fires. Her acting was as usual, superbly tragic, yet never overwrought. Her singing, evoked new fires. Her acting was as usual, superbly tragic, yet never overwrought. Her singing, [illegible] for its many beauties, and censurable for but few defects.

On Wednesday "Norma" will be given.

LAURA KEENE'S THEATRE.—Mr. ALEXANDER DUMAS, fils, enjoys a reputation, and can, therefore, write a stupid piece with the certainty that it will be played, and have its little day of prosperity. If this were not so he would certainly have hazarded his prospects in life by submitting to the public a work so thoroughly insipid as the "Question D'Argent," lately produced and tolerated in Paris. From beginning to end it is nothing but a succession of commonplace talks, on commonplace subjects, by commonplace people—who, in fact, possess every thing common, except sense. There is as little merit in [illegible] of the piece as in the dialogue. It [illegible] than the money article in a [illegible] having the latter's brevity. It [illegible] interesting; and dull without [illegible] could have induced Miss LAURA KEENE to produce this piece we are at a loss to imagine. Perhaps it was with the charitable object of shortening it, which she has done; or of disgusting the public with French plays, which she can also do with a little devotion in this direction. Whatever the provocation, we are afraid Miss KEENE will find that much time and trouble have been wasted on a worthless task. The "Money Question," as presented last night, is a skipping, literal translation of "La Question d'Argent." A few hundred commonplaces are omitted, in order to make room for the many hundred that remain.

The abbreviation desirable in most respects, annihilates what little individuality the character originally possessed. It is only necessary, therefore, to say that there are four female and five male characters. During the progress of the piece the ladies produce a succession of temporary visitations, by appearing in new dresses, which fit charmingly and look bewitching. They inquire affectionately after each others health, take a seat for a few minutes near the footlights, and then retire to put on another dress. Of the gentlemen, two only need be referred to. One is, of course, that inevitable and dreadful creature whom the French thrust into all their heavy plays, and whose sad destiny seems to be to have all the plot of the piece, and all the secrets of the characters revealed to him in a painfully minute manner. All he is expected to do is to listen and be moral—as indeed he must be, to listen so long and so patiently. Mr. WEBSTERMEN played this part, in a somewhat hard and uncompromising way, and spoke more frequently like an auctioneer than a nobleman.

Mr. JORDAN played the other character (called Jean Giraud) and made much of it, clinging to it with the tenacity of an artist who knows that he may trust to himself for some good consequences. This Jean is the hero of the piece. He is the son of a gardener who has attained riches by speculation on the Bourse, but who does not repudiate his humble origin. Possessing millions he feels a natural craving for refined life and proposes marriage in a family of snobs. Being a good-natured fellow, he takes no notice of their malicious insolence and insults, but at their request takes their money and speculates with it, and brings them in large gains. They turn up their aristocratic noses, snap and sneer at his little errors of etiquette, and behave like greedy, ill-bred, impertinent boors. In the last act Jean has a large sum of money belonging to the snobs. He is suddenly absent. A rumor circulates that he has absconded. Although this is the first breath of suspicion that has been cast on his integrity, Snobs believe it, and defame the man they have used most lustily. Things are considered additionally aggravating from the fact that on the day previous he had made an appointment with them. The hour arrived and in spite of suspicions, Jean walks in, pays up his debts, and hands over a handsome profit, thus proving himself honest to the last. Snobs decline to take the profit; preach little sermons to Jean on the immorality of making money in his way, and order him from the house. The argument of the play is this—that the only wealth which is respectable is that which is inherited. A man who obtains it for himself by a fair exercise of shrewdness is to be despised. In place of a moral we have cant.

We have given more attention to this piece than it deserves. It was received coolly last night, in spite of excellent scenery and faultless costumes.

Concerts.

MADAME PATANIA, a very charming and estimable vocalist announces, a Farewell Concert at Nihlo's Saloon, to-night, and has provided one of the most attractive programmes of the season. Among the eminent artists who have already volunteered for the occasion are Madame GAZZANIGA, Messrs. BRIGNOLI, AMODIO, VILLANOVA, ALBITES and others. On this opportunity, the last previous to Madame PATANIA'S return to Europe, we trust the thousand friends of the benefiatars will rally to her support.

Mr. MILLET will give a Concert of an interesting character to-night at Dodworth's rooms, on which occasion he proposes to submit to the public a number of compositions which have not hitherto seen the light. They will be interpreted by Madame DE WILHORST, Signor ARNOLDI and other artists, some of them in English, others in less intelligible languages. The occasion is one of promise, and worthy of due attention.

MARINE MATTERS.

The steamship Vanderbilt was yesterday thrown open to the inspection of the public, and was thronged throughout the day by ladies and gentlemen. The Vanderbilt is 5,268 tons burden, is supplied with two independent beam engines of immense power, 2,500 horse, the cylinders being each 90 inches in diameter, and 13 feet stroke. She is to be commanded by Capt. D. L. WILCOX, and sails on the 5th of May for Southampton. It is said there are pending bets that she will beat the Persia's time. The prices of passage are $100 and $130, according to location of staterooms, and $50 for second cabin.

A new line of Atlantic steamers will commence running in May between New-York, London and Bremen, leaving each port semi-monthly. This line is formed by the European and American Steam Shipping Company of London and Southampton. The steamers are the Queen of the South, 2,221 tons; Indiana, 2,364 tons; Argo, 2,215 tons, and Jason, 2,667 tons. These ships will constitute a semi-monthly line. On the outward trip the steamer will remain one day at Southampton.

The wrecking schooners H. B. Fiddeman, Nyma, and Manna have arrived from the wreck of the Minerva, at Barnegat, bringing, in the aggregate, 193 casks of gin and 8 casks madder. The ship lies high and dry on the beach, so that they walk on board of her at low water. Most of the cargo will be saved, but the ship, in the expressive language of the wreckers, is "gone-in."

The schooner Ringgold has arrived from the wreck of the New-Hampshire, with chains, pig iron, &c., all to JOHNSON & HIGGINS, Wall-street, who are the contractors for both wrecks.

The Austrian Government, it is said, struck with the superiority of the plans adopted in this country in building balance and sectional docks for the use of the Navy during the ten years past, have adopted structures of the same model for its Navy, and has engaged JOHN S. GILBERT, Esq., of New-York, the inventor of the patent balance dock, to, build one in Trieste, and he is now occupied in that work.

There were in this port, on Saturday, 660 vessels, including 36 steamers, 164 ships, 101 barks, 38 brigs, and 265 schooners. Seamen are plentiful, and with marked dullness in the freighting business masters pay lower wages. The prevailing current rates, according to the Shipping List, is as follows:

	Wages per month.	Advance.
To Liverpool	$20	$25
To London	20	25
To Havre	20	20
To North of Europe	18	20
To Mediterranean and South Am.	16	20
To West Indies	18	18
To Pacific Ports and California	15	20
To China	20	10

A small steamer for the Canard line, to be built at the Scotia yard, Millwall, on the Clyde, to run between Liverpool and the United States. She will be 450 feet in length, which is 60 feet longer than the Persia, at present the largest and fastest. The Scotia will, it is expected, surpass in speed the Persia, the fastest steamer in the world.

The Department of Foreign Affairs of the Sublime Porte have issued a new and increased tariff of sanitary dues in the Ottoman Empire, under a regulation fixed by the Council of Health. The dues are to be paid for the visit of recognition, by every vessel entering an Ottoman port, and quarantine dues, which are determined by the state of health of the vessel. The rates are fixed as follows:

"For vessels of 50 tons and upwards, for each ton 8 piastres; from one Ottoman port to another per ton 3 piastres. Vessels under 50 tons, 1 piastre per ton, without regard to the port from which they arrive. Dues for the lazzareto, 5 piastres per day for each individual. Dues on goods disinfected in the lazzareto, viz.: Goods in bales, per 100 okes, 2½ piastres; hides, per 100 pieces, 5 piastres; small skins, not in bales, for each 100 skins, 2½ piastres. Vessels which, during the same voyage, shall enter successively in several Ottoman ports, will not pay the dues for the visit of but once only, and that in the first port which they may enter. Children under seven years of age, and the poor, are exempt from the dues levied in favor of the lazzareto. The following are exempt from all quarantine dues established in the preceding articles; 1. Ships of war. 2. Vessels driven in by stress of weather, provided, however, that they do no commercial business in the ports which they may thus enter. 3. Boats. All other dues heretofore established, and not mentioned in the present tariff, are suppressed."

By a dispatch addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Trade by Her Majesty's Consul at New-York, it appears that on the 6th of January last the wreck of the British bark Thetis, of London, BOYLE, master, from Honduras, was seen by Mr. SAMUEL A. WEBSTER, master of the Hamilton, of Salem, in lat. 31° 12' N., long. 62° 30' W., waterlogged; some of the crew were on a small part of the poop-deck, and others in the foretop. After four days of persevering effort in the most severe weather, on the morning of the 10th of January the Hamilton succeeded in making a line fast to the mizzenmast, by which means the survivors, sixteen in number—three having been drowned and four died from starvation—were transferred to the vessel, and provisions, clothing, &c., so far as means permitted, were supplied to them. On the 6th of February the crew of the Thetis were landed at New-York, and were received by her Britannic Majesty's Consul. In consequence of the representation of the above facts, the Lords of the Committee of Privy Council for Trade have been pleased to direct that a gold chronometer be presented to Captain WEBSTER for his energetic and unceasing efforts to save the shipwrecked crew from peril so imminent, and for his humane and generous treatment; to the owners of the Hamilton the sum of $179, for subsistence of the same; to the two mates the sum of £5 each; and to the crew the sum of £2 each, in consideration of the reduced allowance in their provisions."

Obituary.

The Livingston Republican announces the death of Mrs. CATHARINE DUNN, of Nunda, New-York, at the advanced age of 103 years. She formerly resided in Genesee, was a very healthy and strong woman, was never sick, and retained her mental faculties unimpaired to the last.

Mr. CHARLES BARTLETT, Principal of the Poughkeepsie Collegiate School, expired at his residence on Friday. He went to Poughkeepsie in 1836, and had charge of the Collegiate School ever since. He was about 60 years of age.

Major CHARLES YANCEY, of Buckingham, one of the most distinguished members of the Democratic Party in Virginia, died a few days since. He was for 35 years a member of the Legislature of Virginia, and was personally very popular.

NATHANIEL P. BANKS, Sr., father of the Speaker of the House, died at his residence in Waltham, on Thursday last, at the age of 64 years.

The Death of Hon. Joshua A. Spencer.

From the Albany Evening Journal.

We have already announced the painful news of Mr. SPENCER'S death. He was born at Great Barrington, Mass., in 1790. He was a descendant from the same family as the late Chief-Justice SPENCER and JOHN C. SPENCER, though but remotely connected with them. Early in life he came to Greenville, Greene County, in this State, where he taught a village school. Always industrious and persevering, he also learned two trades—that of clothier and that of a carpenter and joiner—and worked for some time at the latter. His brother, the late General SPENCER, of Canastota, was settled at Lenox, Madison County, as a lawyer, where he was joined by J. A. SPENCER about 1808. The latter soon after commenced the study of the law in his brother's office, and afterwards became his partner.

When the war of 1812 occurred, Mr. SPENCER was called upon, as a subordinate officer of the local militia, to repair to the Northern frontier. He returned at the close of the campaign with a severe illness, brought on by hardship and exposure.

At the bar he very early gained a high rank, and his services were sought for in all the most important cases occurring in the vicinity. In 1829 he removed to Utica, and formed a professional connection with the late WILLIAM H. MAYNARD, which was dissolved by the death of Mr. MAYNARD in 1832. In 1841 he was appointed Attorney of the United States for the Northern District. In 1845 he was elected to the Senate of this State. He was several times the candidate of his party for high stations, as member of Congress and Judge of Appeals. In 1848 he was mayor of the city. Notwithstanding his public duties, Mr. SPENCER never enjoyed even a temporary respite from the labors and duties of his profession, but continued actively employed until arrested by his last illness.

Mr. SPENCER has been twice married, first to Miss PHELPS, who died young, and who was the mother of his first two children, HAMILTON SPENCER, Esq., now of Illinois, and CLARISSA, the wife of Rev. Dr. KENNEDY, of Troy. His second wife was the daughter of Judge DEAN, of Westmoreland. By his second marriage he has had a numerous family, nearly all now settled in life, and who, with the widow, are left to deplore his loss.

Death of Hon. John J. McPherson.

From the Rochester Democrat of Saturday.

We are pained to hear of the sudden death of Hon. JOHN J. MCPHERSON, of Le Roy. The deceased represented his district at the late session of the Legislature, and was one of the most industrious and estimable members of the Assembly. We learn that Mr. MCPHERSON was taken with "brain fever" on Friday morning, and died at 10 o'clock in the evening. He was not considered in any danger until three or four hours before his death. This melancholy event will cause a void in the community where the deceased has so long resided, and where he had won the respect of the public, and will be heard with more than ordinary sorrow by his late associates in the Legislature. He was an upright, conscientious man—amiable in temper and manners, and highly esteemed by all who formed his acquaintance. His age was fifty years, although he appeared considerably younger.

The Explosion of the Delaware and Raritan Canal.

From the Newark Daily Advertiser of Monday.

The Explosion on the Delaware and Raritan on Saturday morning, a brief account of which was published on that day, was a novel disaster on New-Jersey waters, and more destructive than was at first reported. It occurred near Weston, at about 2½ A. M., about five miles from Somerville, on the propeller Fanny Garner. The boiler, which was new, and had only been in use four weeks, was carried forward some two hundred yards over a hill fifty feet high, through an orchard, and was nearly buried in the ground. Fragments of timber, iron, coal, barrels of sugar, and every description of produce was scattered from two to five hundred yards around. A part of her connecting pipe and a stick of wood were found in the woods over five hundred yards off. A dwelling-house on the canal, and within fifteen yards of the explosion, escaped with only broken windows, from the fact that the force of the explosion carried everything over it.

Some of the bodies were horribly mangled—one was found in the bottom of the canal, and the head in a meadow opposite. Another had his head entirely blown

The pilot, GEORGE R. MITCHELL, was thrown out of his pilot-house window, and ANDREW J. MCCARTY, steward, out of his berth on the forward deck.

This was the Fanny Garner's third trip, and while the boiler was calculated to carry 75 pounds of steam, only 60 pounds were on at the time of the explosion.

A dispatch from New Brunswick says: The following is a correct list of the killed and wounded on board of the steamer:

Killed—Coryell Bird, captain, leaves a wife and one child; Michael Nugent, aged 20; James McMann, leaves a wife; Patrick Comford, aged 30; John Thornbill, aged 22, leaves a wife.

Wounded—James P. Barnett, engineer, badly; William McEvoy, fireman, slightly; George Mitchell, pilot, slightly; Andrew J. McCarty, steward, slightly; Mr. Plant, passenger, severely injured.

The steamer lies on the bottom of the canal a perfect wreck. A part of her boiler, supposed to weigh 600 lbs., was thrown 585 feet on a hill, 40 feet above the canal, and over a tree 34 feet high. A part of the face of one of the killed was found on the opposite side of the Millstone River by a dog. A part of the boiler was found near it. The concussion was terrible, breaking windows and forcing open doors.

Captain BIRD was 33 years old, and intended going that morning to his sister's funeral at White House. BARRETT was thrown in the canal, and rescued by MCCARTY.

The Fanny Garner was worth about $9,000, boiler new, and was loaded with corn-meal, wire, and a variety of produce, for New-York and intermediate stations. Her cargo was valued at about $5,000.

The boat sunk ten minutes after the explosion. The canal and fields on each side are fairly strewn with pieces of timber, splinters, &c. The hull is entirely cut to pieces, so as to prove a total loss.

No blame is attached to the engineer. The Jury are viewing the bodies. A great deal of excitement is felt in the neighborhood in relation to this most horrible accident and the ground is crowded with spectators. Much sympathy is felt for the family of the unfortunate captain, especially in the peculiar circumstances of the case.

[TELEGRAPHIC.]

SOMERVILLE, Monday, April 27.

The water in the level in which the wreck of the Fanny Garner lies was drawn off yesterday, when the boat was found to be a total loss, being shattered to her lowest timbers. The bag stuff under deck was taken out, in a damaged condition. The Coroner's inquest has adjourned until Thursday, in order to obtain further evidence as to the cause of the disaster. The bodies were all recovered, and given over to their friends for burial.

LONG ISLAND.

Christian Association.

The Young Men's Christian Association is disposed to be practical in its influence. It has already established a base-ball club, and is talking seriously of getting up a gymnasium. So long, however, as they are enabled to get a deduction of $2 a ticket to the existing gymnasium, it is doubtful if they do anything about one of their own. It is a part of their plan to provide good concerts for their members and their members' friends. The first of the series is given to-night at Mr. Beecher's Church.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—JOHN WOLFE, a peddler, fell under a car at the corner of Graud and First streets, Eastern District, of Brooklyn, yesterday, by which he had his head badly injured, but it is thought that he may recover.

☞ A man named HENRY HORLOR, aged 33 years, left his home in Williamsburg, the other day, rather suddenly and mysteriously. He left behind a note addressed to his wife, saying he was going to commit suicide. His friends are anxious to ascertain whether he has or not.

☞ The Presbytery of Long Island met at Bridge Hampton, on the 14th inst. Rev. JAMES S. EVANS was chosen Moderator, and Rev. EZRA F. MUNDY, Clerk. Rev. ENWARD HOPPER, and ruling elder HENRY P. NEW-JERSEY.

Escape from Jail.

MICHAEL WELSH and GEORGE CARL, two of the five prisoners arrested some time since on the charge of committing a burglary upon the warehouses at the Cunard docks, in Jersey City, and stealing a large quantity of silks found in their possession in an open boat near Keyport, made their escape from the Hudson County Jail on Saturday night last, by assaulting Mr. S. M. LATTE, the keeper and his deputy, as they entered the jail to lock up the prisoners for the night, who had been let out of their cells to wash and shave themselves as usual on Saturday night. They have not been retaken. The keeper believes that there was a conspiracy formed among the prisoners for a general stampede, even at the sacrifice of his life if necessary. It was thwarted, however, by his presence of mind in kicking the door shut while lying upon the floor, so that it could only be opened from the outside.

AN IMPORTANT CONTRACT CONSUMMATED.—Yesterday the Postmaster-General entered into a contract with DAVID HOADLEY, Esq., President of the Panama Railroad Company, for the transportation of the California mails over the Isthmus until the termination of the existing California mail steamers' contracts—some two years hence. The compensation the Department is to pay is $100,000 per annum. Up to the 30th ult. it paid for the service at the rate of 22 cents per pound, the maximum the law allows. At that rate the compensation of the Railroad Company for the last quarter was about $87,000. As paid for up to that time the cost of the mails across the Isthmus was near $159,000 per annum and was rapidly increasing. The new contract, while it involves a handsome retrenchment of the Department's expenses, is a liberal and satisfactory one so far as the interests of the Company are concerned.—Washington Star.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

FINE ARTS.

READY-MADE CLOTHING, &c.

It has been aptly remarked by critics that good taste, being intuitive, gems of art were to be seen on the walls of even unpretending mansions, and that the best and purest taste was not always to be looked for in marble halls.

Apply the inference in the adornment of the outward man, and where, for a series of years, has been realized the discernment that has given eclat to the Ready-made Clothing business, and by productions the most recherché in style averted a subjection to the old regimen in getting suited, let the community answer and be assured that competition but prompts us to more strenuous endeavors in a determination to retain the supremacy heretofore awarded our clothing. THE
BY ALLOPATHY, HOMŒOPATHY, WATER-CURE
AND
PRACTICALLY REVIEWED
BY
ROBERT HUNTER, M. D.,

Such, then, are the remedial means laid down in the books. The regular practice consists in the employment of one or other of these remedies, or in the combination of several. But this is only true in theory. In practice, few medical men place any reliance in them. They use first one medicine, then another, merely for form's sake, and to satisfy the patient that they are doing everything for him that can be done. The physician is not disappointed at failure, for he knows when he prescribes this or that course that it has always failed in similar cases. We do not hesitate to say that no honest physician will pretend that by such means he can effect the cure of consumptive disease. It is only the patient who deludes himself into the belief that he is being cured when he is taking this tonic or that alterative under the advice of his physician.

We have said that the remedies pointed out are only theoretical remedies. Each author in writing a book, thinks it necessary to tell us of all the plans of treatment old and new which have been recommended, but he does not indorse their use as curative. One writer favors one theory and class of remedies, and another the opposite. There are in use in the schools a number of works on this subject which are regarded as text books; if we compare the description of the disease given in each, we shall find a great deal of uniformity. But on the subject of treatment all is confusion. There is not a remedy in use which we cannot find authors of equal reliance in the profession to extravagantly praise on the one hand as curative, and as loudly condemn on the other as injurious. The consequence is that in their practice physicians first prescribe one course and then the opposite. When all fails, and the patient becomes importunate for relief, that convenient thing "Change of Climate" always comes to the Doctor's relief—the patient is ordered South, or abroad; lingers out a few miserable months, and then returns home to die; when both physician and friends congratulate themselves that at least "everything was done that could have been done" for his relief. The practice of many physicians is still more simple; they know they cannot cure the disease, and therefore only strive to relieve the patient. Yesterday we saw a prescription given to a patient in the second stage of Consumption by a leading physician of this City. There was no mistake in the disease, for the Doctor told him he had tubercles, and that it was necessary he should take the medicine faithfully, and be very careful or he could not answer for his recovery. Now how do you suppose he was striving to effect the removal of the tubercles? By the two following prescriptions, which the poor patient had been zealously taking for nearly three months. Here they are:

"No. 1. Liq. Morph. Sulph. (Magendie,) ʒj.
Capt. ℞t. x. om. nocte h. s."

"No. 2. Acid. Sulph. Arom.
Tr. Opii Camph. a. a. ʒj. ɱ.
Capt. gtt. XXV. ter in die."

These prescriptions look very respectable in their Latin garb, but let us reduce them into plain English. No. 1 is a simple solution of "Morphine," of which the patient is directed to take ten drops every night on retiring to bed. Every body, we presume, knows what Morphine is. It is a preparation of opium, and is given

J. R. STAFFORD'S OLIVE TAR—WE COPY the following from the editorial columns of the Boston Daily Ledger, of Feb. 19, 1857. Mr. Barnard, the gentleman alluded to, is a prominent citizen of Boston:
J. R. STAFFORD'S OLIVE TAR.—In the multitude of curatives that are almost daily offered to the public, it is very difficult to make a selection of any one that will prove valuable for all the purposes for which it is recommended. But in our opinion one specific has been discovered for complaints of the Throat and Lungs that seems to be of inestimable worth. It is J. R. STAFFORD'S OLIVE TAR. From a pamphlet setting forth its many claims on these inflicted with the diseases above named, we learn that this Remedy is not to be taken internally, after the ordinary methods, but is used by INHALATION and APPLICATION. In this subtle way it performs its soothing and healing offices on the THROAT, LUNGS, NERVES, MUSCLES, JOINTS, and SKIN. OLIVE TAR, it is claimed, contains an electro-magnetic power, which is capable of restoring to the system its lost VITALITY; and this is performed alike by the inhalation of its odor, and the outward application of its fluid. Several of our Physicians often employ it. Its SPECIAL INHALATION, and its curative properties they well understand. The following resolution, offered by Alderman [illegible] was adopted:

Resolved, That the Counsel to the Corporation be and [illegible] is requested to give to this Board his opinion on the ordinance passed by the Board of Councilmen, (April 24,) in relation to reorganizing the departments of the City Government—whether the passage of the same will not be a [illegible] of the constitutionality of the new Charter as passed by the Legislature.

The report of the Committee on Ordinances in favor of permitting the Market Car Company to lay down a switch adjoining the Hudson River Railroad track in West-street, was adopted.

The report of the special Committee who proceeded to Albany on the subject of the new Charter, laid on the table at the last meeting, was called up for adoption by Alderman MORRIGHAM.

Alderman TUCKER strenuously opposed its adoption, contending that the report was not worthy of the name—that there was no reason in the document [illegible] and hoping that the Board would not disgrace itself [illegible] by adopting it.

The yeas and nays were called, and the report was adopted by 14 to 6. Yeas—Wilson, Healy, Hoffmire, Adams, Banta, Clancy, Steers, Jackson, McConnell, Monaghan, Fullmer, Coulter, McSpedon and McConkey. Nays—Tucker, Griffiths, Blunt, Valentine, Greene and Drake.

The Report of the Special Committee on Reliaving Broadway was presented by Alderman WILSON. It proposes the same route as proposed by him in his former report, and asks a reference to the Board of Councilmen. It was laid on the table.

The Board concurred with the Board of Councilmen in appropriating $5,000 with which to celebrate the Fourth of July. Alderman TUCKER moved to amend by appropriating $3,500. The amendment was lost.

The resolutions of the Board of Councilmen instructing the Counsel to the Corporation to test the constitutionality of the recent acts passed by the Legislature, and appropriating $5,000 to employ additional counsel, was read.

Alderman MCSPEDON offered an amendment that the sum be increased to $1,000.

Alderman TUCKER was of opinion that the fight was a political one, and the expenses should not be paid from the City Treasury. He moved to strike out the $1000.

Alderman BLUNT expressed like views.

The amendment of Alderman TUCKER was put and lost, and the resolutions, as amended by Alderman McSpedon, were adopted by a vote of 14 to 6.

The Committee of Repairs and Supplies, to whom the subject of steam fire-engines was referred, reported in favor of referring the matter to the consideration of Chief Engineer Howard.

The Board adjourned to Tuesday.

Board of Councilmen.

The Board of Councilmen met on Monday afternoon, the President, J. N. PHILLIPS, Esq., in the Chair.

A remonstrance against opening Allen-street was referred to the Committee on Streets.

EXAMINATION OF THE CROTON AQUEDUCT DEPARTMENT.

The Special Committee on reorganizing the Bureaux of the City Government under the new charter, presented an ordinance to reorganize the Croton Aqueduct Department, which constituted the special order for the evening. After a few amendments and much debate, it was adopted, 38 to 11. It provides substantially as follows:

ARTICLE 1 reinvests the Croton Aquednct Department with the powers and duties that it now has; and creates one bureau of Water Rents and another of Pipes, Sewers and Pavements.

ART. 4 makes the chief officers of the Board a President, Engineer and Assistant Commissioner, to hold office 5 years each. Its 5th section provides that "all contracts for materials or work for the Croton Aqueduct, or for the construction, repair or cleaning of sewers and underground drains, shall be made by the Croton Aqueduct Board." Section 6 makes all money due on such accounts payable by the Comptroller's warrant upon the requisition of Department. Constructing sewers, laying down water pipes, &c., can only be done with the authority of the Common Council. All sewers, drains and pavements are put under charge of the Board, who are to prescribe the mode of piercing sewers, drains, &c., and dictate their form, size and material. They may grant permission to persons to construct such at their own expense, under certain restrictions. To open into a sewer or drain without their permission, is an offence for which the fine is $50. They are to license parties, upon proper bonds, who only shall grant permits to connect with sewers and drains. The 18th section provides that there shall be a clerk to the Board with a salary of $1,500.

ART. 8. Puts the Bureau of Water Rents under a "Water Register who is to give bonds in $15,000 and to have a salary of $2,000. He is to report every week (Thursday) to the Comptroller all moneys received and payments and the parties concerned in such transactions. It makes a Deputy Register with a salary of $1,500, and five clerks at a salary of $1,200 each. Of the Bureau of Pipes, Sewers and Pavements, the Water Purveyor is to be the head under $2,000 bonds and on a $2,000 salary. He is to estimate all repairs &c., keep account of work done and report to the Board,—to examine the drains &c., frequently and keep the Board posted. He is to take charge of all Ordinances as to paving, repairing streets and the like. He is to employ (with the Board's consent) an Inspector of Pavements at $2 a day. He is to have a Deputy Purveyor to attend all fires, &c., or a salary of $1,500. His functions do not regard the street incumbrances, however.

Councilman WARNER said that, it being a paper involving expenditure of money, forty votes were requisite.

The President asked by what rule?

Councilman WARNER quoted Rule 12.

A member said that the number included the negative and affirmative vote inclusively.

The President said the paper had never been referred to a Committee of the Whole.

Some discrepancy of opinion existed between the member and the President, who ultimately ruled the objection as not well taken.

It was moved that the resolution offered by Councilman SULTZER be adopted as to payment for paving Chatham street. Ultimately it was referred to the Committee on Streets.

Two vetoes were received from the Mayor: one, condemning the expense of the construction of maps for street improvements, as follows:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, NEW-YORK, April 27, 1857.

To the Honorable the Board of Councilmen:

GENTLEMEN: I return, without approval, the resolution empowering the Street Commissioner to employ a City Surveyor to make a map of the proposed avenue or street west of Broadway, and also lithographic maps thereof, and to procure a map for the widening of Chatham street, from Chatham-square to Frankfort-street, for the use of the Committee on Streets of the Board of Councilmen. My objections to these propositions are, that it is unusual to expend so large a sum as will be required for these objects by the way suggested, and that it is unnecessary to expend money merely for the purpose of enabling Committees of the Common Council to make reports upon subjects referred to them. Again, there is no sum specified to which the expenditure shall be limited; and, judging from other bills for similar work, the amount will be several thousand dollars. If a City Surveyor is to be employed, and an indefinite number of lithographic maps are to be prepared of every City improvement now projected, we shall create a new source of expenditure which, even without abuse, will become an important element in the burden of taxation.

FERNANDO WOOD, Mayor.

The other was condemnatory of the proposition to [illegible] $2,000 for the publication of a work on music [illegible] be issued, as follows:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, NEW-YORK, April 27, 1857.

To the Honorable the Board of Councilmen:

GENTLEMEN: I return, without approval, the resolution [illegible] directing the Comptroller to draw his warrant in favor of [illegible] Committee on Music of the New-York Philharmonic Society for two thousand dollars, [illegible] for the purpose of the publication of a [illegible] work for the use of the blind throughout the United States.

However beneficial and praiseworthy the object of those who have applied for and succeeded in procuring the passage of this proposition, it is in my judgment, unnecessary, and the publishing a work of this kind may lead to a serious tax upon the City. The Institution of the Blind is one of our most useful and charitable enterprises, and is entitled to, as it receives, the liberal support of the great body of the people, as well as of the Corporation, but whether the Common Council, acting as trustees of the public interests, have a right to vote money for the object comprehended by this resolution, is a question of another and more important character. I doubt our authority to do so, upon either legal or equitable grounds. In my judgment we have no such authority, and I therefore return the resolution without approval. FERNANDO WOOD.

The report of the Committee on Salaries and Officers, in favor of increasing the salary of the Mayor to $5,000, and that of the City Inspector to the same amount, was then passed to a third reading. Several members asked leave to explain their votes, and the bill was affirmed by 35 voting in its favor, while 12 voted in the negative.

The Board then adjourned to Tuesday.

Board of Supervisors.

The Supervisors met last evening, Supervisor TUCKER in the Chair.

An opinion was received from the Counsel to the Corporation deciding that the bill of James Taylor for furnishing refreshments to the Board for County Canvassers, for the year 1856, was illegal, on the ground that the specific sum of $2 per day is appropriated by a section of revised statutes for the services and expenses of each member in attending the meetings of the Board. The opinion was ordered to be printed. A resolution was adopted, after a long debate, 17 to 2, equalizing the salaries of the Ward Assessors to $700 a year. Last year their pay was from $450 to $500.

The Board then adjourned.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT—April 27.

Before Judge Nelson.

JURISDICTION OF THE U. S. CIRCUIT COURT IN SUITS AGAINST CONSULS—NE EXEAT NOT ALLOWED WHERE THE CLAIM IS FOR UNLIQUIDATED DAMAGES.

John Graham vs. Edward Stucken and others.—NELSON, C. J.—A bill has been filed by the complainant in this case, to set aside bills of sale of two steam vessels—the Ocean Bird and the St Lawrence—and also of one-third of the United States, which are claimed to be of the aggregate value of about $400,000, and that the vessels be restored to the complainant, or in lieu thereof, that their value be paid to him by Meyer Stucken, to whom the bills of sale were executed. The complainant charges that the transactions arose out of a loan of money upon usurious interest; that the loan was $100,000 for four months; that the sum of $126,000 was agreed to be paid for the same, and that the vessels were pledged as collateral security for the payment, and the form of bills of sale adopted for the purpose of covering the usurious loan. The defendant, Stucken, insists that although there was an application by complainant for a loan of money upon the ships, it was refused, and that the transaction resulted in a purchase of them by his firm for $105,000, without any condition or qualification, and that the purchase money has been paid; that the vessels have since been sold at Cuba for $191,376 85, and are ont of his possession and ont of the jurisdiction of the Court, and that he has been obliged to make large advances, over and above the $105,000, to third persons, to remove liens upon the vessels existing at the time of the purchase. Meyerd, one of the purchasers, is abroad, out of the jurisdiction of the Court, and cannot, therefore, be made a party. The bill filed is against Stucken alone, except parties who have no direct interest in the controversy. There has been a demurrer to the bill, admitting the facts stated, but presenting certain legal objections to the right of complainant to the relief claimed. A motion is now made by the complainant for a writ of ne exeat against Stucken, founded upon the allegation, supported by affidavit, that he is about to break up his residence in this City, and remove from the country. The facts above set up as a defence to the bill are derived from the papers opposing this motion. These papers admit that the defendant is about to embark for Europe; but it is insisted that it is only for a temporary residence, and that it is not designed to close his business establishment in the City. He does not state, however, when he expects to return, and admits that he has offered his house and furniture for sale, with the intention of making other arrangements for a residence in the City. The papers also disclose that the defendant is Consul-General in the United States for the Kingdom of Hanover, and also Consul for the Duke of Saxe Weimar, for the State of New-York. These are substantially the facts set forth in opposition to the motion; and the first question presented is, whether or not the Court has jurisdiction of the case; for if not, then of course no order for the writ sought to be obtained can be granted. The question has not been decided by any judicial authority, and was, it seems, purposely waived by the Supreme Court in the case of the United States vs. Ortega, (11 Wheat. 467 d.) See also note to that case, 460 d., 475; 1 Kent Com., 315; Curtis Com. sec. 108.) But notwithstanding this apparent doubt, it is certain that the framers of the judiciary act of 1789 understood the Constitution as admitting jurisdiction over foreign consuls to be vested in federal Courts other than the Supreme Court. The argument against the jurisdiction of this Court is, that the Constitution has vested exclusive jurisdiction in the case of the Supreme Court of the United States, and that this suit should have been commenced in that Court. The last clause of section 2 of article 3 of the Constitution declares, that "In all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, and those in which a State shall be a party, the Supreme Court shall have original jurisdiction." Congress, in distributing and regulating this grant of jurisdiction, provided in section 13 of the Judiciary act that the Supreme Court should have exclusive jurisdiction in all cases against embassadors, &c., and original, but not exclusive jurisdiction in cases "in which a consul or vice-consul shall be a party"—thus clearly rejecting the idea that the grant in the Constitution in respect to consuls was exclusively in the Supreme Court. Again, the grant of original jurisdiction to the Supreme Court is the same in the cases (mentioned in the previous clause of the Constitution) "in which a State shall be a party," as in the case of a consul. Those cases are: 1. Controversies between two or more States; 2. Between a State and citizens of another State; 3. Between a State and foreign States; and 4. Between a State and citizens or subjects of a foreign State—that is, aliens. Now, if the grant of original jurisdiction be exclusive in the Supreme Court in the case of a consul, it is equally exclusive in the four cases above enumerated; for the grant is in the same clause and on the same terms. And yet, in the 13th section of the Judiciary act already referred to, it is provided that the Supreme Court shall have exclusive jurisdiction, &c., where a State is a party, &c., except between a State and citizens of other States, or aliens, in which latter case it shall have original, but not exclusive jurisdiction. According to the argument, the whole of this exception would be unconstitutional, as the cases mentioned should have been vested exclusively in the Supreme Court. And, again, what is still more explicit in respect to the practical construction of the framers of the Judiciary act, many of whom were eminent members of the Convention that formed the Constitution, the ninth section provides that the District Court of the United States shall have jurisdiction, exclusive of the courts of the States, of all suits against Consuls or Vice-Consuls, &c. In the face of all this legislative interpretation by the fathers of the constitution, and acquiescence therein since 1789, I cannot say that the jurisdiction in this case is exclusively in the Supreme Court, bnt I am satisfied that it may be conferred upon the inferior tribunals of the Federal judiciary. Being pressed for time, I have stated simply the grounds of this conclusion, without giving more at large the reasons in support of it. It has been also objected that, admitting the jurisdiction is not exclusive in the Supreme Court, still that it has not been vested in the Circuit Courts of the United States. The 11th section of the Judiciary act provides that the Circuit Courts shall have original cognizance, concurrent with the State Courts, of suits between a citizen of the State where the suit is brought and a citizen of another State. The case before us falls directly within this provision. It is said, however, that the jurisdiction cannot be concurrent with the State Court, as that Court has no jurisdiction of the case, it having been excluded by force of the 9th section, already referred to. But the answer to the suggestion is that the phraseology is designed simply to save the jurisdiction of the State Court where it exists. It has been said, also, if the jurisdiction of the case is not in the Supreme Court, and may be vested in inferior Courts, it has been expressly vested in the District Court, which is true. But there is nothing in the provision conferring it upon that Court that excludes the jurisdiction of the Circuit Court. I am satisfied, therefore, that this Court has jurisdiction to hear and decide this motion, and also the case out of which it has arisen.

The next ground taken in resisting the motion is that the nature of the demand in suit is not one in which, according to the usage and practice of the Court, a writ of the kind in question will be granted. The demand must be an equitable debt or pecuniary claim, and certain, or capable of being reduced to certainty. A general unliquidated demand, or one in the nature of a claim for damages, which cannot be regarded as a debt until the decree, will not lay a foundation for the writ. In the case of Flack vs. Holm, (1 Jac. & W., 464) where goods had been consigned for sale, and the bill, among other things, claimed a recovery for fraudulently delaying the sale of the goods, whereby a loss accrued, and on which a motion for a ne exeat was made, and bail marked at £3,000, Lord Eldon observed: "My difficulty is, whether that is not too large a sum. The writ only goes where the debt is sworn to; if damages only are to be recovered, that will not do. You cannot have it for any loss which may have occurred by keeping the goods out of the market." Again, he remarked: "The writ is only applied to that which is really a debt, and not to that which may become a debt, when a recovery in damages has ascertained what is due." Now, within this principle, I am of opinion, that the present case is one in which it would not be proper to grant the writ. I can see no debt or pecuniary demand set up against the defendant. The foundations of the bills is that he has got possession of the ships under a contract void on the ground of usury, and that, under the law of New-York, which, I admit, must govern, the complainant is entitled to set this contract aside, and to have a return of the property, or in lieu thereof, damages to the extent of its value. The complainant claims further an account of the earnings of the vessels; but this is simply a mode of arriving at the damages sustained from the wrongful possession and detention of them. The claim is, in substance, that the defendant is a wrong doer in taking the property and converting it to his own use. There is no debt or duty set forth in the bill but that which exists in every case of a wrongful conversion of another man's property. This is not a debt, or duty, or pecuniary demend, within the meaning of the rule. It must be one arising upon contract, express or implied, between the parties, and which I think essential to lay a foundation for the proceeding. I agree that a case is made out which would justify this somewhat extreme remedy, if the nature of the demand in controversy was such as warranted its application. But as, in my judgment, it is not, the motion must be denied.

For complainant, Mr. O'Conor and Mr. Cutting; for defendants, Mr. Brady, Judge Dean and M. Lene.

Before Hon. Justice Roosevelt.

SECOND INJUNCTION—HOW SHALL IT BE HEARD?

The People ex rel. Fernando Wood vs. Simeon Draper et al.—It will be remembered that, on Saturday, Judge ROOSEVELT granted an injunction quo warrante in this case, amended from the previous case argued before Mr. Justice DAVIES, by including the "people" as plaintiffs. Yesterday, Mr. Field, for the Commissioners, made an application for an order to show cause, the same afternoon at 4 o'clock, why this injunction should not be dissolved. His Honor stated that he had pressing engagements, which would prevent his hearing the case until Wednesday. Mr. Field objected to delaying the hearing, on account of its being heard at the first General Term. He declined acceding to the suggestion of his Honor, that it be heard first at the General Term. He suggested if his Honor had not time to attend to the case, that it be heard by Judge Harris, who was present.

Mr. O'Conor thought that Mr. Field might be willing to have the case heard by a Judge imported for the purpose, but he (Mr. O'Conor) did not fancy it. His Honor thought it was getting to be too much of a custom to bring in Judges from other districts.

There was considerable informal cross talk between all parties, the upshot of which was that His Honor suggested that the case heard by a special term of five Judges.

Mr. O'Conor thought that a good suggestion, and would accede to it. Mr. Field thought that it might accelerate the hearing of the case, and was disposed to think favorably of it. He, however, would think the matter over, and to-morrow (this) morning would let the opposite counsel know his decision, and try to settle the order so that the case could be argued on Thursday morning.

Before Hon. Justice Clerke.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Judge Daly.

THE CASE OF CORONER CONNERY.

The investigation into the official conduct of Coroner Connery was continued yesterday before Judge DALY. We have a full report of all the testimony taken, but the details have no public interest or importance.

Mary Donohue, the chambermaid, was the first witness examined, and testified that she did not hear the Coroner, upon her examination at the Burdell inquest, remark that she "carried her tail behind her," and that, if she had heard it, she should have considered it decidedly a compliment. The Coroner treated her in every respect like a gentleman, and she saw nothing rude or offensive in his conduct.

John W. Williams, the policeman who was present at the examination which was made of the person of Mrs. Cunningham, described all the details of the process—the position of the several parties, &c., &c. He did not hear Mrs. Cunningham request Dr. Woodward not to expose her.

Dr. Woodward was recalled and testified again to the promptness with which Mrs. Cunningham assented to the examination; denied that she used at any time, the expression, "Don't expose me so," and said that he conducted the examination with the utmost regard to her sense of delicacy.

James Francis Mahon, a physician, testified that he heard the Coroner direct Dr. Woodward to make the personal examination. Dr. Woodward stopped the Coroner and said: "I understand there is to be an examination of the bodies of Mr. Eckel, Mr. Snodgrass and Mrs. Cunningham." The Coroner said: "Yes—take them and examine their necks, shoulders and arms, and see if there be any marks of violence upon their persons.

Catharine Dennison was recalled and subjected to a very long cross-examination, for the purpose of impeaching or discrediting her former testimony. She described, in reply to questions, every detail of the manner in which the examination was conducted—the parts of Mrs. C.'s person that were exposed, &c.—but the evidence on these points was of no public interest, and not of a proper character for publication.

It was arranged that affidavits should be received from the Coroner's Jury, of their belief relative to the conduct of the Burdell Investigation.

The case was then adjourned until Saturday at 12 o'clock.

The company on the stage comprised a number of prominent members of the theatrical profession and distinguished citizens. Prominent among the latter were [illegible] and SAMUEL B. RUGGLES. Among the ladies were Miss LAURA KEENE; among the managers, Mr. [illegible] and Mr. [illegible]; among the actors, Mr. [illegible], and others. A number of the [illegible] were also present.

[illegible], in introducing the speaker, said: LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: The hour has arrived for the delivery of the Address which we have all assembled to hear, and it is a pleasant duty devolved upon me, as President of the American Dramatic Fund Association, in its name and in its behalf to introduce to you the distinguished orator of the occasion—Dr. BELLOWS.

DR. BELLOWS then advanced and spoke as follows; the address occupying two hours and a half in delivery:

As I am about to ask the attention of a promiscuous audience to a long discourse, I must at the outset guard you from disappointment, by stating distinctly the subject and nature of my address. It is the argument of a serious man, whose aim is the public good, with serious people, on the claims of public amusement in general, and the theatre in particular; and this argument is conducted as in the presence of the dramatic profession, and in their behalf. My purpose would be greatly misunderstood, if I were supposed to be reasoning with society in general; or, with men and women of the world. It is the sober and religious portion of the community I address. It is their opinions and prejudices I controvert. I shall venture to speak of the religious community, as a class, not intending to claim or admit, that all the piety and scrupulosity of society is in its keeping; not pretending that all members of it share its characteristic opinions and prejudices; but with the assumption that it has characteristic opinions in regard to amusements and the theatre, which need investigation.

In this argument with the religious class, I propose to weave a criticism of the stage, and such hints to the dramatic profession, as my poor wisdom can suggest. Having, then, the double object to accomplish, of addressing serious people in the presence of actors, and actors in the presence of serious people, I shall doubtless sometimes say what is pertinent only to one of these classes, without always intimating which it is. I must beg the audience to keep the difficulty of my task in mind, while I throw myself on their discrimination, indulgence, and patience.

I shall be a little dull at the start, but boldly promise to grow more interesting as I proceed. [Laughter and applause.]

I begin, then, with asserting that there is nothing essentially wrong in the stage, or in the players' vocation; nothing which should necessarily place the theatre under the ban of the church, or the dramatic profession aside from other honest callings; or which demands their suppression as radically injurious and unchristian.

In saying thus much, I say what thousands of serious and thoughtful Christians, both teachers and disciples, in short what the class I particularly address, will utterly repudiate. The stage with them is the most essentially wrong of all institutions, because it is the most attractive, dazzling, and complete of public amusements; and all public amusements—not to say amusements in general—fall under their sincere and earnest suspicion and Christian jealousy: how much then, the theatre?

NATURE AND NECESSITY OF AMUSEMENT.

It is, then, with the defence of amusement as a principle, that the defence of the stage must begin. If the class I am arguing with is to be reached. amusement be wrong in principle; if to forget, care, duty, death, the future, for any hour of the day, be dangerous—if not to be uninterruptedly engaged in contemplating and advancing the moral and serious interests of life, is culpable and offensive to Christianity—if fun, frolic, laughter, jest, humor, wit, the excitement of social intercourse and the indulgence of the lighter and gayer tastes of human nature, have no legitimate times and places, and no important and indispensable offices, then, of course, it is useless to talk of defending the most amusing of all amusements. But, I now stand here to maintain and to show that amusement is not only a privilege but a duty, indispensable to health of body and mind, and essential even to the best development of religion itself. For what is it? It is the play of our nature, when temporarily released from toil and anxiety. It is very essence is, absence of painful effort and serious thought, absorption in the present, to the forgetfulness of the past and the future. Nothing amuses which does not make a man forget himself, by calling into controlling activity pleasurable thoughts and emotions. Now life is essentially toiling and anxious.

It is made so by outward circumstances and inward constitution. It is our glory that we are made to work and to think anxiously and soberly. The burden which nature puts upon our shoulders in calling us into a world that does not spontaneously produce its fruits and into a crowded and competitory society, [illegible] presses into action the energies and faculties of body and soul as nothing else could. But what a burden, compared with that which God has [illegible] us in our rational and moral nature, in our [illegible] knowledge, love of power, sense of right, [illegible] death, hope of heaven? The vast stimulus which our physical and moral wants, our bodily and mental passions, give to our nature, makes life, to most men, toilful, anxious, serious and sad. And this is what life must be and ought to be. This is what Christianity labors to make it. For, by clearing up the duties and obligations of humanity, placing new and graver hopes and fears before it, calling man to a higher and more difficult aim, it multiplies the labor, the anxiety, the seriousness and sadness of life. We must think more, feel more deeply, work harder, in view of his new obligation to God and to men. And in this earnest work, and deep emotion, and wider sympathy, he finds the real dignity and glory of his being. He who does not work, think, feel, is a degraded, lost, and miserable soul. The mass, the rule and order of whose life is not work, anxiety, seriousness, is a poor creature, on his way to nonentity, or, worse, to moral ruin and future misery.

Now, the true question is, how shall humanity do most work, support most anxiety, have the most genuine seriousness? Experience has taught us that neither body nor mind, can stand an unbroken strain, and we are learning by degress that the conscience, will and aspirations require sleep and rest, as much as intellect and muscle. The Creator has accordingly endowed us with various faculties, tastes and sensibilities, which have a spontaneous activity, whose object seems to be chiefly to delight and amuse. Independently of their more serious uses, he has indeed attached a pleasure to the exercise of all our faculties; but some of them seem to have for their manifest and pleasure to ourselves or others. Laughter the irresistible propensity of youth, is, we know physiologically, eminently conducive to health of body, which it exercises in a potent and universal manner; and, unquestionably, humor, which is the inner side of laughter, is equally important to health of mind. Our sense of the beautiful, the ridiculous, the witty; our taste for music, flowers, spectacle, our enjoyment of food, society, motion; our love of sport, of the field, of games; all these inexhaustible tastes evidently have a mission, nay, several offices: first and chiefly, perhaps, to confer a positive and unspeakable [illegible] character, a substantial benediction of Providence, which it would be impiety not to recognise and gratefully own; but, secondly, to qualify, correct and improve the operation and product of the more solid and utilitarian functions of humanity; but, thirdly, to rest, cheer and invigorate mind and heart, that we may more abundantly and successfully pursue the toil, and bear the anxieties of life, and achieve its moral and spiritual ends. Thus to work best, man must play a due portion of the time; to bear the heaviest burdens, he must have his heart lightened now and then; to think most profoundly, he must not think too steadily. When the world, as may pile of prudence, or wisdom, or conscience, has overlooked these principles, religion and morality have suffered. In former times, monasteries and nunneries, caves and pillars, held the pure fanatics and ultraists, the idiots and hypocrites, whom [illegible] nature sent there. Now insane asylums and hospitals shelter the victims furnished for their cells, by the heedless sobriety and mad earnestness of business, which knows no pleasure; or of study, which allows no cessation; or of conscience and piety which frown on amusement; while the morbid morality, the thin wisdom, the jaundiced affections, the wretched dyspepsia, the wreck and defeat of body and soul, which a community, deficient in out-door sports, genial society or legitimate gaiety, exhibits to the thoughtful eye, is hardly less saddening than the hospital or madhouse. [Vehement applause.]

Amusement, then, is not merely defensible. The want of it is a calamity, and an injury to the sober and solid interests of society. None are more truly interested—did they know their own duty and policy—in seeing the community properly amused, than the organized friends of morality and piety. They ought to know that Nature avenges herself sooner or later—and better sooner than later—for the violation of the laws of physical and moral health; and that the suppression of the sportive, careless and pleasure-craving propensities or aptitudes of our nature, involves an inevitable derangement and sure decay of the higher organs and faculties. Instead, therefore, of interfering with business, duty, sobriety, piety—with scholarship, economy, virtue, and reverence—amusement, viewed merely as a principle, advances and supports them all. The intellect that plays a part of every day, works more powerfully and to better results, for the rest of the time; the heart that is gay for an hour, is more serious for the other hours of the day; the conscience that reposes for a space is more active when it wakes; the will that rests, is more vigorous than the will that is always strained.

You see, then, that I put amusement among the necessaries and not the luxuries of life. Like sugar, which was long thought a mere palate-pleaser, but which now turns out to be an indispensable constituent of the blood, and one of the most nourishing and necessary articles of human food, amusement is a serious, practical interest and concern of society, and not a mere indulgence and weakness, to be excused and apologised for. Society is the better, the safer, the more moral and religious, for amusement. It is as good a friend to the church as it is to the theatre; to sound morals and unsuperstitious piety, as it is to health and happiness. The very word recreation carries its argument in its etymology. To recreate is to re-create, and pleasure and piety have, in this direction, an identical aim,—to renew and edify our nature. Amusement, it is true, recreates in a very different manner from piety. It does not make the bone and sinew, but supplies the roundness of the muscle, the fat and moisture of the system—and while one gives strength and size, the other gives flexibity and grace. [Applause.] Both are necessary to build up the perfect man. [Renewed applause—cries of "Good."]

AMUSEMENT NOT AT WAR WITH DUTY NOR THE EQUIVALENT OF VICE.

But here I shall be met with the suggestion, that, allowing this, amusement, falling in with the tastes, the sloth, the self-indulgent propensities of humanity—being in its very nature easy, careless and gay—leads always to excess—provides amply and extravagantly for its own gratification—is in league with the vanity, vices, and dangerous passions of the human heart, and, instead of countenance and encouragement from the serious class, needs only its rebuke and restraint. Nay, that the very object of religion is to produce a seriousness, self-denial and consecration, which pleasure in every form assails and renders difficult; that it arises to the world to see whom piety is seeking to detach from the world: produces [illegible] influences where religion would give sobriety, and promotes self forgetfulness and indifference in those whom God's word is seeking to make thoughtful and anxious. Many good and wise people, who have not the least idea of seeing amusement go out of fashion, and who would confess that what they themselves call innocent amusement is necessary and legitimate; who look at the sports of young children—the game at ball, or the skater's flight, the walk in the country, the nutting party, a game at checkers or chess, the music of the piano, the wit and humor of a true story—with sympathy, nevertheless think it their duty to resist the principle of amusement, lest under any concession of its lawfulness, excess should find shelter. [Applause.]

There is, however, no greater mistake in the world, than to imagine that, taking society together, the love of amusement is an overweening passion of humanity. Doubtless it is the ruin of a class. But selfishness, the root of depravity, and the mother of human evils, finds its chief outlets and manifestations in the serious and saxious passions of men;—in cupidity, the love of power, envy, jealousy, and malice. [Applause.] Out of the grand desire to appropriate wealth, power, place, or to avoid want, submission, and injury, spring the worst characteristics of society. [Faint applause.] Falsehood, fraud, violence, anger, cunning, slander, meanness, apathy, vice, and crime, originate in selfishness, which is ordinarily unsocial, stern, sober, laborious, and as far as possible from pleasure or diversion. Instead of being self-forgetful, disposed to relaxation, playful or gay, it is sullen, introspective, tightly girded, and in no mood for delight. For certainly we must not confound things different, and call the grim satisfaction with which the miser pursues his gains, the tyrant his victims, the rogue his prize, with which envy surveys the mortification of a competitor, or hatred the misfortune of an enemy, or jealousy the pangs of a rival—amusement. [Applause.]

Nor are the vices of society, drunkenness, lust and gambling, to be placed among the relaxations and amusements of mankind. They are the serious and horrible outbreak of lawless appetites, which do nothing to recreate, but only to destroy. If they are often found in connection with the pleasures of the world, they are just as often found in absolute separation from them. Indeed, the lack of the wholesome excitement of pleasure is commonly seen producing the noxious excitement of vice; and intemperance, lust, and gambling, have devastated communities, in which public diversions have been scrupulously forbidden. It is a terrible fact, that the first hundred years of Puritanism in New-England was marked alike by ascetic public manners, and the prevalence of vices almost unheard of in our free and more indulgent society; and it is even now asserted that the soberest of our sister States contributes more than any other State in the Union, to the sad catalogue of female frailty. [Sensation and applause.]

THE DANGER OF CONFOUNDING VICE AND AMUSEMENT.

There is hardly a more baleful error in the world than that which has produced the feud between morality and amusement, piety and pleasure. By presenting as the mark for reprobation, the recreations instead of the sins of society; by confounding amusements with vices, the moral feeling of the world has been wastefully diverted from its opposition to absolute wrong and depraving affections, into opposition to things innocent, indifferent, or hurtful only in excess; and thus a very mischievous confusion has been introduced into the natural and the Christian conscience of evil. Consider the thick darkness, the absence of interior light and moral order, which is likely to reign in a soul that has been instructed to put dancing, and the frequentations of shows, spectacles, and balls, into the same disallowance and reprobation in which lying, slander, hatred, and unchastity are kept, and to reckon the love of fun, gayety, and social excitement as a depraved and satanic affection! ["Bravo" and applause.] What but moral confusion, secret protest, insidious revenges, private vices, latent skepticism, and laxity in directions not open to observation or suspicion, can result to many, from such unwarranted and unnatural classifications? It is true the second generation often pays the penalty of the asceticism of the first, but the first usually has a ruinous pity on itself, and treats its resolution in dark and deadly ways. We cannot afford to waste our moral feeling, our sensibility to sin, our powers of self-control and of resistance, upon false issues, or on artificial sins. We want all the tenderness, and all the energy of conscience—all the amenableness to duty, all the fear of God, we have or can cultivate, wherewith to encounter real sins, the actual temptations of the Devil, the positive wrongs to which human life and character are exposed. Every artificial wrong, everything pronounced evil which is innocent, every restraint volunteered, every self-denial which is unnecessary, is a positive weakening of our moral forces—ammunition used up in a sham fight, when the real enemy is just at our doors. [Great laughter and applause.] It is no uncommon thing, therefore, to see asceticism accompanied by cruelty to others, sanctimoniousness associated with sourness of heart, and separateness from the world, or disgust and contempt for its pleasures, offset with spiritual pride, harshness of judgment, and malignity of temper.

It will not answer, then, for the religious class to hold amusements ar pleasure responsible for that depravity of manners, and insensibility of conscience and heart, which they so justly deplore. They had much better attack the egotism, pride, covetousness, indolence, appetite, the vehement passions, and desires of men, in directions and at points where the natural conscience and the grace of God will assist and sustain their onset. It is not in the amusements, but in the serious occupations of society; in business, domestic cares and collisions, rivalries and competitions of interest, conflicts and strifes of feeling, in bursts of passion, or secret, unsocial vices, that reverence, obedience, the love of truth, and virtue, and God, are lost. Nor has morality or religion any business to indulge its own rashness and lack of discrimination, by denouncing in the gross, what has a mixture of good and evil in it; or to affect from policy, a disapprobation of the principle of amusement, when it really at heart condemns certain kinds and degrees of it. Such want of frankness and truth involves the proper censors of manners in suspicion and contempt, and finally puts the recreation of the world, where unhappily much of it now is, in open defence of piety, or disgust for the church.

I am not here to daub or conceal the exposure to excess, and actual lapse of the young into excess, in the love and pursuit of pleasure. The moment it becomes anything more than a relaxation from toil—the unbending of a bow kept ordinarily at its strain, the exception and not the rule, the leisure of the busy, the fun of the serious, the play of the worker, the self-forgetfulness of the thoughtful, the recreation of the weary and exhausted—it is excess. But things are not to be abandoned because their use requires judgment and control. The best things are most open to abuse, and amusement, like food, love, power, money, requires to have the dangers of its pursuit pointed out, but not its lawfulness or its innocency, in its place and degree, denied or concealed.

THE STAGE AS AN AMUSEMENT—ITS ATTRACTIVENESS AND FASCINATION.

It being established, then, that amusement is not a thing to be afraid of; that it is a good, and not an evil; a necessity and not a luxury of civilization; an interest of society which the religious class, instead of regarding with hostility and jealousy, ought to encourage and direct, I come next to inquire, what place the stage has among the amusements of society, and what titles it has to the countenance of serious people.

I suppose it would not for a moment be denied, that if the theatre were compatible with Christian sobriety, it would be the most complete and interesting of all amusements. Nothing but scruples of conscience and a fear of countenancing a seductive pleasure, keeps even the most sober portions of the community from an occasional visit to the play-house. I must except, of course, those who by disuse of their sensibility to pleasure, have lost the power of being amused; and those whose original temperament is constitutionally averse to pleasure. But these, few or many, must not mistake their defects for advantages. It is a much greater misfortune not to have the ordinary ear for music. That must be a stupid nature that does not powerfully feel the attractiveness of the stage, when occupied by such persons as Gerrick, Talma, and the Kembles; and, purified from what must offend the taste or conscience of good men, the stage filled with moderately good performers, would allure and gratify thousands of sober and discreet people, as nothing else could. The indifferent performances of amateurs are listened to with intense gratification, which, after deducting all the interest of personal sympathy with the volunteers, demonstrates the inherent charm of the stage. There was never a dialogue spoken in a school exhibition which was not ten times as exciting as any monologue, and every additional person added to the scene increased its fascination in a geometrical ratio. [Applause.] If a few regs of scenery or costume were thrown around the performers, how potently was the charm enhanced? In short, in precise proportion to an approach to the public stage, was the amusement complete. But why linger on so plain a point? The stage is the most winning of amusements, because the combination and aggregate of all others. The theatre is itself a magnificent place—the audience a great party in becoming attire. If there were nothing behind the curtain—an elegant room, brilliantly lighted, with graceful tiers of galleries, full of well-dressed people in good humor, and seated in knots of acquaintances, talking, bowing, or gazing, admiring and being admired—would be fascinating to the social and æsthetic instincts of human beings. But there is more than this, even outside the curtain. A great orchestra of music, capable, by its own unaided powers, of delighting an audience. Besides a social party, a grand concert—and the curtain not yet risen! But the curtain rises and displays—what? A gifted person, reading an eloquent narrative, or a melodious poem, in a highly cultivated voice? That indeed would be a high pleasure, such as we sometimes eagerly seek elsewhere. No! but a whole company of persons, especially endowed by nature for the occupation, and trained to its practice, engaged in representing some historical or fictitious story, carefully, and by high and rare genius, wrought to a moving plot, in which each scene and act helps on a conclusion—where the passions, weaknesses, virtues, and complicated motives of humanity, seized in their most affecting and interesting aspects, are not described, but actually represented by persons of talent and skill, carefully cooperating to one grand result! The time of the drama may be a thousand years back, the place five thousand miles off; but the costumes and scenery, with learned artistic care, reproduce what history and art have taught them, and we behold what a little exercise of the imagination makes the very action, the persons, country, town and castle the dramatist has summoned us to see! Can we wonder that an imitation of life itself, in its rarest, most passionate, and heart-moving moments and experiences—where the alchemy of genius and art, fuses into a few hours the whole conduct and course of a splendid human career—a deep domestic calamity, ambition's bloody road to a throne, love's great sacrifice, jealousy's torturing fears, avarice's pinching and grasping way—Hamlet's thought-pashed melancholy, Lear's parenaied paternal grief, Juliet's innocent passion, Macbeth's remorse—that a pleasure so rich, easily, variously and curiously compounded as this, based upon the deepest, most numerous sensibilities of our nature, should prove universally and permanently attractive? [Prolonged Applause.] The drama combines what is most intensely interesting or affecting in real life, or from what the constitution of our nature genius knows might be real life, into a compact, rounded, and finished story; omitting what is common-place, irrelevant, or simply painful, and by careful adherence to the great rule of art, which never forgets that its end is pleasure, extracting from crime, or vice, or passion, whatever in their actual occurrence it would shock us to behold, leaves what moves our passions and affections with pleasing though tearful sensibility. The stage takes this drama, and by a living sculpture clothes this wondrous work of literary genius with flesh and blood, substitutes for paper and print, men and women, voices for words, for the dull pictures of the imagination, actual scenery, for descriptions of costume, actual dresses; nay, it invokes gifted men and yet more gifted women to take these parts, and, by boundless study, consideration, expense, builds the temple, collects the properties, and arranges the scene which is to convert the written into the acted drama! and is it possible to conceive that human ingenuity can ever invent any other amusement which can equal, much less exceed, this deeply-founded, slowly-wrought, and most costly contrivance for the public delight and recreation of human beings? [Applause.] Supposing it to be innocent, I perceive no element wanting to render it theoretically a perfect pleasure. It appeals to the intellect, the imagination, the heart, the senses. It has the charm of poetry and music. It unites the interest of a story with the fascination of a spectacle. It calls by turns on our emotional and on our critical faculties; now inviting us to yield to the illusion, now, to admire the skill which deludes us; it adds to the sympathy we feel for the persons represented, that we feel with those who represent them; that we feel for the genius which made them representable; and Shakespeare, Hamlet, and Garrick, all pull at our heart-strings in one delicious moment of admiration and sympathy. [Immense applause.] Poetry, invention, story, mimetic talent, elocution, personation, spectacle, beauty, passion, architecture, painting, music, society, light, all combine in the theatre to make it the most brilliant, complete, and untiring of public amusements.

HOW THE THEATRE INSTRUCTS.

Now I am not pretending, you perceive, that the charm or attractiveness of the stage depends firstly and mainly upon its moral teaching, or its moral influence. Amusement loses its quality when instruction becomes its object, and it would be very delusive to anticipate that people would attend the theatre for educational purposes, or cease to attend it because it were proved uninstructive. The instruction to be got from the drama or the stage, must always be incidental, and perfectly subordinate to the pleasure got from them. I do not doubt that there is potent instruction, and moral influence in Hamlet, Macbeth, the Tempest, the Gamester, the Hunchback, Uncle Tom's Cabin, the Rent-Day; but if the satisfaction and pleasure of seeing these plays depended upon their moral influence, or if their performance could be justified only by their direct usefulness to morals, I fear I should lose my place with the serious class. Considering the moral necessity of being happy, it is the various, wholesome and immense amount of pleasure and recreation which the theatre gives that first enlists me in its support. It amuses so large a part of our humanity, amuses the senses and the soul, calls out, to gratify and refresh them, sensibilities and passions, which the ordinary life of the world does not bring into play, and thus rests the other and earnest powers and feelings of our nature. Removing us from the region of the actual to that of the ideal; from the sphere of the common and natural, into that of the extraordinary and artistic, it changes our world and ourselves, draws upon an entirely new set of powers and sensibilities, while it allows the old set to go to sleep, and thus to repair their waste, while the circle of our development is completing. All amusement does this, and the theatre only more, because it is the most amusing of amusements. It rests and recreates by calling into more pleasing and intense activity, the qualities, affections, emotions, ordinarily dormant in the work-day life of society. There, instead of ministering we are ministered unto; instead of acting, we are acted for; instead of planning and scheming, we are watching plans and schemes; instead of feeling for ourselves, we are feeling for others; instead of toiling after a distant consummation, we are enjoying a consummation which is perfected in five acts. Our love of beauty, harmony, heroism; our sympathy with daring, patriotism, passion; our love of light, form, color, elegance, splendor; our admiration for genius, talent, skill; all these sensibilities, which in actual, plodding life, mercantile, domestic, or professional, get little exercise or indulgence, are in the theatre ministered to, and gratified in a way which recreates our common nature. [Applause.]

The use of the theatre, (supposing it free from moral objection, which I by no means assume,) is that it gives so much pleasure, which is a positive and large addition to the general sum of human happiness; and that in giving this pleasure, it satisfies an immense need of recreation, and, quite independently of any direct influence on the moral interests of society—builds up, and supports, and cheers the life and soul of man. I dare not make light of pleasure. God has taken too benevolent an interest in producing it, and there is too much pain, and drudgery, and necessary care to be offset by it, to allow me to think it a small thing that any considerable mass of human beings are pleased. I will not demand of a amusement that it shall directly instruct, warn, elevate, or improve. If it give genuine pleasure, and if it do not corrupt, deprave, or injure, I will bless it, and without a single misgiving invoke the benedictions of heaven on its head. [Applause.] Do not, then, perversely read backwards all that has been said of the fascination of the theatre, as if it were so much against it, and not so much in its favor. If it shall afterwards appear that the stage has essential immoralities and perils to society and the soul, wrought into its very nature, and inseparable from it, then we will allow that its attractiveness is a misfortune; its various charms those of a syren that woo to destruction; and that genius, art, beauty, and splendor, have conspired, in the theatre, to make vice seductive, and folly captivating. But I submit, that in the theory of the stage, (a very different thing, possibly, from the fact,) we have yet found nothing to condemn—nothing essentially wrong, or otherwise than right. There is nothing wrong in amusement, except in excess; nor in the theatre, the finest of amusements. The dramatic faculty is divinely implanted. It gives life and reality even to portions of the Scriptures. The drama is a species of literature which the world's greatest geniuses have chosen for their own, gaining immortal renown for their labors there. The stage is the drama made more real, and brought within the easier and fuller enjoyment of the best and the poorest judges. So far we are in smooth water.

THE OBJECTIONS TO THE STAGE—ITS CORRUPT LITERATURE AND LOOSE CHARACTERS.

But the breakers begin to threaten us at the very next step. [Sensation.]

It is alleged—and that is the professed sentiment of the serious class—that practically the drama has been a corrupt and corrupting kind of literature, putting into licentious and depraving verse and story, the worst and most seductive experiences of humanity; that it has pandered to vile and vulgar tastes, dramatists having often, or usually, been loose and unprincipled characters, and their readers the more gay and careless portion of society. Doubtless there is truth, and there is also exaggeration in this statement. The great dramatists, whether ancient or modern, Sophocles, Euripides, ar Aristophanes, Calderon, Lope de Vega, Cornelle, Racine, Shakespeare, are, with the exception of the coarseness which belonged to their respective ages, not open to such charges, although the minor lights unquestionably deserve severe chastisement. But there is nothing peculiar in the abuse of dramatic literature. We do not abandon and discountenance poetry, because Rochester wrote immoral verses, and Moore and Byron, poems which nobody should read. We do not give up Richardson, and Scott, and Dickens, and Thackeray, because Fielding and Smollett, Eugene Sas and Dumas, have often abused their great powers. The best things are most open to abuse; and dramatic literature, you will confess, has not been oftener or worse perverted and depraved than religious literature. Indeed, the Church seized on the drama, when she was most busy in manipulating the human mind into superstition, and perpetrated greater blasphemies and obscenities in the so called Mysteries, written and acted in the middle ages, than the dramatic writers of England or France have ever foisted into their most abominable plays. [Applause.] The drama is a kind of literature whose permanency is guaranteed by the constitution of man. Beginning with the very origin of literature, and continuing thus far on its history with every prospect of ending only with its life—we must expect it to reflect and share the fortunes of humanity, and to find itself, now in the hands of an noble, and now of desecrated genius; here the instrument of the unscrupulous, there the vehicle of truth, honor and inspiration. But how many dissolute and depraving dramatists and dramas would not the judicious and the conscientious consent to bear with and guard against, sooner than lose SHAKESPEARE alone out of the world? The mischievous jack-o'-lanterns and false lights of land and sea may shine on forever, if we can only extinguish them by blowing out the stars and quenching the sun. [Applause.] We cannot obliterate WASHINGTON, to wipe ARNOLD out of American history, though treachery hung by his skirts alone to the fortunes of the race. We must let the tares grow to the harvest for the sake of the wheat. The drama stands in its own right, and in the right of its great priests, the wonderful interpreters of humanity, and great recreators of the race; and all the apostates and criminals who have desecrated its pure and beautiful shrine, cannot make its nature otherwise than lawful and honorable, and entitled to the protection of universal reason and justice. [Prolonged applause.] It is indeed deplorable, that the written drama should have ever thrown its fascination around vice and crime, as it is always terrible when genius and wit, when art and skill, enter the service of the devil. Most sad it is that pleasure should ever be associated with folly, or amusement attracted from sin. But literature is not responsible for the abuses to which levity and immorality turn any of its powers; and it is not the drama, but the public and the dramatic authors who are to be censured for the production and encouragement of lax, immoral, and corrupting plays. [Applause.] On this point I shall speak more fully and to better advantage at another period of this address.

And now, if, whatever the theory may be, the drama itself has been practically degraded and abused as a species of popular literature, until sober and discreet people, as a class, have thought it wise and necessary to discountenance the reading of plays—how much more ought the theatre, the acted drama, to be discountenanced and destroyed—when we consider how its actual, practical character differs from its theoretical one, and how little what is said in defence of the ideal stage applies to the real one? For what has the theatre not been, during its modern existence, if the allegations and accusations of the religious class, uttered in a thousand tones, are to be taken without abatement? Has it not been as much the focus of vice as the centre of pleasure? Have not intemperance and licentiousness found a congenial home within its walls? Have not the extravagant fashion, the unscrupulous wit, the reckless passion of the world, been its chief patrons, and found themselves in their natural and unreproved place before or behind the footlights? Have not actors and actresses, as a class, been regarded, by the pulpit, as licensed sinners—utter strangers to sobriety and purity; as persons whose very occupation condemned them to the abandonment of morality and decency;—whose Bible was Shakespeare—whose table of commandments the rules of the green-room—their judgment-seat, the public—their best heaven, the applause of the boxes—their only hell, the condemnation of the pit? [Laughter and applause.] Have not the young commenced their career of disobedience in stealing off to the play-house, and have not its exciting and passionate scenes—its glittering audience and bewitching actors—its ready bar-room, and as ready courtezans, softened and betrayed their feeble virtue, and finished in positive vice what began in youthful folly? Have not indecent exposure, obscenity or profanity of wit, innendo and levity, characterized the stage? Has not the theatre been the haunt of gamblers, jockeys, men of pleasure, women of the world—of all the light and careless portion of the community, and is it not essentially so now? Moreover, have not highly immoral plays—in which successful villainy or roguery has been applauded—the feats of some "Jack Sheppard" or "Paul Clifford" romantically held up to the admiration or imitation of youth; the betrayal of female virtue excused; the authority of wise parents made contemptible; the rules of morality held up to ridicule, and the habits of piety satirized and scorned? Have not the serious principles of order, purity, industry and religion, felt the theatre to be the very essence of worldliness, wickedness, temptation and sin—an institution to be excluded to the latest moment from every well-governed community—to be avoided by all sober and public-spirited citizens, and placed under the special ban of formal religion, as the devil's own domain, the very gate of hell?

THESE OBJECTIONS APPLY TO THE ABUSE AND NOT THE USE OF AMUSEMENT.

Do I seem to be giving up the whole case? I have a profound though a cautious respect for genuine impressions, and particularly for the instincts of the religious community, and from all I have read, or learned by direct observation or special inquiry, I believe that the ordinary verdict of serious minds and of the pulpit, respecting the theatre, has many painful elements of truth in it. But I believe equally that it exhibits much extravagance, confusion and illogical reasoning. More particularly I complain that this verdict leaves entirely out of view the uses of the theatre, considering only its abuses; that it takes no pains to recognize what is good, in its eagerness to point out what is evil—or to discriminate between what is essential and what is accidental in this institution; that it confounds the evils around, with the evils within the theatre, and, to come directly to the point, fails to inquire and explain why, and by whose fault, and in accordance with what law, it is, that the immorality and recklessness of society, its folly and vice, have clustered about the theatre. I do not deny the fact; but I deny the totally condemnatory inferences drawn from the fact. For in truth, the Theatre is the very place where, for no fault inherent in itself, the pre-existing follies and vices of society will necessarily become appareat. We do not expect to find the follies and vices of society, the levity and ease of a community, gathering around schools and colleges, workshops and churches, scenes of labor and care, any more than we expect to find flies settling upon rhubarb and aloes, and not on molasses and honey. [Laughter.] But it would be quite as reasonable to give up sugar because vermin are fond of it, as to give up pleasure because fools and knaves, the light and the wicked, make it their chief food. [Great applause.] Because folly spends his whole time in laughter, sobriety does not propose to disuse the risible muscles; because drunkenness ruins thousands, and gluttony tens of thousands, virtuous society does not expect yet awhile to give up eating and drinking. [Applause.

One very large class of the perils of humanity is inevitably and indissolubly associated with its pleasure-loving propensities. It is of the essence of pleasure to lull conscience to sleep, and throw humanity off its attitude of resistance. But—mind you—this is not its weakness, but its strength: its use and charm come of its carelessness and abandon. If it did not do this, it would not be the recreation of society. If men were thinking of their duty, or their business, self-discipline, of judgment to come, of serious and solemn concerns in their amusements, they would straight way become no longer amusements, but trying occupations. It is, of course, then, of the very nature of pleasure, to expose and try the character: the powers for resistance are relaxed; the mind and heart are left to the impressions of the time and scene. Just here, then, is the place where the positive, tangible vices of society must appear, or rather, one great class of them—those that effect the senses. But this by no means settles the character of pleasure, any more than it settles the character of the gustatory nerve, that if it did not give us pleasure to eat, there would be no gluttony; to drink, no intemperance! The pleasure of eating and drinking is a universal and positive blessing, and not to be ascribed solely, with some utilitarian philosophers, to the necessity of supplying men with a motive for labor, but to the Creator's benevolent desire to communicate happiness. If the love of pleasure, dangerous as it is, were taken from humanity, if pleasure itself were destroyed, consequences would ensue, vastly more demoralizing and fatal than any now proceeding from its abuse! And when we are dwelling exclusively upon the evils of pleasure in any of its forms, it would correct some of our extravagance, to stop and meditate awhile upon its origin, [pointing upward,] its uses, and its necessity. [Applause.]

The attractiveness of the theatre, even to vice and folly, is nothing against it, until it can be proved that they are attracted there by what is bad and depraving. It is not enough to show that they carry there what is bad and depraving, or that they are not kept away by what is bad and depraving there, but that they are attracted by what is bad and depraving. I suppose them to be attracted precisely by what would attract me or you, or any innocent or well-intentioned person—by the love of pleasure, spectacle, society, talent, beauty, light, architecture, and I suppose them to be very innocent so far as the enjoyment of these things is concerned. That, knowing their presence, and coarseness or unscrupulousness, the stage should cater to it, is a monstrous evil; that folly and weakness should find those waiting for them there to practice on their propensities; that they should carry their vices and tastes to the theatre with them, is a dreadful and undeniable misfortune to society. But I am yet to see how, because the wicked and the careless like what the good and the careful also like—namely, pleasure—it makes pleasure wrong; and how, because the theatre, in its character of an amusement, attracts the vicious and the depraved, it proves it to be a vicious and depraved amusement. Have the vicious and depraved no human and universal tastes left? are they not still men and women? are not some of their doings and feelings such as the good and the innocent can share? For my own part, I believe the theatre has, in every age, exhibited the vices and follies of society rather than created them, and it has owed its reputation for evil, mainly to the fact, that it has been the only place in which the decency, or virtue, or propriety of society has met the indecency, the vice, and disreputableness. [Sensation.] Now, if the theatre had produced this indecency, vice have ever foisted into their most abominable plays. [Applause.] The drama is a kind of literature whose permanency is guaranteed by the constitution of man. Beginning with the very origin of literature, and continuing thus far on its history with every prospect of ending only with its life—we must expect it to reflect and share the fortunes of humanity, and to find itself, now in the hands of an noble, and now of desecrated genius; here the instrument of the unscrupulous, there the vehicle of truth, honor and inspiration. But how many dissolute and depraving dramatists and dramas would not the judicious and the conscientious consent to bear with and guard against, sooner than lose SHAKESPEARE alone out of the world? The mischievous jack-o'-lanterns and false lights of land and sea may shine on forever, if we can only extinguish them by blowing out the stars and quenching the sun. [Applause.] We cannot obliterate WASHINGTON, to wipe ARNOLD out of American history, though treachery hung by his skirts alone to the fortunes of the race. We must let the tares grow to the harvest for the sake of the wheat. The drama stands in its own right, and in the right of its great priests, the wonderful interpreters of humanity, and great recreators of the race; and all the apostates and criminals who have desecrated its pure and beautiful shrine, cannot make its nature otherwise than lawful and honorable, and entitled to the protection of universal reason and justice. [Prolonged applause.] It is indeed deplorable, that the written drama should have ever thrown its fascination around vice and crime, as it is always terrible when genius and wit, when art and skill, enter the service of the devil. Most sad it is that pleasure should ever be associated with folly, or amusement attracted from sin. But literature is not responsible for the abuses to which levity and immorality turn any of its powers; and it is not the drama, but the public and the dramatic authors who are to be censured for the production and encouragement of lax, immoral, and corrupting plays. [Applause.] On this point I shall speak more fully and to better advantage at another period of this address.

And now, if, whatever the theory may be, the drama itself has been practically degraded and abused as a species of popular literature, until sober and discreet people, as a class, have thought it wise and necessary to discountenance the reading of plays—how much more ought the theatre, the acted drama, to be discountenanced and destroyed—when we consider how its actual, practical character differs from its theoretical one, and how little what is said in defence of the ideal stage applies to the real one? For what has the theatre not been, during its modern existence, if the allegations and accusations of the religious class, uttered in a thousand tones, are to be taken without abatement? Has it not been as much the focus of vice as the centre of pleasure? Have not intemperance and licentiousness found a congenial home within its walls? Have not the extravagant fashion, the unscrupulous wit, the reckless passion of the world, been its chief patrons, and found themselves in their natural and unreproved place before or behind the footlights? Have not actors and actresses, as a class, been regarded, by the pulpit, as licensed sinners—utter strangers to sobriety and purity; as persons whose very occupation condemned them to the abandonment of morality and decency;—whose Bible was Shakespeare—whose table of commandments the rules of the green-room—their judgment-seat, the public—their best heaven, the applause of the boxes—their only hell, the condemnation of the pit? [Laughter and applause.] Have not the young commenced their career of disobedience in stealing off to the play-house, and have not its exciting and passionate scenes—its glittering audience and bewitching actors—its ready bar-room, and as ready courtezans, softened and betrayed their feeble virtue, and finished in positive vice what began in youthful folly? Have not indecent exposure

Stanton. This would at once take the ban off this diversion as a thing essentially and hopelessly wrong, an enormous injury to actors, and also to the public, whom it drives to their pleasure in defiance of what they feel to be right. Under such circumstances, their profession there would be the only possible and effective censorship in a country like ours, reserving the exercise of play of a harmless and spotless character, and their performance in a manner decorous and unobjectionable. Further, the same influence would preside—for it has partially done it already—drinking places and improper characters, as such, from the play-house; and, finally, the countenance, requirement and support, would give actors and actresses the strength and courage they so much need, to rise above the perils of their laborious and exciting vocation, and to take their place with other respected and respectable callings, upon the common platform of moral and Christian amenableness. [Applause.]

PRACTICAL RESULTS OF THE ATTENDANCE OF RELIGIOUS PEOPLE AT THE THEATRE.

These suggestions are not speculations. They are based upon what is already begun, and now going on. The existence of a place like Niblo's Garden—and honorable mention should never fail to be made of that pioneer in theatrical reform in this community, William Niblo—which no other people of the less tightly-laced religious sects could attend without absolute loss of standing, has worked no small revolution in the external decency of theatrical manners and surroundings, in this City and country. That disgusting and odious gallery once alloted to vice—formerly deemed inseparable from the theatre—has been almost universally abandoned; while the bar has at least retired from public sight, and is, we trust, finally to retire from secret existence. [Applause.]

It is encouraging to learn that even now the saloon has supplementary and less is more profitable in some theatres than the drinking-shop, and that where a good orchestra exists comparatively few leave their seats between the acts for any other refreshment.

Is it not patent, too, that every theatre purifies itself to meet the precise taste for purity which it discovers in its patrons? As I learn from others—for I have very small personal experience—you might graduate the approaches to absolute spottlessness of words and motions—from a very remote, to a quite satisfactory, or at any rate, encouraging nearness to the standard of true morality, by observing the character and class of the audiences who support the various theatres of New York. I am assured by Christian gentlemen of Boston, that the principal theatre in that city is as free from a reproach of impurity or irreverence as the ordinary circle of good society. And what but the partial relaxation of the [illegible] which has excluded moral worth and sobriety from the theatre, has effected this partial reform? Does not progress lie only in this direction? And it is because of the abundant proof from all quarters that progress is making, that I have been encouraged and compelled to become a laborer in this field. But even now, it is impossible to read the accounts of the stage, the plots of the plays, without perceiving how ungently the theatre stands in need of a graver censorship—of the fear and awe of the support of a wiser, more thoughtful, and more solid portion of the people. I do not suppose, even now, that the theatre, in the character of its plays, is at all worse than much of the literature which finds its way, unreproved, into our parlors and bed-rooms; and we may thank the indulgence of a sickly appetite for French novels for the popularity of the prurient, morbid and undermining drama of the French school, which, because it is decent in words, the innocent do not perceive to be indecent in conception, and debauching in its main drift. It needs a Christian intelligence, a sure, firm, moral instinct, to recognize and fully characterize much of the insidious poison and fascinating corruption of the stage. But I firmly believe that a dozen men of unquestioned purity, largeness and elevation of tone, could, at a single representation, make it impossible for such plays as the late alarmingly popular "Camille," with others of its class, to be reheard. It is by no means certain that their authors are impure, or intend wrong. But they write on wrong and mischievous theories. Entire and unanimous reprobation must be fixed upon this whole school of plays; and the great genius which has helped to elevate them, by her surpassing talent, must be kindly entreated and encouraged to seek a nobler fame in a better and more permanent field of acting.

Thousands are pamphlet in innocence and escape the wrong from such plays; but the last restraints which hold others on the brink of ruin, are loosened, and they follow the fascination into the pit of destruction. Ought not the clergy, the fathers, the professors, the learned, wise and responsible men of this community, to be leading their restraining and chastening presence, their supervision and judgment, to elevate and improve a place of resort, which their children, their pupils, their companions, their parishioners, will at any rate attend? I hesitate not to say, clearly they ought—even at the expense of being mistaken, or disgusted!—clearly they ought, from duty always! But take away sopers ition and fear of reproach, they would not require to go from duty alone. [Applause.]

They would enjoy the relaxation which their presence purified—they would moderate by sharing a taste, which is made excessive by the exclusiveness in which it is indulged, and the inflammatory passions to which it appeals. Let great works, sterling comedy, or solemn tragedy hold the stage, and the deeper emotions, satisfied to the full, would not covet this tickling of the sentimental nature, which makes one bad play only create a morbid appetite for another, and which carries so many to its shameful excess. On every account, then, the monitors and guides of the people should share their amusements when not sinful in themselves. Their vices they may not share nor partake; their tastes and pleasures they may and ought. You need not tell me that the silent remonstrance, the settled reproof which the absence of the religious class from its scene gives to the levity and immorality of the theatre, are its most effectual and only Christian checks. I reply that these have proved utterly ineffectual, nay, have reacted upon the church and public morals—that the theatre is none the better for the frown, and the church much the worse. It affects only the face that wears it. Besides, positive influence is a thousand times more powerful than negative. One good man, going to the theatre, does it more good than a hundred good men who stay away can do it. [Applause.]

I believe it is Mrs. Mowatt who states in her Recollections of the Stage, that one has known the sudden discovery by the management of the presence of a single person of eminent and virtuous character in the audience, chastens and qualify the whole performance; silencing ribaldry, repressing innuendo, and putting the whole company on their good behavior: and the managers of theatres in New-York directly confirm the fact, as proved by their own experience. What might not the expected and certain presence of a small proportion of known and positive friends of purity, reverence and decency, in the theatre, do to change what is objectionable in the whole character of plays and players—the spirit and temper of the theatre?

INFLUENCE OF THE STAGE UPON ACTORS THEMSELVES.

I come now, finally, to the consideration of the influence of the theatre on the drama, the profession itself, which was, in my original invocation, the main purpose of this address. You will excuse me, ladies and gentlemen of the theatre, for having so long talked over your heads to the religious community, but it has really been in your behalf and service; and I promise to confine myself wholly in what remains, to your more immediate case.

It is unquestionably true, that the exclusion of the theatre from the sympathies of a large and commanding portion of society, reprobating it as immoral and dangerous, has exerted a most unhappy and injurious influence upon the dramatic profession. Make any calling disreputable—pronounce and maintain it to be, under ordinary circumstances, a disqualification for general society—hold it in constant and steady association with all the vices of the senses—and you have done all you can to degrade its tone, and to render it really dangerous and worthy of suspicion. If all surgeons were still compelled to be barbers, you can see what the probable state of that profession would be. Were the Scotch clergy of the lower grades still everywhere but below the salt, and ranked among the upper servants of great houses, as MACAULAY shows us they were even in the time of JAMES II., they would continue the servile and sensual body they then were. Were butchers still made incapable of serving on juries, whom life was at stake, because of the alleged cruelty of their trade, and nature, they would probably justify their reputation for ferocity, were it only in scorn of the silly injustice of the law. While other professions, calling once and long regarded with suspicion, have risen above public odium, yours, members of the dramatic profession, has suffered the most obstinate and virtual reprobation. Almost every inducement, which society could offer, to lead discreet, orderly, and virtuous lives, has been taken away from players. Not only the religious, but the irreligious world, have been glad to be a class of persons, who, to have adopted their calling, must be lost to self respect, and to pursue it, must abandon all pretensions to virtue. Outcasts from the church, social pariahs, the very Jews and gypsies of Christian civilization—what could sustain any class at the average height of human worth, under disabilities so extraordinary and degrading? When transcendent genius and the rarest social gifts have enabled a few to climb the barrier which has excluded their class from society, the very grounds of their reception have added nothing to the respectability of the general body, and offered no inducement to the moral efforts of the rest. Not worth, but beauty and genius have accomplished the victory, and these are neither moral nor voluntary. Indeed, the exceptional manner in which the dramatic profession has been reared; the capricious and arbitrary mode in which individuals who could bring brilliancy, beauty, or wit into general society, have been lifted over the fence, under pretended respect for their worth, but really of selfish desire for their company; the occasional intermarriage of an actress with a nobleman; the adoption and petting of favorites; all this generosity to a few at the expense of justice to all, has added to the injury and to the perils of the profession. What your profession needs and claims, is to be recognized as a legitimate and honest calling of Christian civilization; not inherently or essentially wrong; not on any separate or arbitrary footing; one, among the other respectable and responsible vocations, on which every member is to stand or fall on his individual merits; his character to be scanned and scrutinized as much as other men's and no more, and his worth and claims as a character distinguished from his worth and claims as an actor, precisely as it is in every profession besides. A good man is not always a good lawyer, nor a good lawyer a good man. A good man is not always a good actor, nor a good actor a good man. [Applause.]

I presume you will not deny that yours was an arduous profession—dangerous, as I shall presently show, to the moral nature—and you, of course, do not expect, and have no right to expect, that any of the moral scars and stains, which this perilous trade has actually put upon you, the world shall overlook. If you claim, as in proper self respect you must claim, the ordinary protection of Christian society, the reestablishment of your social position on the same level with other crafts, you do at the same time recognize your amenableness to the moral obligations and judgment which they consent, or are compelled to be tried by. Unhappily, as unjustly, your faults and follies, your vices and vanities, are not now judged with the same severity as those of other men and women, for the degrading reason that you are considered to have abandoned the moral ground of life, in the very adoption of your calling. If an actor or actress happens, from natural rectitude, purity, and force, or far better, from settled principle, to be a spotless character, it is spoken of in a tone of surprise, which is more insulting and injurious to the profession, than if it were not recognized at all. What I demand for you, in the name of Christian brotherhood, and of universal morality, is a complete restoration to the common rights and the common protection of society. Your calling is a lawful calling; lawful in that it is the exercise of providential gifts and talents for the gratification and well being of society—itself a divine order—lawful, in that its highest and best fulfilment involves necessarily not the least infringement of one of God's laws, or Christ's precepts; lawful, in that it is recognized by the law of the land. Nor only so, it is an intellectual and artistic calling, demanding a somewhat rare organization—physical and mental—for its pursuit, and requiring, for high success, a degree of general information, culture and self discipline, which should elevate it to the rank of the liberal professions. It is your duty, therefore, to claim, and our duty to concede to you, precisely the same kind of justice and charity, the same kind of severity and censure, which the other honorable pursuits of life are visited with. You have a duty and a right to demand, that your private characters shall be held as sacred as that of other public persons; your virtues and discretion as readily admitted; your weaknesses as truly deplored, and your guilt as resolutely punished. The license of the world, which would throw the scarf of its own self-indulgence over the ministers to its pleasure, in place of the mantle of Christian charity, can give you only a degrading cover. Toero is poison in the veil; it is Medea's gift to Creüsa. No! away with the forbearance of the world to actors and actresses! Away with its glosses for their vices! its hypocritical ignoring of their wickedness! its betraying tenderness towards the sins of its favorites! and welcome back the evenhanded justice, the discriminating judgment, the fair, righteous verdict due to all, on the single merits of the character, tried in the uniform scales of Christian and social morality. [Applause.]

DANGERS OF THE PROFESSION.

I have spoken of your life as a peculiarly perilous life—perilous to the moral nature; and before I explain particularly why it is so, let me say first the post of moral danger may be the post of moral honor. It by no means follows that because a line of life is hazardous to virtue, it is a life forbidden to a moral being. There may be reasons for adopting it which are imperative—such as a strong constitutional proclivity, making any other course exceedingly difficult; an early education, fitting for nothing else; a powerful combination of providential circumstances, shutting up to that path; or a parental will which had shaped that course before responsibility began. If the theatre be a social necessity, the profession of the actor is a lawful one; and its perils, while they should make it a calling slowly and reluctantly accepted by those who have a choice, are not such as to excuse any want of virtue, probity, or the strictest decorum, in any of its professors. If they were such, the calling would be self condemned. Perils and temptations are not of the nature of compulsive forces, and we are, none of us, having adopted a morally perilous vocation, to claim on that account any larger charity than other men of other callings. Only we are to put forth a greater and more constant effort to counteract these dangers. The life of a player is a morally perilous life chiefly because it is a public life; and public life in every form is trying to the character. The actor shares with the politician, the clergyman, the dangers of a career, in which he is continually appealing to masses; where he is an object of interest to masses; where strong temptations exist to substitute immediate reputation for self-respect; and to make fine words and skilful manœuvres, do the work of sound principles and patient performance of duty. Public life, in all its forms, is surrounded with flatterers and fawners, and tempted to the bargain and exchange of its opportunities for the opportunities of others. All men who live by the tongue, whether it be in the utterance of their own thoughts or those of others; whose reputation and livelihood is in the ear of the public, are greatly exposed men; and it would be a long step in self-knowledge, if the members of the clerical profession recognized the fact, that the seriousness of their subject does less than they think, to save them from the dangers which essentially belong to the calling vocations. The error of mistaking for the qualities of compulsion from the finger of faith, or the pleasure of uttering generous sentiments, for the labor of holding them for or natural sympathy with eloquent passion, for the courage and resolution of a good heart and life; this is the danger which rostrum, pulpit and stage may equally share; and the consciousness of which, I confess, increases my sense of fraternity with your calling. And yet it remains solemnly true that your profession is a dangerous profession, however lawful and necessary it may be and sharing in some respects its perils with others. It is peculiarly open to vanity, levity and sensuality—more dangerous than it need be, on account of the present state of public opinion—but necessarily dangerous in any state of public sentiment. Aiming to please, and finding its chief incentive in the applause it nightly excites; peculiarly exposed to jealousy; required to affect sentiments and personate characters not its own; usually in contact only with its own class; feeling deeply the need of animal spirits and practical exercise, most conveniently supplied by artificial stimulants; working chiefly in the night; vacillating between long seasons of leisure, and short periods of excessive labor; at the mercy of a capricious public, here very kind, and there very cruel; overpaid in its favorites, and underpaid in all who are not;—splendid for its stars, but dull for its stocks—what elements are wanting to make your profession one of very singular moral trial? It must not, however, be forgotten that it has its own advantages. It is not addicted to cupidity, nor wedded to mean and sordid habits. It does not breed hardness of heart and hypocrisy of conduct. It is free from cant, and singularly exempt from the vices calling for the police or the prison. It should be better known than it is—that actors, as a class, are far from being men of the world, in the bad sense of that phrase; they are usually persons of more simplicity, credulity or generosity, than of knowingness, design and self-seeking. Like sailors, more than any other people, their faults spring from the virtues calling for the police or the prison. generous, childlike and affectionate side of their nature, and are rather faults of weakness than of wickedness. Who, but an unworldly actor, would allow his estate to be wasted by his trustees, as the English papers within a few days report Sir William Don's to have been? In these days, when society is ridden with the right-name of thrift, and ungodly greed of gain, forgiving any vice that are economical and conducive to the public wealth, is not easy to estimate all the moral advantages which lovers of poetry and art, and servants of the drama, derive from their unproductive pursuits, and their essentially self-sacrificing callings. But with these allowances all made, it still becomes actors and actresses to understand and consider the moral perils of their craft, and to recognize the deep need they have of all the safeguards which a cultivated conscience and a religious faith can throw about them. If any class could be scrupulous observers of the laws of temperance and purity, students of sober literature, keepers at home, watchful and observant of domestic ties, practisers of great pleainess of costume in their private walks, quiet in manners, and careful seekers of friendship and intercourse with other classes than their own it is yours. Emphatically, if any class should be church-goers, it is yours. I know you owe the visible church little thanks; but the gospel and public worship, do not belong to its administrators; and God and Christ have not wronged, and will not wrong you. Do not sacrifice your duty to your Maker, your Saviour, and your souls, to your indignation at priests and parsons. [Laughter and applause.]

APPEAL TO MANAGERS.

I cannot conclude without a very serious word, addressed to managers of theatres, here and elsewhere. You have a large class of persons connected with the dramatic profession, under your control and influence; besides your regular and permanent companies, the various members of choruses, ballets, spectacles, and underlings of every description. I understand that your powers are necessarily quite despotic. That you choose the plays that are performed, assign the parts, and have the prosperity of individual actors and attachés very much in your own hands. I can hardly conceive a position of more responsibility than yours, or one in which more of good and evil can be done. First, in regard to the character of the plays and entertainments you furnish, you will hardly rise at once above the public taste, or be wiser and better than the community that supports you. But you will certainly find it for your interest in the long run, to exclude every kind of play or entertainment from your list, from which a virtuous heart must recoil, or at which an innocent cheek must blush. Be sure you gain nothing by the grossness or immorality of the plays you present. People will go to see great talent and great dramatic triumphs. In spite of the indecency or viciousness of the plots or incidents; but they would go a great deal more to see genius and power united with purity and truth. I take no narrow, squeamish view of the range of subjects proper for the stage, but plays which make light of moral distinctions, exonerate vice, reward crime, or ridicule religion, are essentially mischievous, and cannot be defended anywhere. If managers wish to place themselves on the same catalogue with pimps, they have only to continue to quote the public taste as an apology for producing immoral and depraving plays. All humor is due to those among them who strive to produce the legitimate drama, and I know and believe, that some managers feel a laudable and artistic loyalty to their profession, and make sacrifices to the exactions of taste, propriety and purity, which the public do not sufficiently appreciate. I entreat you to consider what an enormous influence you possess for good or evil, and not to refuse to cooperate with a rising class of moral and serious persons, who aim to redeem and reform the stage.

But your responsibilities are to the public. I know not that they are not great or to the persons you employ. If you are tyrannical in temper, loose in morals, partial in administration, unprincipled in pecuniary transactions, I know a class of men that can be greater oppressors and degraders, than the managers of theatres. Your power is necessarily great, and of putting in [illegible] your example irresistible. You have [illegible] of young women at your money; the reputation of young actors in your gift. You can advance your favorites and clog your objects of dislike; reward the public, and punish the well-principled. You can establish rules of strictest decency and justice in your domain, or allow riot, folly and vice to reign there. You can act as the elders and debtors of wealthy sinners outside, making your theatres hotbeds of licentiousness and vice, or you may convert them to schools of artistic taste and moral culture. Since my interest in this subject has been known, I have been made the depository of complaints and supplications, which I will not repeat because I am unwilling to believe. Moreover, I have reason to hope that decided moral improvement is the internal management of theatres is now in progress, and one most honorable to those who encourage it. I certainly make no specific charges against your important order, here or elsewhere. But knowing your peculiar opportunities and experiences—with the character of your whole profession in your keeping—I feel bound to warn you [of the absolute necessity of rising above every temptation.

CONCLUSION.

And so, gentlemen of the American Dramatic Fund Society, I conclude my long address, wishing that I had had time to make it shorter, and less unworthy of the occasion. A heaven supported determination to do an act of justice and public duty could alone have overcome my reluctance to encounter either favorable or unfavorable publicity. The mere rumor of this address has already let loose the never-too-charitable tongue of the religious press in censure and dispargement, while my course has been intelligently approved by the secular papers. I trust neither will waste much time in personal blame or praise of me, but will rather devote themselves to an honest discussion of the fundamental principles involved in this subject. If it cannot be understood how a minister of Christ can feel an honest love for art, and pleasure, and the amusements of the people, much less a brotherly sympathy with actors as a class, I shall not wonder nor complain. The questioning of motives, and the imputation of a worldliness and levity, are expected quite as a matter of course. But firm in the love and confidence of a well-tried, intelligent and sober constituency, I can surely afford to wait for justice. [Applause.]

In the rapid unfolding of the great Drama of American Civilization—its principal scene, this capital City—the part has fallen to me to show the relation of public amusements to public morality, and to claim for the stage a new and better position in society.

In the very depths of my conscience, I have been impelled to this effort. It has been honestly made, in the fear of God and in view of judgment to come. That some blessing to your profession, the drama, our country, and mankind, may follow it, can only be my humble hope and prayer. [Prolonged applause.]

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

Decisions in Revenue Cases.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT—APRIL 28.

Judge HALL has sent down decisions in the following revenue cases heard before him when he was last here:

EXCESS OF DUTIES—CIGARS—VALUE IN INVOICE A FRAUD UPON THE IMPORTER.

Benjamin H. Little et al. vs. Heman J. Redfield.—This was an action brought to recover back a certain excess of duties exacted by the defendant as Collector of this port upon certain entries of cigars of various brands. The cigars had been purchased under a contract, and were invoiced as of the 1st, 2d and 3d grades, and the duties were paid or deposited on the valuation in the invoice. On examining them, however, it was found that they had been fraudulently invoiced, those of the 2d grade being invoiced as of the 1st, and those of the 3d as of the 2d—and the Government appraisers when the matter was called to their attention determined that the fact was so, and that the invoice should be reduced accordingly—and the plaintiffs claimed that the duties should be assessed on the reduced valuation. The Collector was apparently willing to correct the error if he could do so with the authority of the Secretary of the Treasury. The matter was in negotiation for some till that authority was refused, and after that the entries were adjusted and liquidated.

Held by the Court—That there was sufficient evidence of a fraud upon the importers, by a misdescription of the goods in the invoices, and that when the fraud was discovered it was the duty of the Collector to have corrected the assessment of duties accordingly. The grades are matters of description.

That under the case of Marriott vs. Brune, the protest was made in time.

For plaintiffs, Mr. McCulloh; for defendant, Mr. McKeon.

SUFFICIENCY OF PROTEST—ROSEWOOD FURNITURE.

George Ponsot vs. Cornelius W. Lawrence.—This was an action to recover back duties alleged to have been illegally exacted by the defendant as collector. A verdict was taken for the plaintiff for $1,500, subject to the opinion of the Court. The only question was as to the sufficiency of the protests. There were five entries of goods. The first one embraced "rosewood and mnogany furniture, common wood furniture, rosewood furniture, and silk and worsted goods." The protest annexed is "against paying" 40 per cent. duty on rosewood furniture, as specified in his entry, believing it should pay 30 per cent. as cabinet furniture." The other entries and protests are similar.

Held by the Court—That these protests related to a specific article embraced in the entries. "Rosewood furniture" is a well known and specific term, and the protests cannot be extended beyond what is properly and specifically embraced within them. Furniture of other woods, silk and worsted goods, and furniture of rosewood and common wood together, or rosewood and mahogany together, must be excluded from their operation.

Judgment for plaintiff, for the sum appearing to be due on these principles—the amount to be ascertained by adjustment at the Custom House, or as the parties may otherwise prefer.

For plaintiff, Mr. McCulloh; for defendant, Mr. McKeon.

SUIT IN EQUITY—REDELIVERY BOND AND FORFEITURE—JURISDICTION.

Alexander Powell et al. vs. Heman J. Redfield and John McKeon.—This was a bill in equity filed to compel the defendants to elect to prosecute one of two actions now pending in the United States District Court, and to abandon the other. The defendants demurred to the bill, and the demurrer and the motion for a preliminary injunction were argued together.

The first suit in the District Court is upon a redelivery bond in the penalty of $20,000, the entry of the goods being indorsed as of the estimated value of $3,357 only. The bond was taken under the 4th section of the act of May 28, 1830.

The other suit is brought to forfeit the same goods, which were 42 casks of hides, and two casks of skivers, for undervaluation.

Held by the Court—That it is not certain that the whole penalty of the bond could be recovered, but if it could, that right is a strict legal right, and this Court has no power to remit or mitigate any forfeiture. The extent of the recovery is a question rather for the District Court, from whose decision the matter can be brought up by appeal.

That if the goods have not been seized, they cannot be forfeited in the second suit unless the plaintiff, by giving a bond or by their form of pleading or omission of pleading in that suit have precluded themselves from denying it. But if this has occurred, their proper remedy is by application to the District Court.

That even though the claim of the United States was to forfeit the whole of the goods when they had a legal right to forfeit the two casks of skivers only, yet this claim cannot confer jurisdiction upon this Court. It presents a simple question of legal interpretation and construction, and the District Court is the one where the question must first be decided. If the whole invoice is forfeited, there is no power in this Court to sustain the forfeiture, and if it is not, this Court is bound to presume that the District Court will so determine.

That even if there could be a recovery in both suits, this Court would have no power to interfere, and the plaintiff's only remedy would be by an application to the Secretary of the Treasury for a remission.

The motion for a preliminary injunction must be denied and the demurrer to the bill allowed with costs.

For complainant, Mr. McCulloh. For defendants, Mr. McKeon.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT—APRIL 27.

COLLISION.

William H. Sears vs. the Bark Arcadian.—This was a libel filed by the owner of the schooner Champion to recover the damages occasioned to her by a collision with the Arcadian, which occurred in broad daylight, on the 20th day of August, 1855, some six or eight miles off Little Egg Harbor. The weather was mild, but both vessels were in a crippled condition; the Champion from a gale, and the Arcadian from sickness on board. Both parties substantially agree as to the condition and course of the two vessels.

Held by the Court—That there was culpable remissness in the Arcadian in keeping under way with full sail without a watch on deck, as no signal or notice was given to the Champion that her crew were disabled by sickness.

That the Champion was correctly navigated in the state of facts made known to her.

Decree for libelant with a reference to ascertain the damages.

For libelant, Mr. Cushing; for claimant, Messrs. Beebe, Dean & Donohue.

COLLISION—JOINT NEGLIGENCE OF SHIP AND STEAM TUG.

Herman Boyer vs. The ship Wisconsin and the steamboat Hector.—This was a libel filed by the owner of the lighter Republic to recover the damages occasioned by a collision. On the 15th day of October, about noon, the lighter, with part of a cargo of flour, was making for the dock at the foot of Dover-street. The tide was nearly or just at the turn of the flood, and there was little or no wind, as the Wisconsin claimed; and he alleged that the lighter had come up the East River on the flood tide, and with her sweeps out was making in to the dock, when the ship towed alongside of the steamer, coming in to the same pier, ran into her, the howeprit of the ship striking toe top of the lighter's mast, and careening her over so that her flour rolled out and she filled and sunk. The claimants alleged that the headway of the tow was stopped, but the lighter coming under a fresh breeze, ran against the ship and tipped over by her own motion.

Held by the Court—That upon the whole evidence the libelant has supported the cause of action set up in his pleadings and outweighed the facts alleged by the claimants.

The two vessels were guilty of a violation of the rules imposed on them by the law. The offence was a common one—the two vessels being lashed together and moved by the engine of the tug, and the pilot being given by the ship. Her master was also in command of the course of navigation pursued. They are accordingly jointly responsible for the loss sustained by the libelant.

Decree condemning both vessels for the damages, with a reference to ascertain the damages.

For libelant—Messrs. Benedict, Burr & Benedict; for the ship—Messrs. Williams & Barnard and Mr. Owen; for the tug—Messrs. Martin & Smiths and Mr. Donohue.

The Delaware and Hudson Canal Company vs. The Steamboat Alida.—This was a suit brought to recover the value of coal supplied to the steamer at Rondout.

Held by the Court—That a delivery of the coal on the wharf alongside or near the vessel, by order of her officers, was tantamount to a delivery on board. So as to create the lien, it is not necessary that the coal should be ultimately consumed on board, nor in fact be placed within or upon the vessel. It is sufficient if the whole lot was purchased by the vessel and put in her possession, to be used as she required it in her navigation.

That the law indicates no different rule in respect to the lien, whether the supply, after it has gone to and been received by the ship as part of her furnishment, remains permanently with her, or is put on shore again, or even not hoisted into the vessel.

A decree was rendered in this case for the libelants, but a decision of the U. S. Supreme Court, at the last term, in the case of Vandewater vs. Mills, seeming to hold that such a sale and delivery of fuel to a domestic vessel does not create a lien upon her, having been afterwards brought to the notice of the Court, a suspension of the judgment in this case was ordered, to enable the claimant to move for a reargument of it. For libelant, ——; for claimant, B. W. Bonney.

The Police Commission.

SUPREME COURT.

Before Judge Peabody.

The People ex rel. Fernando Wood vs. Simeon Draper, James W. Nye, Jacob Cholwell, James Bowen, and James S. T. Stranahan.—An application was made yesterday afternoon by Wm. M. Evarts, Esq., on the part of the defendants in this action, for an ex parte order to show cause why the injunction against the defendants, granted by Judge Roosevelt on Saturday last, should not be dissolved, the order to be returnable this (Wednesday) morning, at 10 o'clock.

Judge Edmonds—May we not know what it is?

Mr. Evarts—This is an open and not a secret application. It is, however, an ex parte application, on which no one can be heard except in favor.

Mr. O'Conor—Any member of the bar can make an explanation as amicus curiæ (friend of the Court.)

Mr. Evarts—Certainly.

Judge Edmonds then stated that the same application had been made to Judge Roosevelt on Monday, and the papers were still held under advisement by him.

Mr. Evarts stated that the order had been refused by Judge R. It was therefore made to Judge Peabody, and Mr. E. hoped that it would be either granted or refused. When the order was returned then would be the time for argument.

Judge Edmunds thought that if the application had been refused by Judge R. it should not be granted now. Mr. Evarts then modified his statement by saying that at any rate Judge R. had not yet granted the motion, and the defendants had not pressed it and had withdrawn the papers.

Judge PEABODY said that he would have granted the order instanter, if there was not the difficulty in regard to the application to Judge Roosevelt. It was a rule of the Court for one Judge not to grant an order refused by another on the same papers.

Mr. Field explained the matter. The counsel on the other side interfered before Judge R., as they did here, with an ex parte motion, and insisted to be heard, although they themselves obtained ex parte injunction without any one being present. If the order was granted, then they were ready to argue it now. An injunction granted in a quo warranto was unheard of, and they wished to argue in favor of its being dissolved.

Judge PEABODY asked Mr. Vanderpool in regard to the withdrawal of the papers, whereupon Mr. V. stated the facts of the case, and also that he had himself withdrawn the papers. He had also informed Judge R. that they did not accede to his proposition to argue the whole matter before all the five Judges on Thursday.

Mr. O'Conor, still opposing the application as amicus curiæ, made a long statement, after which Mr. Field said he had yet to learn that two gentlemen who were merely amici curiæ, could oppose an ex parte application. He was, however, obliged to correct some false statements on the part of Mr. O'Conor, as to Judge Roosevelt's refusal to grant the application. He had, however, no doubt that Judge Roosevelt had fully determined, from the beginning, to grant them no relief unless they would submit to something which the law would not oblige them to submit to. To this they were not inclined. If refused here they would go to every other Judge to get the application granted.

Judge PEABODY had heard the statement of Mr. Vanderpool, and was satisfied that the papers had been withdrawn before the application had been refused. He would not hesitate himself to grant the application, but wished first to hear counsel on the expediency of shortening the time of notice.

Mr. Evarts then addressed the Court, explaining such expediency. In the complaint in this action there was not the slightest prayer for an injunction, and as a matter of practice it would only have been granted on an affidavit of Mr. Fernando Wood. From the time that the Commissioners had organized, the powers of the old Board had ceased, and from the time that Judge Roosevelt had granted the injunction till now, was the first occasion in the history of the writ of quo warranto that an injunction had been issued against officers in office, in favor of those who had been ousted.

Mr. O'Conor, as amicus curiæ, replied to Mr. Evarts at great length. He argued that the Police were now under the supervision of the present Chief of Police, who would not be superseded until the new "Superintendent" might be appointed.

Judge Edmonds, as the other amicus curiæ, also opposed the application. He denied that the former Board of Commissioners had been ousted from office by the organization, because the new Board, although having been sworn in, and having organized as required by law, had not yet assumed the powers of the office. He was going on to argue the merits of the whole question, when he was stopped by Judge PEABODY, who stated that he only wished to hear argument in regard to the expediency of shortening the time, in consequence of inconvenience arising towards the defendants by the injunction.

Judge Edmonds did not avail himself of this information, but went on at length, both in regard to this case and the one before Judge Davies.

Mr. Noyes replied. They had intended to have this application entirely ex parte, and it was extraordinary that under pretence of "aiding the court" a long discussion of the general merits of the question had been called up by the amici curiæ.

He wished to know whether these statements were to be replied to or whether the matter of time should merely be discussed.

Judge PEABODY stated that the latter was all that he wished to hear about.

Mr. Noyes continued, that the only real reason urged by the amici curiæ opposing this motion was to see if they could find a precedent. He had considerable experience in these matters and he would assert that there never had been a case in which an officer, in office, had been enjoined by the Court, and if respect for the Judge who granted the injunction, did not deter him, he would say that it was a gross usurpation of power on his part.

As for this order to show cause, it was an everyday proceeding, and it was strange that the ablest counsel at the New York Bar wanted time to study the law on the subject. If they were uncertain about their rights, they should not have obtained the injunction. It was a matter of everyday practice to grant orders to show cause for the same day; and here was a matter of the very greatest importance, whether an act of the Legislature should be contemned, and yet the plaintiff was unwilling to argue the matter at less than eight days' notice. If those who had been enjoined and had had but little time to prepare, were ready for argument, should not the plaintiffs, who had had plenty of time, be ready to go on. Therefore, they wished the application to be granted or denied.

Judge PEABODY said he had no doubt that it was his duty to grant the order, and merely wished the counsel to agree upon a time. It would suit him best to have it argued on Thursday morning.

Judge Edmonds agreed to, but Messrs. Field and Noyes opposed this time. They wished to have it heard on Wednesday.

The time for the return of the order to show cause, was fixed at last for to-day, at 3 P. M.

Before Hon. Justice Mitchell.

THE ALLEGED MERCANTILE FRAUD.

Moncrieff and Mitchell vs. Bebbman.—This case which has before been noticed in the TIMES, was argued yesterday on a motion for receiver. It will be remembered that last January the defendant purchased goods from the plaintiff to the value of over $3,000, on credit at eight months, for which he gave his note. The plaintiffs recently learned that the defendant was disposing of his property, as they allege, to defraud his creditors. They therefore charge him with fraud in purchasing the goods and representing himself as solvent, when in fact he was insolvent, and sue him for the amount of the note, and move that a receiver be appointed. His Honor will probably render a decision soon.

DECISIONS.

Delapierre vs. Clark.—Order of reference to R. Reed, Esq., granted.

Langworthy vs. Pennington.—If defendant was defaulted in this motion it can be granted so far as it asks a reference, and that commission issue to examine witnesses out of the State.

produced in Paris by the representation of this piece was so great that the Emperor and Empress attended the theatre on several occasions during the first representations.

LEGEND.—The mountain forests of Pastoria are inhabited, it is said, by Pixies, Sprites and Elves, who, like the Phantom Dancers of Germany, delight to entrap travelers into their realms and torment them with their mischievous antics. Having the power of transferring the spirit, they often, in their malicious gambols, give life to the newly dead. Statues, rocks and trees are seen fantastically moving in the forest, but it is only during the DAY they retain their fictitious existence; at the approach of NIGHT they resume their immobility.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

We have received files of Mexican journals to the 6th inst. An insurrectionary movement—in which Senor AGUILAR a former minister of SANTA ANA, is implicated—was detected and suppressed on the 2d. The higher clergy continue to agitate, and endeavor to provoke civil war in the Republic. In the capital the Archbishop has gone so far as to refuse absolution to those who swear obedience to the new Constitution. No doubt, however, is entertained by respectable people but that the Government will triumph over its enemies, both lay and clerical. Many of the clergy have refused to submit to the arbitrary decrees of the Archbishop, or to follow his incendiary instructions to preach rebellion against the civil authorities of the land. Though it is not believed that the present rupture with Spain will lead to actual hostilities, yet the anticipation of such an event is creating a more national spirit, by uniting opposite factions for the defence of their common country against the common enemy. It is stated that the British Chargé had presented his ultimatum. If his demands were not satisfied within nine days from the date of their presentation, he was determined to close the legation.

We have later news from Havana by the Philadelphia at this port, and the Isabel at Charleston. It is reported that neither the Spanish Government nor Gen. CONCHA would oppose the erection of a Protestant Church and an American Hospital near the city of Havana, if these privileges were made the subject of a formal request. The report comes to us from a reliable source, and is worth the consideration of our Government. Preparations for the invasion of Mexico continue. The Marquis of Havana, according to our correspondent, will accept the post of Commander-in-Chief. His subordinate generals have been already appointed. The Cuban Slave trade seems to be in a flourishing condition, and is prosecuted, without let or hindrance, under the eyes of the authorities.

We have another contradiction of the reports of Indian murders in Minnesota. Gen. SHIELDS has written a letter, dated the 15th inst., in which he pointedly contradicts the stories of the barbarities at Mankato, and stating that there is neither hostility, nor a sign of hostility, among the Indian tribes in the territory. This is confirmed by other authorities.

Rev. Dr. BELLOWS last night delivered, at the Academy of Music, his promised Address on "The Relation of Public Amusements with Public Morality," &c. It will be found in full in our columns this morning.

The Annual Election of Trustees of the Society Library took place last night. A misunderstanding of a serious nature having arisen between the Board of Trustees for the past year and the Librarian, Mr. MCMULLEN, a lively time was the result. There was a "Regular" ticket and a "McMullen" ticket. The result was not made known till shortly past midnight, when the tellers announced that the regular ticket was elected, with the exception of Mr. CHARLES E. STRONG, the late Treasurer, who was defeated by three votes, Mr. GULIAN C. VERPLANCK having 115 votes, while Mr STRONG had 112. The list of elected Trustees will, therefore, read as follows: Charles R. Swords, R. L. Kennedy, Wm. H. Anthon, J. P. G. Foster, William Adams, Henry Van Schaick, George C. Anthon, Lewis C. Jones, Wolcot Gibbs, Robert Le Roy, Otis D. Swan, William J. Hoppin, Benjamin H. Field, George T. Elliot, G. C. Verplanck.

At the meeting of the Board of Aldermen, last evening, an opinion was received from the Corporation Counsel to the effect that any action of the Common Council with reference to a reorganization of the Departments, would not effect the constitutionality or unconstitutionality of any act of the Legislature. They concurred with the Councilmen, in devoting $1,000 to the widow of the late Officer HARDENBROOK.

The Councilmen had a very stormy time last night. A resolution had been adopted that a committee of five be appointed to overhaul Comptroller FLAGG's books; but on one of many amendments to the proposition giving the committee authority to employ $1,000 worth of clerical help (which was lost finally), three members, Messrs. OTTARSON, KENNARD and JONES, refused to vote, though not excused. It ended in appointing a committee to report upon the case of the refractory members. The attempt to appropriate $10,000 for testing the validity of the new charter, was lost for want of a constitutional vote; afterwards, by a re-consideration, it was tabled.

At the Board of Governors of the Almshouse, last evening, a communication was received from ROBERT KING, one of the keepers of the Penitentiary, complaining that the Warden improperly converted to his own use a portion of the supplies, consisting of 62½ bushels of potatoes. The matter was referred to the Committee on Penitentiary to report. A communication was received from a majority of school officers of Twelfth Ward as to the case of Miss JACKSON. They justify their action, and claim that they have legal control over the school. Another communication was received from three of the school officers, who believe that the usefulness of Miss JACKSON is at an end. They took no final action on the subject.

The summing up in the French Railroad Frauds case was commenced yesterday before U. S. Commissioner BETTS.

The case of Capt RUSSELL, of the ship Cultivator, charged with cruelty on board, was held before U. S. Commissioner STILLWELL yesterday. There was no evidence implicating the Captain, and he was discharged. A similar charge against the First and Second Mates will be investigated early in May.

The case of the schooner Merchant, the suspected slaver, and the examination of the crews of the Merchant and the John Birkbeck, will, it is understood, take place on Thursday, before U. S. Commissioner MORTON.

The old Anatomical Museum on Broadway, which has so long shocked the modesty of citizens with its handbills, promising the sight of all sorts of diseased persons, departed its premises yesterday, and went into privacy. The building it occupied is to come down, and a new store to go up in its stead.

The investigation in the Burdell matter, before the Surrogate, was postponed yesterday, in order to permit counsel to devote their time to the preparation of their defence in the criminal case against Mrs. Cunningham, which, it was announced, would commence on Monday.

Mrs. BENTLEY finished her thirty consecutive hours of walking in the Tabernacle last night. Capt. RYNDERS, who was present, at the conclusion made for a speech a $3 contribution to the box towards the "support of the three fatherless children" in whose behalf Mrs. BENTLEY walked.

The New Excise Law.

The new License Law seems likely to measure the amount of common sense that still lingers in the community. Fanatical partisans on both sides of the Temperance question are determined to defeat its practical enforcement. The Liquor Dealers resist it because it restrains and limits their traffic;—the Delavan Prohibitionists resist it because it does not abolish the traffic altogether. Thus these two extreme factions play into each other's hands, and the interest of the public in the matter is sacrificed to the wranglings and contentions of two party cliques, equally selfish in their aims and equally unscrupulous in the means they adopt for attaining them.

One thing is clear:—If the matter of Temperance is to be left in their hands, the country must have one of two things,—absolute free trade in Liquor, or entire prohibition of every thing that can intoxicate:—and what is still worse, and equally certain, it can have neither of these long at a time, but must oscillate backward and forward from one to the other, as the popular majority may shift, or the chances and changes of political life may decide. The Executive Committee of the State Temperance Society have decided that they will "sustain nothing but prohibition,"—that they will not aid in enforcing any law which is only partially prohibitory,—and that they will permit the desolating tide of Intemperance to sweep over the land for "years, generations, or centuries, if necessary," rather than give their countenance to any law which seeks anything short of total and absolute prohibition. The Liquor Dealers throughout the State will cordially and zealously acquiesce in this decision, for it gives them full swing for a very indefinite time. If Mr. DELAVAN, indeed, had been acting as the President and Adviser of the Liquor Dealers' Association, he could not possibly have acted more directly in their interest, or done more to promote their special welfare as a class, than he has done by this proceeding.

Of course we do not imply or suppose that the motive of the Temperance Committee was thus to play into the hands of the liquor-selling interest, although their action leads directly to that result. They have been misled into this false and fatal step by the delusive and fatal spirit of partisanship. They are far more anxious to keep up a Temperance party than to promote temperance practices. Like all parties, they mistake their own selfish and ambitious aims for principle;—and steadiness in the pursuit of power they assume to be consistency in the support of measures. They betray the whole secret of their movement when they say, in the address from which we quoted yesterday, that they cannot aid in enforcing this law without making it their law, and weakening the strength of their party position just in proportion to the benefits and advantages which the law itself may produce. They will defeat and nullify the law if they can, in the hope that its failure may put the power of making another into their hands. And so the millions of the people of this great State are to suffer for years to come all the evils of an unchecked, unrestrained and unregulated traffic in intoxicating liquors, in order to bring the leaders of this party into political office. The contest, in fact, is the same which reappears in regard to every question—that between PARTY and the PUBLIC.

As a general thing, we are well aware, the active, energetic and zealous portion of the community are enrolled in the ranks of one party or the other,—and whatever is done of a public nature must be done by them. If that is so in this case,—if the great body of our people belong either to the ultra school of extreme Prohibitionists who will have that or nothing,—or to the party which makes free-trade in liquor its leading principle, then the new law will be a dead letter, for nobody will take the pains to attend to its enforcement. But if there is a large class of our people who care more for the public good than for party success,—who believe that whatever checks and diminishes intemperance does good to society, and that duty demands of every man that he should avail himself of every opportunity within his reach to render a service to his fellows,—then the law may be enforced in spite of the ominous coalition of Liquor Dealers and the Temperance Society against it.

We make no predictions, because we are by no means sanguine, as to the issue. Party Spirit has much more to do with the conduct of public affairs than Patriotism or Common Sense. Yet we shall hope for a result less discreditable to the intelligence and the sound, sober morality of the people of this State, than the one which the extreme partisans of Rum and Water have joined their forces to bring about.

Chaos Coming.

The municipal reformers of this magnificent City of ours have a way of not doing what they attempt, that would do credit to Tite Barnacle, Esq., of the Circumlocution Office. Last November they wanted to prevent the reelection of Mayor WOOD; they professed to believe that this was all-important to save the City from disgrace and ruin; they knew they had sufficient strength to enable them to accomplish their object with entire ease, by uniting their force on one candidate; and, therefore, they nominated four candidates and were defeated as a matter of course, by their adversary. But, Mayor WOOD having been elected by their petty squabbles and differences about trifles, they next set to work to oust him from his place by a change of the City Charter, and to prevent him from doing any more mischief by depriving him of all power over the police, and taking from his hands the nomination of certain local officers to which he was constitutionally entitled. They thus have invested the object of their machinations with the sanctity of persecution, and made him, to a degree, the champion of the people, in whose name he is ruining what many of them believe to be the despotic usurpation of the Legislature. He has the Common Council on his side, and thus far he seems to have the Judiciary also; and let the result of the injunctions which he has obtained be what it may, we have the sure prospect of having the whole machinery of our City Government in chaotic condition for a considerable time to come, and all the expenses of the struggle are to be defrayed out of the City treasury.

If Mayor WOOD continues to exercise his authority over the Police, as he is sure to do, it has been intimated that the new Commissioners will create and organize a distinct Police force, and then we may witness a fight between the two forces for the possession of the City. The new Commissioners have a decided advantage over the Mayor in one respect—the new law does not limit the number of policemen which they may appoint, while the Mayor is not only restricted in the number of his forces, but he has no authority over the neighboring Districts of Westchester, Kings County and Staten Island, where the new Commissioners may raise as large a force as they may consider necessary. There is a possibility of a grand fight, which will give the public something to talk about during the next three months. The new Commissioners may not feel themselves bound to yield up their functions at the command of a quo warranto issued by Judge ROOSEVELT. But we shall see what we shall see before long.

Part of the Central Park Commissioners were sworn into office yesterday, and there have been intimations that they, too, are to be served with a quo warranto, and that a similar course will be pursued towards the City Hall Commissioners, whenever they make an attempt to enter upon the discharge of their duties. We have not yet heard whether Mr. Commissioner EBLING of the Street and Lamp Department, intends to resist the new Charter, or not, and hold on to his office until the expiration of the term for which he was elected, but it will be a remarkable instance of respect for the laws if he should quietly acquiesce in the act which deprives him of his place. In addition to the resistance to the new Charter and the Police bill by the Mayor and Common Council, it is said that the merchants intend to contest the legality of the new Port Wardens, so that there is every prospect of the lawyers having plenty of work on their hands, and of the public interests being left to take care of themselves just at that season of the year when efficient officers are most needed.

England and America.

Any one who has made a practice of perusing the orations of American Ministers at Lord Mayor's dinners in London, or of British Ministers in Washington, or who has listened to the oratory at Mr. PEABODY'S Star and Garter dinners, or, in fact, at any festive gathering in which Englishmen and Americans find themselves in company, and feel called upon to make a speech, will perfectly understand us when we say that we are heartily sick of "fraternizing" in the ordinary acceptation of the term. We find it absolutely nauseating to be told anything more about the identity of origin and of language of the two peoples. We know very well that SHAKESPEARE is ours, and MILTON is ours, and JACK CADE and OWEN GLENDOWER are ours. We know that we drew a long bow at Cressy, and spurred very hard at Agincourt. We know that we extorted Magna Charta from John at Runnymede, and had our throats cut in the Wars of the Roses. All this, and a great deal more of the same sort of intelligence, is poured into our ears every day by benevolent individuals who are, no doubt, sincerely anxious that the two countries should be united in the bonds of harmony and good feeling, but who, we must say, are yearly becoming greater bores. The great truth that America and England are more closely united in all sorts of ways than any two countries in the world, is now so well established that we earnestly counsel all postprandial orators to leave the theme alone, and find some more interesting topic on which to expend their energies.

There is one branch of the subject, however, which has not been, by any means, so well explored, and on which a good deal of light might be thrown, if our journalists were a little more honest, and our politicians a little less knavish. We commend most cordially to the attention of all "representative men," whose tongues may be loosed by good food and good wine, the delusion so rife in this country, that the English are devoured by jealousy of us, and are forever plotting our detriment and damage. It is high time we got rid of this terrible incubus. It has as yet served no purpose on earth except to furnish a ladder for demagogues to climb into power, and to enable the unscrupulous and ambitious to trade in our fears and our hates. We were glad to find that Lord NAPIER addressed himself to this point, at the St. George's Dinner, with great force and felicity, and we hope his example may do something toward driving hackneyed compliments out of use. He said:

"GENTLEMEN: I have, since my arrival, sometimes observed an impression in the United States, that the development of this country is regarded with jealousy by England. Gentlemen, this is an erroneous opinion. [Cheers.] You will bear me out in the assertion that the last vestiges of former prejudice, founded on the animosities of two unhappy wars, are being very rapidly extinguished. The peaceful and legitimate expansion of the United States forms a matter of satisfaction and pride to every reasonable Englishman. That expansion forms the best resort and relief for our superabundant population; it forms the best market for our increasing industry: it is the triumph of our labor and our arts, of our language, our religion, and our blood. [Loud cheers.] No thoughtful Englishman can contemplate this unparalleled spectacle of future predominance without emotions of thankfulness and praise. No thoughtful foreigner can regard it without a sigh, because Providence has not reserved the future empire of the world for his own tongue and his own race." [Cheers.]

No one who possesses the slightest familiarity with the current opinions of English society upon American progress and institutions, can avoid feeling the truth and force of these remarks. Our absurd estimate of our own importance has prevented a great number of good people in this country from getting hold of the very obvious and simple truth, that it is possible for the same events to wear very different aspects on different sides of the Atlantic; that the importance of almost every incident in history is an importance purely relative, and that the less deeply our interests are involved, the less strongly are our passions roused. It is a common weakness of vain persons to suppose that the attention of the public is absorbed by their doings, and sayings, and looks. When Jones, the dry goods clerk, walks down Broadway in the morning, he fancies every one he meets is horrified by the annoying pimple which but yesterday sprang up on his nose, just as he imagines that his boots or his coat are the objects of universal admiration. There is just as much that is undignified and pitiful in constantly suspecting people of hating us, and plotting against us, as in suspecting them of envying and admiring us. Both spring from over-susceptibility to outward influences and want of self-confidence.

The War of Independence was, by no means, as stupendous an event for the English as for us. The most of the people in England knew and said little about it. Those who did were violently opposed to it. The ablest orator that England ever had spent his last breath in protesting against it. It was essentially a war begun and carried on by a corrupt oligarchy for base and corrupt motives.

It has left no impression except a purely historical one upon the minds of the English public. English school histories speak of it with marked disapprobation. English boys read of Bunker's Hill and Lexington with almost as hearty a sympathy for the Colonists as they ever feel for CLIVE on the field of Passy, or NAPIER at Moodkee. Americans are not their natural enemies. They do not fight them on the play-ground. They are taught to recite PATRICK HENRY'S speeches with fervor, and place WASHINGTON in the same category with HAMPDEN and FALKLAND and SYDNEY. No Englishman ever speaks of the father of his country to a foreigner without a touch of pardonable pride at the thought that he was of English origin and English habits, and might have been transferred to an English hunting-field or the English House of Commons, without affording any perceptible indication of the fact that he was not from top to toe an English gentleman. The United States have been tenfold more profitable to the Mother Country as an independent nation, than they could ever have been as dependent Colonies. Everybody in England knows of all this. If we owned the whole of the continent from Greenland to Cape Horn, no one would profit more by the extension of our dominion than England herself. Wherever the star-spangled banner waves, it waves over a good and rapidly increasing market for English goods. The whole tendency of the British Colonial policy for the last twenty years, has been to render the Colonies independent of her, or abandon them to their own devices. As far as self-government goes, Canada is to-day in as good a position as the United States, plus some thousands of soldiers for the defence of her frontiers, supported out of the British treasury. This certainly does not indicate much desire on the part of the Crown to repress our growth. To allow the process of assimilation to go on in one of her own Colonies lying on our frontier, without affording the slightest evidence of qualm or misgiving, is certainly not evidence of hatred of our institutions, or jealousy of our progress. We certainly cannot think at this moment of anything in the present state of public feeling more discreditable and more wounding to our pride, than the fact that the meanest stump-orator has only to mouth denunciations of Great Britain in bad English, to call down thunders of applause from assemblages of the freest and most enlightened people on the globe.

Street-Paving.

After the 1st of May the Croton Aqueduct Department will be empowered, under the new charter, to repair the gross neglect which has been so long permitted, in relation to the condition of the pavements of this metropolis. A bureau of pipes, sewers and pavements will be under the direction of the Board, which will be intrusted henceforth with the care of piercing sewers and drains and laying the pavements. We fear that there are but few streets in the City, which would not be able, if stones could cry out, to tell a separate tale of corruption of their own, indicative of the manner in which the treasury has been plundered, under the auspices of the Department of Supplies and Repairs and the contractors who have heretofore had them in charge. These abuses ought all to be remedied, and the public should watch carefully that the newly constituted authorities do their duty.

An instance of the disgraceful manner in which contracts have been made and executed, under the expiring dynasty, is afforded in the case of Mr. PETTIGREW, who secured from the Common Council, over a year ago, the quarter-of-a-million job of laying Chatham-street and the Bowery with Belgian pavement. The work was left off last Fall, near Pearl-street, in consequence of the appointment of a Special Committee, by the Board of Aldermen, to investigate the nature of the labor already performed. It was then well understood that the terms of the contract had not been complied with—that blocks of stone smaller than the stipulated size had been used, and that they rested only on a gravel ground, whereas the agreement was that there should be a foundation of sand one foot in depth. This Special Committee never reported! Nothing has ever been known of their real or supposed proceedings, and the only conclusion which remains is to suppose a collusion between its members and Mr. PETTIGREW, equally discreditable to them all. In any case, in view of the approaching dissolution of the old Departments, Mr. PETTIGREW recommenced his work a few days ago, and has since then hurried it forward with indecent and neglectful rapidity. He will be paid, we suppose, by the City, and the Treasury will be fairly mulcted of a sum sufficient to have laid the whole of the streets properly, which he will leave unoven and a fit subject for the immediate action of the Croton Department.

The chaos which has long reigned on the line of the Canal-street extension is another scandalous instance of mismanagement. The contract for paving it, from Centre-street to its junction with East Broadway, with the Belgian blocks, was awarded, a great while ago, to Mr. CHARLES G. WATERBURY, at the unprecedentedly low price of one dollar and thirty-nine cents the square yard. The contract not having been confirmed by the Common Council until the middle of last Winter, the contractor could only commence operations this Spring. Thus, a crowded portion of the City has been blocked up and rendered impassable, and the work is now going on—we trust efficiently—but at a most suspicious moment, just when the Croton Department are about to assume the charge which has been so long left unattended to.

The frequent practice of contractors, hitherto, has been to dig up the old pavement, stir the gravel, and relay the stones just as they were before. As a consequence, the first rain, or indeed the passage of the first train of heavy carts, has been all-sufficient to put the streets into as bad or worse a condition than [illegible] the job has remained to be done over again often to enrich once, twice, or a dozen times—the same scoundrels who were guilty of violating their obligations in the first instance. All this we hope the Croton Department will correct, and that, under a new régime, we shall witness a reform which is most imperative.

Relieving the East River—The Sound Steamers to Land Up Town.

The East River has become the crowded Broadway of our port, and the perils to which passengers crossing it are exposed, particularly at points between the Battery and the Navy-Yard, are daily getting to be more complicated and dangerous. This watery avenue which separates us from the Cities of Brooklyn and Williamsburg needs, like our dusty Broadway, to be relieved of everything that unnecessarily obstructs its free navigation, embarrasses business on its shores, or, more than all, puts in jeopardy any of the one hundred thousand Ferry passengers who daily pass between our City and Long Island.

The most dangerous obstruction to a free use of the East River, both for passenger transits and for business along its shores, and the one which has become a matter of general complaint, is the large steamers which ply between New-York and ports on Long Island Sound, making their landings at the lower part of the City. Six large steamers running to and from Hartford, New-Haven and Bridgeport, make their landings on the East River near Peck-Slip; while six large steamers running on the Boston routes by way of Norwich, Stonington and Fall River pass down the entire length of the East River, double the Battery and make their landing on the North River side of the City. In addition to these, several large freight propellers, plying between New-York and various cities on the New-England coast, as far East as Portland in the State of Maine, are daily passing up and down the East River on the way to or from their landing places.

It is the large size of these boats and the high speed at which most of them are run that makes their daily passage through the East River exceedingly perilous to life and property. There is a law which forbids steamers to be propelled at a higher rate of speed than ten miles an hour, in any of the waters of our harbor. But this, like many other of our municipal laws, has become a dead letter; and the Boston boats may be seen on any afternoon, about 5 o'clock, steaming through the East River at a speed of fifteen to eighteen miles an hour, while constantly thronging about their path are the Brooklyn and Williamsburg ferry-boats loaded with passengers;—schooners, sloops and lighters loaded with merchandise; steam-tugs with their tows; besides the smacks, skiffs and other small craft that are ever afloat on the river. When the tide in the East River is at the second quarter of the flood, the velocity of the current is 422 feet per minute, or nearly five miles per hour. The speed of the large Boston boats when passing up the river on this tide cannot be less than twenty miles an hour; a speed so hazardous on such a crowded thoroughfare that all the ferry-boats on either side must stay their trips, to keep out of the way of these rushing monsters, or continue them only by imperiling their passengers' lives. Should a railroad track be laid through Broadway, and a locomotive be driven over it, every morning and afternoon, at the rate of twenty miles an hour, the promenaders on that avenue would probably protest not only that their rights were most unjustly infringed, but that their lives were placed in most deadly peril. And yet these citizens would have no greater cause of complaint than those Brooklyn ferry passengers now have, exposed as they are, to be run over and crushed into the river every morning and afternoon by these ponderous and swift-rushing steamers.

But these boats not only place lives and property in jeopardy on the East River; they embarrass commerce in many ways. The Harbor Masters assure us that it is not safe to move a ship in that narrow stream, when one of these steamers is expected to pass; not only because the high speed at which these steamers run puts it out of the power of their pilots to check or control them in case the ship gets in their way, and a collision becomes imminent; but the long deep swell which they create in the river makes it very difficult to handle the ship, often tearing her from her fastenings, unless these be very strongly secured. Frequently the Commonwealth, the Metropolis, and the Plymouth Rock, heavy boats of more than 2,000 tons each, running on the Boston lines, will pass up East River abreast of each other, going at full speed on the flood tide, and monopolizing the whole width of the stream. The great wave which they make washes both shores, and very often tears lighter and smaller crafts from their moorings, while every ship lying across the end of the piers is liable to be badly chafed by the wash.

We are at loss to find any reason why our City authorities should allow the Sound steamers to obstruct or monopolize the navigation of the East River any longer. On the other hand the fact, which can be easily authenticated, that, by their daily passages through the crowded portions of this narrow stream, business is embarrassed and lives and property placed in great jeopardy—is a good and sufficient reason why they should be compelled to leave the lower part of the East River and make their landings somewhere above Corlær's Hook.

It has been volunteered as a reason for allowing these boats to land where they have landed for many years past, that they bring to the City a large quantity of freight consigned to commission houses located below the Park, or destined for shipment on Southern boats, whose landings are on the North River, near their own. These boats, however, bring no more freight to the City than the numerous sailing packets bring from the same Eastern ports, which do not find it necessary for their business to pass round into the North River to make a landing; nor do they bring any more freight than the several railroads communicating with the East, which do not find it necessary to run their freight cars down to Bowling-green, to accommodate their consignees.

Besides, the piers at which these boats now land are very inconveniently located both for arriving and departing passengers. They are located in one of the most filthy and crowded sections of the City, difficult of access, and far removed from stage routes and from all those hotels and shops of the metropolis which every [illegible] ger first desired to visit. They are [illegible] the centre of the foreign [illegible] in a port like this, [illegible] large vessels are daily [illegible] which to load or discharge [illegible] these piers are needed for more [illegible] purposes, than the landing [illegible] passenger boats which can be better [illegible] in some other section of the City, [illegible] the foot of Fourteenth-street on the East River.

A Committee of the Common Council is now considering the propriety of compelling all the Sound steamers to make their landings at some part of the East River, above Corlær's Hook. This Committee held a meeting last Friday, at which the owners of these boats were invited to be present, and show reasons why their landings should not be removed. Not one of them heeded the invitation; and it is therefore presumed that they have nothing to say, and that the Committee will readily conclude that the removal of the landings is to be made.

A POPULAR WOMAN.—A lady who calls herself Mrs. McMAHON has managed in the short space of three months to achieve a great popularity; and, in a letter which does not contain much else of importance, which she has published, she says, "I do not hesitate to say that, at this moment, I am one of the most popularly known women in the United States." Ladies who may be ambitious of becoming popularly known may be interested in learning that nothing can be more easy. All they have to do is to hire the Academy of Music or some other theatre for a few weeks, hire a company of actors, and perform a series of leading parts; in addition to this, it will be necessary to keep up a pretty constant correspondence in the daily papers, to brave defiance at the whole horde of critics, and to repeat the same in all the principal cities of the Union. By this process, which will cost but a few thousand dollars, it is possible to achieve a popularity that may last nearly nine days. Some ladies have become quite as popularly known with much less trouble and expense. FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE, for instance; and even our distinguished countrywoman, Mrs. BLOOMER, is more popularly known by merely putting on a pair of pantaletts and wearing her petticoats shorter than other women. ELIZABETH became very well known by paying a few visits to Newgate Prison, and Miss DIX has achieved a reputation by visiting the insane hospitals of the country. Mrs. MCMAHON may congratulate herself on being the most popularly known woman in the United States; but, considering what her eminence has cost her, and the very short time it is likely to last, we could not conscientiously advise any lady to follow her example. Madame IDA PFEIFFER has become tolerably famous by going everywhere, and a lady is now footing up a reputation in the Tabernacle by the novel feat of walking thirty miles in as many consecutive hours.

Personal.

PHILIP QUIGLEY has recovered $5,000 damages against the Philadelphia and Wilmington Railroad Company for publishing a libel upon him. The Company, in their annual report, reflected upon Mr. QUIGLEY's character and his reputation as a bridge-builder. The verdict establishes the fact that a Corporation may be sued for libel.

During the third act of "The Apostate," at the Boston Theatre, on Thursday evening, a young man, who was personating the rôle of a monk, was suddenly seized with a violent fit and fell lifeless upon the stage. The actors carried him to the wing and the performance proceeded; but for a moment the incident caused the audience to experience a thrill of horror.

The National Intelligencer says:

"It is only two or three weeks since we had the gratification of recording the magnificent gift of twenty-five thousand dollars to the American Colonization Society by DAVID HUNT, Esq., of Mississippi. We have now the pleasure to announce an additional donation from the same noble-hearted philanthropist of twenty thousand dollars; a check for which amount has been received from him by the Treasurer of the Society. This sum makes a grand total of more than fifty thousand dollars which has been contributed by Mr. HUNT to the philanthropic cause of colonization."

The negro man, "JIM BROCKENBRIDGE," who was so fortunate as to draw half the capital prize of $30,000, last week, at Louisville, has purchased himself and entire family, at a reasonable price. Mr. ISAAC R. GREEN, his owner, referred the matter of value to Judge PIRTLEY, by whom the valuation was fixed. The remaining money has been placed in the care of a trustee.

The late ELLIOTT CRESSON, of Philadelphia, left by will the sum of $5,000 for the benefit of a Society for providing a home for aged men. The Society was organized in Philadelphia some time since.

Mr. EVERETT has delivered his Washington oration before the Young Men's Association in Chicago.

Meeting of the New-York [illegible] Society.

A special meeting of the New-York [illegible] Dealers' Society was held last evening at [illegible] tan Hall, in Hester-street. The [illegible] attended. The general opinion expressed was in favor of resisting the new law, and testing at once its constitutionality. It was resolved to carry out the programme agreed upon at the previous meeting. The work of obtaining the signatures of 10 freeholders to each petition for licenses, as required by the new Excise Law, was entered upon directly after the passage of the act, by nearly all the liquor dealers in the City. But very soon a large number, finding the utter impossibility of obtaining the requisite signatures, abandoned their efforts, making up their minds to let matters take their course, trusting for relief to the Court of Appeals. Some 1,000 Liquor Dealers, not heretofore belonging to the Liquor Dealers' Association, have lately enrolled their names as new members, making the present number nearly 7,000 members. The fund formerly on hand, the dues paid by new members, and the proceeds of a special tax levied on all the members, secured already a fund of over $300,000. With this sum they think a pretty long and fierce battle may be waged.

Should the new law be pronounced constitutional, the effort to obtain signatures of twenty freeholders to petitions for licenses will doubtless be resumed. The difficulty of effecting this object, and some idea of the number of liquor sellers that will have to abandon the business, may be gathered from the following statistics. In the Second Ward there are 111 retail liquor shops, distributed as follows:

Liberty-street	2	South street	7
Maiden-lane	10	Water-street	5
John-street	2	Pearl-street	2

Beside the places enumerated, there are some dozen other localities where liquor is sold at wholesale. In Fulton Market there are eleven places where liquor bars are kept. Ann-street abounds most plentifully in liquor-shops. On this street, between Nassau-street and Broadway, there are twelve places where liquor is retailed. One place on this street—the old "Smith's Hotel"—has lately closed up. On the door an announcement of a Sheriff's sale of the contents of the house is posted.

The total number of freeholders living in the Second Ward does not exceed forty. By the new law there cannot be, therefore, over two places licensed in this ward for selling liquor!

THE TIGHTNESS CONTINUES.—Since Mr. FLAGG raised the interest on Revenue Bonds to 7 per cent, money has been coming more rapidly, but not pouring, into the Chamberlain's hands. The overdraft has been made good, and there is a surplus sufficient, perhaps, to meet the warrants already drawn, though the latter have not all been paid. Money must be tight indeed when City gilt-edged paper is hardly nibbled at by hungry capitalists. The Chamberlain will doubtless resume payment in a few days, and Mr. FLAGG will probably give no heed to the calls for warrants hereafter, unless he knows there is money enough in the Treasury to cash them.

ADDITIONAL FROM CALIFORNIA.

NEW-ORLEANS, Monday, April 27.

The steamship Empire City, from Havana, having arrived up, we gather a few additional particulars of California and Isthmus news. The purser reports that the steamship Illinois, from Aspinwall for New-York, has nearly a million and a half dollars in gold on freight, and about seventy of Col. LOCKRIDGE's force, including Generals WHEAT and HORNSBY. The Empire City brings one hundred of the unfortunate Nicaraguans, while others were left behind at Aspinwall, whither they were all taken in British vessels.

The Illinois connected at the Isthmus with the steamer J. L. Stephens from San Francisco, but as that vessel did not touch at San Juan del Sur, we get nothing additional of an authentic nature in regard to the expedition of General WALKER. Private dispatches, however, state that he was well supplied with provisions, and likely to hold ont at Rivas for several months. From the same source we get a confirmation of WALKER and HERNINGSEN's recently reported victories over the Costa Ricans, and a rumor that another attack was shortly expected. General WALKER's brother, who came passenger in the Empire City, died on Sunday.

Ex-Senator FOOTE, who of late has held a prominent position in the ranks of the American Party, has gone over to the Democrats.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR CONSTRUCTING THE WAGON ROAD FROM FORT DEFIANCE.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, April 28.

The War Department has completed the arrangements for the Wagon-Road from Fort Defiance to Colorado River. EDWARD F. BEALE is to be the superintendent; G. H. HEAP, assistant, and JAMES P. MILLINGTON, physician. Lieut. CHARLES E. THOMPSON has been detached from the Navy to accompany the expedition for geological surveys. Twenty-five camels and dromedaries are to be employed, one of the objects being to test their endurance and adaptability of the climate. The party will consist of about fifty picked men, provided with the necessary implements to break the road through. They will rendezvous at New-Orleans on the 20th of May. All the parties for the different sections of the road are now organized, with instructions to commence operations at the earliest practicable period. It is thought that the work will be finished by next December.

JUDGE MULLETT NOT RESIGNED—MEETING OF THE LIQUOR-DEALERS.

ALBANY, Tuesday, April 28.

Judge MULLETT, of the Eighth Judicial District, has served papers on Governor KING, denying that he has resigned his seat on the bench of the Supreme Court, and stating that the appointment of his successor is illegal, and that he shall proceed to hold Courts as heretofore. Judge MULLETT charges that the papers sent to Judge FOOT, of the Judiciary Committee of the Legislature, were improperly and without authority filled up, tendering his resignation, and that he did not resign.

The liquor dealers in this city held a meeting last night, and a fund was raised and resolutions adopted to disregard the law and take the first prosecution under it to the courts in order to test its constitutionality.

Contradiction of the Reports of Indian Trouble in Minnesota.

CHICAGO, Tuesday, April 28.

The St. Paul Pioneer of the 18th inst. contains a letter from Gen. SHIELDS, dated Faribault, 15th, which pointedly contradicts the rumor of Indian troubles at Mankato. We have reliable information from Blue Earth County that there is no foundation for these absurd reports. The letter concludes by stating that "there is neither hostility, nor a sign of hostility, amongst the Indian tribes in the Territory."

The Minnesotian of the 20th confirms the statements in the above letter.

Collision on the Hudson River.

PIERMONT, Tuesday, April 28.

A sloop and a schooner, names unknown, came in collision last night on the river near Irvington. The sloop was loaded with brick and sunk immediately. The crew escaped in the yawl, and were picked up by the schooner, which sustained but slight injury.

Wreck of the Schooner William Rayner on Lake Ontario.

OSWEGO, Tuesday, April 28.

The schooner William Rayner, with a cargo of wheat and flour from Toronto to this port, went ashore last night below the East Pier. The sea made a clean breach over the vessel, and the deck-load of flour was thrown overboard.

Fire in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Tuesday, April 28.

DOUGHERTY's soap and candle works on Market street, near the Bridge over the Schuylkill, was destroyed by fire early this morning. Loss $30,000,—insured for $20,000.

Arrival of the Steamship Lebanon at Halifax.

HALIFAX, Tuesday, April 28.

The steamship Lebanon, from Woolwich, England, on the evening of the 15th inst., arrived here yesterday. She brings a detachment of artillery for Nova Scotia and Canada, but no news. She will leave for Quebec to-morrow.

Musical.

M. MILLET, an accomplished musician, and a teacher of influence and consideration, gave an interesting concert last evening at Dodworth's Saloon. Mr. MILLET was assisted by Mme. CORA DE WILHORST, Signor ARNOLDI, Mr. RAVENEL, and a number of young ladies—his pupils we presume. The entertainment was well arranged and gave general satisfaction. All the compositions were by M. MILLET, and gave abundant evidence of taste and musical sensibility. There is no reason why many of these works should not make their appearance in more tangible shape.

Signora PATANIA's Concert last evening, at Niblo's Saloon, did not receive the attention it deserved, considering that Mme. GAZZANIGA and Signor BRIGNOLI were on the programme in addition to the beneficiaire. Mme. GAZZANIGA sang only one piece, (the "Mother and Child," by DONIZETTI,) but sang it with such infinite pathos and intensity that it obliterated every other effort of the evening. Signora PATANIA was in excellent voice, and sang excellently, especially the "Traviata" aria. Signor BRIGNOLI was as usual good and pleasing. He had a vast number of noisy admirers in the room.

Concert.

Mrs. JAMESON, a very estimable artist, gives a concert to-night at Dodworth's Saloon, to which we desire to call attention. The programme is judiciously compounded, and introduces Dr. GUILMETTE, an amateur quartette, Mr. HY. APPY, Mr. MORGAN, Mr. SCHMITZ and Mr. WALLERS.

Italian Opera.

To-night Mme. GAZZANIZA appears in BELLINI's opera of "Norma." She is said to be surpassingly great as the heroine. Miss RICHINGS makes her début in this opera as Adalgisa.

GOVERNOR WALKER IN A WARD SCHOOL.—There was a great time in No. 11, one of the Sixteenth Ward Grammar Schools, yesterday, for Governor RESD. J. WALKER, GEORGE SAUNDERS, and his wife, were there to see their strong points. Commissioner HASKETT received the party at 9 o'clock, in the Boys' Department, and introduced them. The boys rallied 500 strong, and, with music, declamations, &c., gave the distinguished visitors a touch of their quality. Then the Governor made a brief speech, in which he stated that he had attended Public Schools in his youth, and had acted as tutor during his College course, much to his own advancement. INTERESTING FROM HAVANA.

Arrival of the Philadelphia at this Port, and the Isabel at Charleston.

PROSPERITY OF THE SLAVE-TRADE—THE EXPEDITION AGAINST MEXICO—THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF AND SUBORDINATE GENERALS APPOINTED—THE CASE OF OXNARD—A PROTESTANT CHURCH TO BE ERECTED NEAR HAVANA—BUSINESS—SHIP NEWS.

The United States mail steamship Philadelphia, ALFRED G. GRAY commanding, which left New-Orleans on the 20th April, arrived at Havana on the morning of the 23d, and having sailed same day for New-York, arrived here yesterday morning.

The Philadelphia landed 24 passengers at Havana and brings 37 passengers for this port.

One of our correspondents writes that it is reported, on credible authority, that a Protestant church and cemetery, and an American hospital, may be erected near the city of Havana, with the consent of the Spanish Government, whenever our Government is disposed to ask for these privileges. The Marquis of HAVANA is said to favor the project.

Our correspondent further says:

"We have had eight or ten vessels sold here lately, intended for the African coast trade, and they ar prepared for the voyage in this harbor.

Two cargoes, consisting of 835 Bozal negroes, have been landed since my last report, and have been provided with the legal documents necessary for the protection of their masters.

The strangers have nearly all left Cuba, and we are again lonely. A few New-York blooms remain—the last roses of the season.

Sugars still continue high; whites have been sold as high as $12. The sugar crop is confirmed as being short. Molasses, 9½@10 reals ₱ keg, and scarce. Freights are at the lowest point, and, from the many vessels in all the ports of Cuba, the business dull. Exchange—London, 6⅛@6¼ premium; New-York and Northern cities, 3⅛@4 discount; New-Orleans, (short sight,) 2⅛ discount. The health of the Island is good."

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

HAVANA, Friday, April 24, 1857.

Since the official appointment of Gen. CONCHA to the command of the expedition against Mexico was made known through the papers of this city, the editors of which are ever ready to offer up their mite of incense at the altar of his enthroned Excellency, the public mind has been agitated by a thousand idle rumors as to the General's willingness to accept the command. From a personal knowledge of the man's character, I am authorized to say that nothing would delight him more than to place himself at the head of the invading force. His ambition is coextensive with the littleness of his mind, and he sees in the successful result of an attack the last military honor to which he aspires—the rank of Captain General of the Royal Armies." He succeeded in getting himself the title of Marquis, and for this purpose took the life of his bosom friend and protector, when a refugee from the political excesses of an opposition Ministry. Will he allow the only opportunity he will ever have to secure this military distinction pass by without taking advantage of circumstances? No! Dearly as he loves the pleasant command he now holds, he would cheerfully resign it into the hands of another to have the honor of again planting the flag of Spain on the battlements of San Juan de Ulloa. He will profit by every circumstance to precipitate things, regardless of the consequences to this Island. His policy with PINTO, whom he seduced into conspiracy, is sufficient evidence of the heartlessness of the man. The Generals appointed to serve under his orders are ESTRADA, of the Navy, and MENDINUETA, of the Cavalry. This latter personage has seen considerable service in the Spanish civil wars, and is represented as a man of some experience in the military art. But I suppose he is like nearly all superior Spanish officers, with more bravery than real scientific knowledge. The news of the sailing of the first division of the expedition has hurried things vastly here. Immense preparations have been made for the comfort of the new comers, and the Spanish Bank has loaned the Home Government $1,200,000 for the purpose of defraying the expenses of sending out the vessels and soldiers. It would be a pity to disappoint so much bravery by a peaceful settlement of the squabble!

Much blame is attached to the American Consulate by certain parties, who maintain that Mr. JOHN OXNARD was entitled to the whole and entire protection of his Government. To such, who seem to forget the circumstances of the case, I would recall to their minds the facts of the case. OXNARD arrives here, a fugitive from justice, bringing with him certain sums of money that he fraudulently got possession of in New-Orleans. The parties thus robbed present themselves here about the same time, state their case and ask the interference of the Consul. Colonel BLYTHE simply stated the circumstances of the fraud to the authorities, and asked for his fellow-citizens that facility of prosecuting in the courts of the island which has been granted under similar circumstances to Spanish subjects no later than last year. In view of the justice of the application, General CONCHA ordered OXNARD to be confined in a fort until he restored the money. The courts decided that the prisoner might be prosecuted civilly, and this is what was done. Had the Consul interfered to prevent OXNARD's arrest, he would have injustice done to the injured parties who had come to recover their property. The transient and resident citizens (American) of Havana all unanimously approve what has been done. Only those who feel sympathy for a rascal, regret that the rogue was foiled in his attempt to retain the money.

The Saratoga sailed from here last Saturday. Her destination was Key West; officers and crew all well. The English brig Mariner has also left us. The weather has been exceedingly variable during the last few days. Of local intelligence there is but little that would interest your readers.

LATER BY TELEGRAPH.

CHARLESTON, Tuesday, April 28.

The steamship Isabel has arrived here with Havana and Key West dates to the 25th inst.

Muscavado Sugar at the latest date was 12¾ to 13 reals, with an active demand. Molasses clayed, 9½ reals. Muscavado 10½ to 11 reals.

The United States sloop-of-war Saratoga sailed from Key West on the 23d inst. for Norfolk, and the United States steamer Fashion for New-Orleans.

INTERESTING FROM MEXICO.

Another Insurrectionary Movement Suppressed—Implication of the Clergy—Refusal to grant Absolution—The Expected War with Spain—The British Ultimatum—Ministerial Changes—Mining Discoveries, &c.

We have received files of Mexican journals to the 4th of April.

The Trait d'Union, published at the capital, says:

"A reactionary movement took place, it is said, on the evening before last, at Mexico. Various arrests were made. That which appears certain is, that M. AGUILAR, former Minister of SANTA ANA, is taken prisoner. Details have not reached us, but public rumor, we know not on what authority, connects the name of Gen. TRACONIS with the movement."

The Trait d'Union places the responsibility of these disturbances upon the higher clergy. They have forsaken the confessional, and have entered the pulpit to inculcate the doctrines of rebellion among the people. Pastoral letters of a political nature are printed and extensively circulated, and the curates have received strict instructions to preach opposition to the Government—to promise the enjoyments of Heaven to those who obey, and threaten with the terrors of hell those who reject the teachings of the Church.

While the Church in Mexico City refuses to recognize the new Constitution, and fulminates anathemas against those who [swear to uphold it, the clergy of Oajaca rejoice and chaunt a te deum in its honor.

The Archbishop has declared positively again and again (and he is about to launch forth another circular of the same tenor as the first) that absolution will not be given to those who take oath to obey the fundamental law of the country. Those priests who know their duty, and the true significance of their mission, consider the opinion of the prelate as a purely personal one and not affecting their own action. Thus, says the Trait d'Union, think the majority of the ecclesiastics. One priest has already announced, through the public journals, that he is ready to absolve any one who may take the oath required: and that his intentions may be widely known, he gives his name and address. All Mexico knows that there are many honorable members of the clergy who refuse to lie any longer under the imputation of this scandal. They will not invoke religion in aid of worldly interests, nor the sacred name of God to favor the petty passions of man. They are ready to grant absolution when they deem it right and proper to do so, without heeding the recommendations or the order of their Prelate.

Nevertheless the plan has been well arranged. There exists some secret Directory, holding in its hands the threads of a conspiracy which seeks to agitate at the same time the principal centres of population in the Republic. The Progresista of Puebla speaks of rumors of a third pronunciamento in that locality, and others will doubtless be heard of in all the capitals of the State. There are, however, no fears for the result. By the denouement the cause of Religion will be advanced and the clerical profession will be purified.

The journals of the Capital are filled with long extracts from the Spanish press on the threatened invasion. El Heraldo, in answer to the arguments put forth in the Diario de la Marina of Havana, takes the philosophical ground that a war will prove nothing; that fraudulent credits will not be proved legitimate, though backed by cannon, and that the assassination of San Vicente will not become a political act from the fact of an invasion. The Trait d'Union is of opinion that Spain will make war if she can, that is to say, if she is supported by France and England, and if these two nations are ready to pay the expenses.

Gen. CORONA, an exile, has beseeched the President to accept his services in case of a war with Mexico, and the honorable request has been granted. Gen. CHILABDI has also requested to be placed on active service in the event of a war. A Spanish invasion would at least have one good effect—it would sweep away party animosities and would unite the Mexican people as one man against the common enemy.

The Mexican Extraordinary of the 4th April says:

"We hear mention made of the probable retirement of Sr. MONTES from the Ministry of Relations and his acceptance of the mission to Rome. In this event it is said his place will be filled by Sr. FUENTES, now Minister of Treasury, and that the vacancy thus occasioned will be tendered to Sr. LERDO. No step on the part of the Government could tend more to give confidence abroad than the return of Sr. LERDO DE TEJADA to his former position of Minister of Treasury. His name is associated with the first great financial reform in this country, and his high integrity and well-known financial ability would at once inspire confidence on the part of capitalists at home as well as abroad. We trust for this once rumor may prove true.

The same peper says:

"We hear it stated that the Charge d'Affaires of the British Legation has presented his ultimatum to the Mexican Government, stating that if in nine days his demands are not satisfied he will close the Legation. Six days of the aforesaid nine have expired already, so we may expect in the course of the next few days to learn the result of this demand.

The road from Vera Cruz to Mexico City is now safe. Throughout the whole distance small parties of mounted guards are posted, who ride from one station to the other and protect the road from robbers. A tax of half a dollar on each passenger by the diligences is levied, to defray a portion of the expense incurred by this road-guard."

A correspondent of the Extraordinary, writing from Mazatlan on the 30th of March, says:

"A day or two since I was informed by a gentleman of undoubted veracity and distinguished position, of a gold vein which seems almost fabulous. It is situated in the State of Sonora, to the north of Hermosillo. He saw the gold himself which had been severed from the original lead by a machete. It weighed nearly one pound, and was pure gold."

MRS. BENTLEY'S THIRTY HOURS' WALK.—Mrs. BENTLEY accomplished last evening, at 10 o'clock, at the Tabernacle, her promised pedestrian feat of walking thirty consecutive hours. It can hardly be called a pedestrian feat either, for during most of the last ten hours she was supported in walking by a lady. The greater portion of the last two hours she was almost carried along by a lady and gentlemen on each side of her. The concluding eight minutes she walked alone. By her easy and brisk movements she showed, however, that she had considerable strength left. At the termination of her feat she was vociferously cheered by the congregation present, about 150 in all. Capt. RYNDERS, United States Marshal, who was present, was called on for a speech. The gallant Captain's response was that the best speech he could make was to put money into the contribution box for Mrs. BENTLEY. Saying this, he threw into it a $3 bill. This example was followed.

THE ISAAC NEWTON.—We learn from a gentleman who passed Peekskill, yesterday, at 12½ o'clock, that the steamer Isaac Newton had been got afloat, and was then in tow of two steamers, apparently on their way to this city. The damage sustained by the steamer is not as great as first reported, and it is expected that she will again resume her regular trips.

The steamer Buffalo, which was sent to assist the Newton at the time of her accident, and which also sunk near her, still lies in the same position. As the Newton is now raised, the Buffalo will be got afloat in a few days without much trouble.

The steamer Knickerbockr, which was sunk last Fall, near the spot where the Newton met her accident resumed her regular trips to Albany on Monday evening last. During the Winter she has been thoroughly repaired and renovated.

PRACTICALLY REVIEWED
ROBERT HUNTER, M. D.,

We have, perhaps, dwelt too long on European writers. If so, it has been because their works are the text-books of the colleges of this country. There are comparatively few works on consumption written in America. But let us read these in review as representing more fully and fairly the American view of the case. We have before us the splendid work of the late Dr. Swett, of this City, published some three years ago. Dr. Swett was for many years one of the physicians of the New-York Hospital, and at the time of his death held the responsible trust of a professorship in the New-York University. That he was a man of sterling ability, none, who knew him, will call in question. Had he left us no other proof of his indefatigable zeal in the pursuit of his profession than his "Treatise on the Diseases of the Chest," it would have been amply sufficient to earn him a high niche in the temple of fame. Well then we may safely take Dr. Swett's work as a fair exponent of the practice of the profession in this country. In answering the question: "Is phthisis a curable disease?" he observes, the general impression in the medical profession is, that patients with phthisis is doomed to death." (P. 275.) Why does this impression exist? Simply, because almost every case results in death! "If," continues he, "those cases only are considered, in which the disease is strongly marked, and which is so advanced in its progress that the diagnosis is easy, this opinion is, on the whole, well founded; yet even under these circumstances, unexpected recoveries take place." (P. 275.) What does this mean but that the disease is sufficiently advanced to be detected the case is hopeless, or if recovery does take place it is an "unexpected" result, which could not be anticipated to follow the treatment employed. It may be well to state, that Dr. Swett is a strong advocate of the curability of the disease, but honest enough to confess that the profession, to the present, has not discovered the means of curing it. "I admit," says he, "as all must do, that phthisis is a most fatal disease, and that the prognosis is always unfavorable!" What does he mean by uniform prognosis? He means that the opinion we must form of the chances of the patient to recover is "always unfavorable." We cannot look for nor expect his recovery from following any plan of treatment employed or advised by Dr. Swett. If recovery should follow such treatment it is a success altogether "unexpected." Which of the readers of the Doctor's confession will have the bravery to submit to this treatment, and run the gauntlet for life? This may seem a harsh expression, but is it not literally true? What else can it be called than running the gauntlet for life to submit to a plan of treatment, the very advocates and champions of which are themselves compelled to confess is "empirical, inert, and mischievous." (Billings.)

MEDICAL.

SANDS' SARSAPARILLA.

Can Scrofula be cured? It certainly can! Incontestable evidence of cures in numerous cases of the worst kind of scrofula, salt rheum, fever sores, ulcers, liver complaint, and the class of diseases arising from an impure state of the blood or derangement of the biliary functions, are daily received from all quarters, expressing the gratitude of sufferers who are surprised to find themselves radically cured by this purifying and efficacious preparation.

Prepared and sold by A. B. & D. SANDS, Druggists, No. 100 Fulton-st., New-York.

THE GREATEST MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.—MR. KENNEDY, of Roxbury, has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over 1,100 cases, and never failed, except in two cases, both thunder humor. He has now in his possession over 200 certificates of its virtue, all within 20 miles of Boston.

Two bottles are warranted to cure a nursing sore mouth.

One to three bottles will cure the worst kind of pimples on the face.

Two to three bottles will clear the system of boils.

Two bottles are warranted to cure the worst canker in the mouth or stomach.

Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of erysipelas.

One to two bottles are warranted to cure all humor in the ear.

Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the eyes and blotches among the hair.

Four to six bottles are warranted to cure corrupt and running ulcers.

One bottle will cure scaly eruption of the skin.

Two to three bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of ringworm.

Two to three bottles are warranted to cure the most desperate case of rheumatism.

Three to four bottles are warranted to cure the salt rheum.

Five to eight bottles will cure the worst case of scrofula.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle and a perfect cure is warranted when the above quantities are taken.

Reader, I peddled over a thousand bottles of this in the vicinity of Boston. I know the effects of it in every case. So sure as water will extinguish fire, so sure will this cure humor. I never sold a bottle of it but that sold another; after a trial, it always speaks for itself. There are two things about this herb that appear to me surprising—first, that it grows in our pastures, in some places quite plentiful, and yet its value has never been known until I discovered it in 1846; second, that it should cure all kinds of humor.

In order to give some idea of the sudden rise and great popularity of the discovery, I will state that in April, 1853, I peddled it, and sold about six bottles per day. In April, 1854, I sold over a thousand bottles per day.

No change of diet ever necessary—eat the best you can get, and enough of it.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.—Adults, one table spoonful per day; children over 8 years, dessert spoonful; children from 5 to 8 years, tea spoonful. As no direction can be applicable to all constitutions, take sufficient to operate on the bowels twice a day.

Mr. KENNEDY gives personal attendance in bad cases of Scrofula.

The Burdell Case—Postponement of Proceedings before the Surrogate.

TUESDAY, April 28.

This morning counsel in the matter of the claim of Mrs. E. A. CUNNINGHAM to a widow's portion of the estate of the late HARVEY BURDELL, appeared before the Surrogate, pursuant to adjournment.

Mr. CLINTON, on the part of the claimant, applied for a postponement on the ground that he had been positively informed by the District-Attorney that the trial of Mrs. CUNNINGHAM in the Criminal Court would commence on Monday, and it was necessary that her counsel should devote all the time in the interval at their disposal to the preparation of their defence. He relied on the announcement by the Surrogate made on Saturday last, to the effect that if such a contingency arose he would postpone further proceedings in the matter before him until the termination of the criminal case.

Mr. TILDEN strenuously opposed the application on two grounds: First that he had not received any such communication as that stated to have been received from the District-Attorney; and second, because three or four witnesses from Herkimer were expected to-day in the 12 o'clock train, and, as a matter of convenience to them, and to save further expense on the part of his client, it was but proper that they should be examined. But further than the time to be appropriated to their examination, he would not oppose the motion.

After considerable discussion,

The Surrogate stated that he was very reluctantly obliged to adjourn the case, but he must stand by his faith in the matter. As soon as the criminal trial was ended he would notify counsel on both sides of the time when he should be prepared to resume these proceedings, and in the meantime would order the expenses of the witnesses expected to-day to be paid out of the Burdell estate, irrespective of the result o this investigation.

A RIVAL TO THE CROTON.—A few months ago Mr. JOHN TAYLOR, of the well-known Broadway Saloon, became alarmed at the size of his annual bill for Croton water, which was near $1,200, and had an artesian well bored in a vault at the rear of his premises. It now supplies him with water at the rate of seventy-five gallons per minute, which he uses for all the purposes of his saloon and hotel, except drinking. The taste of the water is limy in a slight degree, but we are assured that when iced it passes well for Croton. The well is about eighty feet deep, and twenty inches in diameter. The water flows nearly to the top, and is thence raised to all parts of the building by steam power. There are other artesian wells in this City, principally connected with sugar refineries. The low temperature of the water from such sources in Summer renders it especially valuable in certain chemical processes. The success of Mr. TAYLOR may induce some of our hotel proprietors to sink other wells of the same kind, in view of the large annual expense for Croton. The bill of the St. Nicholas, for example, was $3,000 last year.

SHOCKING RAILROAD ACCIDENT.—FREDERICK HURLBURT, a clerk whose residence is in Twenty-sixth-street, met with a shocking accident yesterday morning, on the Hudson River Railway, in Canal-street. Anxious to get down town to his place of business as speedily as possible, he attempted to leap upon the front platform of one of two freight-cars which were passing along. In so doing he slipped and fell between the cars upon the track. The wheels of the rear car passed over both legs, and crushed them in a shocking manner. He was removed to the City Hospital, where his injuries were at once pronounced fatal. His family were sent for, and were soon by his bed-side. Mr. HURLBURT is 52 years of age. He was alive at 8 o'clock last evening, suffering intensely.

COMMUTE.—Over the Peck-slip and Grand-street ferries, the Company issue notice that parties may commute as heretofore—five dollars for a foot passenger for six months, and three dollars for each person under 17 years of age. Between the Eastern District of Brooklyn and New-York eleven ferry-boats, ply on all which passengers can commute to advantage. The price of coal continues so high yet, that the Union Ferry Company is unable to gratify its desire to accommodate by any return to the old rates or to permit commutation. A man who lives in Williamsburg and does business in New-York can cross twice each way daily for $10 a year. If he lives on the Heights he must pay for the same rides over a ferry not one quarter as wide very nearly $30.

☞ St. Patrick's Cathedral pews were rented for the year last Monday. About three quarters of the pews were rented, at prices ranging from $30 for the choice, $14 in the middle aisle, near the altar, to $8 for those nearest the entrance. There are 210 pews in the Church, 18 of which are reserved for the Sunday School, near the entrance. A large number of the frequenters hire seats only in these pews. There are seven seats in each pew of the centre aisle, and five seats in the pews of the side aisles. $12 is the price asked for a single seat in the choice pews.

☞ CHARLES GUIDET has got the contract for for paving Maiden-lane and Cortlandt-street with iron at $6 38 per square yard for paving, and 39 cents fo gutter.

LADIES' UNION AID.—The new house of the Ladies' Union Aid Society, an institution for the care of aged and infirm members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was dedicated on Monday by Bishop JANES. The building occupies three lots of ground in Forty-second-street, 150 feet east of Eighth-avenue, on the north side. It is 82 feet long, 62 feet wide, four stories high. The rooms are arranged to accommodate nearly one hundred persons. A chapel, reception and matron's rooms are provided. The entire cost will be about $35,000.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

CAPTURE OF AN ALLEGED SHOP-LIFTER—BOLD PRO CEEDINGS.

A man calling himself Lewis Gemell, aged 27, a native of Poland, and a peddler by occupation, was yesterday arrested by officer Clark of the Reserve Corps, and brought before Justice OSBORNE at the Lower Police Court, on a charge of shoplifting. From the statements made for the prosecution it appears that of late he has been "operating" most boldly. On Tuesday last, it is charged, he and three other men entered the store of Fenshaw, Milliken & Townsend, No. 35 Bowery, under pretence of purchasing some goods, and stole therefrom some valuable goods. The clerk in charge pursued him a long distance, knocked him down, and took from him the stolen property, but did not succeed in affecting his arrest. His accomplices made good their escape also.

It is further charged that yesterday morning Gemell again tried his hand at the game of shoplifting. With two other men he entered the store of Van Wagener, Yeoman & Co., No. 4 College-place, representing that he wished to purchase some broadcloths. The clerk took him to the fourth floor, to exhibit the goods asked for. One of the other men followed, and the third man remained upon the first floor with the porter. After inspecting a great many varieties, Gemell said he would not purchase just then, but would call again in the afternoon. The strangers then left—one of them, who had been alone upon the third floor, rather hastily. They had been gone but a moment when it was discovered that two pieces of silk and a piece of satin, valued at $270, had been stolen. Information was given to the Police, and during the afternoon Gemell was arrested by officer Clark, of the Reserve Corps. He was locked up for trial.

MURDEROUS ATTACK—A PROBABLE HOMICIDE.

Michael Coyle, employed as a watchman at the Broadway stables in Fortieth-street, is now lying at the point of death, in his boarding-house, in Forty-Second-street, from the effects of a terrible beating given him a few nights ago by a party of ruffians, who followed him home for that purpose. He has since been lying in a partially delirious state, and the physicians attending him are of opinion that he cannot recover. An ante-mortem examination of the dying man will be taken to-day.

ASSAULT BY RUFFIANS.

William Martin, the railroad switch-tender at the corner of Grand-street and the Bowery, was set upon yesterday morning by three men, who beat him badly. They snatched the iron rod used by him in moving the rails, and struck him with it several times. He drew upon his assailants a pistol loaded only with powder and wadding, and discharged the contents at one of them. The fellows then ceased their attack, and Martin leaped into a passing car to escape further violence. When he had ridden some distance he met a Tenth Ward policeman, with whom he returned to the place where the assault had been committed. One of the assailents only remained, and he was found to be suffering considerably from the discharge of Martin's pistol. This fellow gave his name as Charles Dougherty. He was conducted to the Police Station, and yesterday the matter was brought for examination before Justice Woon, at the Essex Market Police Court, who held Dougherty to answer.

ATTEMPT TO PASS BAD MONEY.

Two boatmen, named James H. Reed and William H. Powell, were arrested Monday evening in the Third Ward, charged with attempting to pass two one dollar bills on the Williamsburg City Bank, altered to twenties. They were taken yesterday before Justice OSBORNE, of the First District Police Court, and committed for examination.

ALLEGED EMBEZZLEMENT AT THE ST. NICHOLAS HOTEL.

Nicol Whitcomb, one of the proprietors of the St. Nicholas Hotel, appeared on Monday before Justice FLANDREAU, at the Jefferson Market Police Court, and deposed that he had probable cause to suspect, and did suspect, that on the 26th inst. bank bills of the value of $16, the property of Treadwell, Whitcomb & Co., of the St. Nicholas Hotel, was taken, stolen and carried away by Charles Brown, from the fact that he (the deponent) was informed by Dennis Kelly, that on leaving the drawer he counted $43 in bank bills, leaving said Brown in charge, and on his return found but $27 left, instead of the original $43. The accused party pleaded not guilty, and was locked up for trial in default of $500 bail.

FROM WHOM WAS IT STOLEN?

John Grenett and Christopher Plunkett were seen to run away about 12 o'clock Monday night, from an open lot in the Twentieth Ward. Two policemen, Garbe and Sheridan, thinking the movement suspicious, gave chase and captured them. A bottle of cologne water and a few keys were found upon them. On going to the lot the officers found there a trunk which had been broken open and rifled. Grenett and Plunkett were taken yesterday before Justice FLANDREAU and temporarily committed. The police say they are bad fellows. Who owns the trunk?

ROBBED.

Wm. Monegal of No. 101 Morgan-street, Jersey City, went into a barber's shop in Liberty-street, this City on Monday evening, with (as he declares) $175 in his breast pocket. He got shaved, and when he put his hands in his pockets to pay he discovered that he had been robbed. He caused the proprietor of the barber's shop to be arrested and held for examination.

Fires.

IN FIFTH-STREET—SUPPOSED BURGLARY AND INCENDIARISM.

A fire broke out about 5 o'clock yesterday morning, in the dwelling of Dr. BULER, No. 211 Fifth-street. The Doctor was absent, in Philadelphia, but his family were asleep upon the second floor of the house. When aroused by the alarm, they attempted to go to the basement where the fire originated, to get $1,000 from a drawer in that part of the house, but were prevented by the flames. The firemen and police soon put the fire out. The damage to the building and furniture is estimated at $500. The drawer which contained the thousand dollars was destroyed. It is supposed that a burglar entered the premises, and having stolen the money, then fired the house.

THE ONLY REMEDY FOR CONSUMPTION,

ANDERS' Liquid Iodine or Pure Iodine Water, indorsed as such by Dr. JAMES R. CHILTON, Professor JAS C. BOOTH, and other eminent chemists, is now admitted to be the only reliable remedy for Consumption. Iodine only produces its wholesome effects when given uncombined with anything but water. But Chemistry for years held it to be insoluble in water, and so gave it dissolved with mercury, alcohol, potassium. But, all these mixtures injure. Iodine and water alone cure. Dr. HENRY ANDERS has, at length, discovered the secret of making a perfectly aqueous solution, and hence his extraordinary success. Hence he cures, without fail, a variety of diseases, such as palsy, consumption, and scrofula, that had been considered almost, if not quite incurable, besides furnishing a certain, easy, economical and specific remedy for diseases of the heart, liver complaint, fever and ague, bilious disorders of all kinds, and those morbid conditions of the system arising from a depraved state of the blood. His Iodine Water is sold at $1 a bottle by ANDERS & FOSDICK, No. 3 Second-avenue and No. 892 Broadway; C. H. RINO, No. 192, and BARNES & PARK, No. 304 Broadway; Mrs. HAYES, Brooklyn, and all druggists.

LONG ISLAND.

ANOTHER INJUNCTION TALKED OF.—When the Nassau Water Company first contracted to bring water into Brooklyn, it was said by the opponents of the work that the Commissioners contemplated under that arrangement, never would be allowed to proceed. Now that an act has passed appointing the Commissioners, it is rumored that the parties making this statement intend to obtain an injunction to restrain the Water Commissioners from acting, as soon as they swear in. This they have not as yet done. The application for the injunction will be made upon the ground that the appointment of Commissioners by the Legislature is unconstitutional.

TUESDAY, April 28—P. M.

The business in Exchange for the steamer Arabia, sailing from this port to-morrow, closed up at previous quotations, 109¾@109¾; the heavier transactions of the day for ready money being at 109¾@⅝. Some three-day sight bills were done at 110¾ ₱ cent.; Francs were 5.18¾@5.17½; on the North of Europe the rates generally cheaper. The sterling market closed barely steady. The additional engagements of Bullion for this opportunity since yesterday, makes the shipment about one million of dollars. The income from California by the steamer Illinois, now due at this port, is telegraphed, viâ New-Orleans, $1,500,000. The Discount market continues easy, and some of the Wall-street Banks are seeking prime short paper at 7 ₱ cent. One or two of the Foreign Banking-houses called in some demand loans to-day, preliminary to the sailing of the steamer, and this caused some more inquiry for money on the Street, though generally the Broker's were easy. The Sub-Treasury received $282,431; disbursed $203,078, and held at the close $14,551,393.

The Stock Market again indicated an upward tendency on most part of the list, and the stiffness in Illinois Central, Cleveland and Toledo, Reading, New-York Central and Southern Michigan was quite decided, and the amount of Stock recently withdrawn from the control of the speculators against the market, in the case of the Illinois Central and Toledo, has had the effect of advancing prices about 5@6 ₱ cent. within a few days. Illinois brought 134 freely to-day, and Toledo 69¾ ₱ cent. cash, and the deliveries on previous contracts not very easy at these rates. The Bears were not, perhaps, prepared for so sudden a turn in prices, much less for the reduced supply of cash stock at command on the Toledo books after the reopening of the transfers on Saturday. The same parties calculated on a return of Illinois Stock from England, on the announcement of the late arrangement for subdividing the capital; instead of which each packet brings fresh orders for the Stock, while bona fide holders at home are not anxious sellers. The experience in both stocks to-day, has only gone to confirm what has been repeatedly stated in this column of late, that while the work of defamation and bold gambling is going on in Wall-street, the public are gradually and surely increasing their investments, at the reduced prices, in nearly every Railway stock on the list. The party who have grown bolder by success in pocketing large differences against the Bull speculators are now sellers at the lowest figures of the New-York and Erie, and Milwaukee and Mississippi, and continue to sell on lime, Cleveland and Toledo, and other stocks which their operations have well nigh worked into a corner. Yet the Certificates of Erie, withdrawn from the Street since the reopening of the books yesterday are equal to 2,000 shares, and the actual transfers of Milwaukee, for the past month, trifling in themselves, have been against the Brokers. Notwithstanding a recent publication put forth for effect to the contrary, the amount of this stock inscribed on the New-York books, is the same as on the 1st of April, or within less than 50 shares of it. No new stock has come from the West, and little or none has issued, as far we are advised, for inscription anywhere outside the control of the Board of Directors, since the last report. Of the Capital then reported, say 32,650 shares, 11,500 shares were and are under the control of the Company as collateral to the City of Milwaukee Bonds and Farm Mortgage Bonds negotiated for the Road. Of the remaining 21,150 shares, 15,796 shares stood on the New-York books, March 31, and 15,840 shares stand inscribed to-day. The market this afternoon closed generally steady, Erie being the principal exception. The fluctuations of the day were:

Cleveland and Toledo	67⅜@68@⅜@69@⅜
New-York Central	81⅜@⅝@⅜
Southern Michigan	63¾@⅝@⅞
Reading	82⅛@⅜@⅝@¾
Illinois Central	132¾@133@⅜@134

The sales of the day were quite large, full 30,000 shares, including the operations on the Street. During the ten business days the Erie books were closed, the amount of contracts made for and falling due on the reopening was equal to two-thirds whole capital, and yesterday about 10,000 active shares, in the names of brokers, were put through the extraordinary process of 600 different transfers from broker to broker, and made to settle 68,000 shares in contracts! The old and experienced Transfer Clerk, Mr. ORTS, with all his expertness, was not able to leave his desk until long after the regular hour to which transfers are ordinarily permitted. And yet the bona fide holders of nearly ninety thousand shares of the capital were no party to this scene.

The exports of the leading articles of Domestic Produce and Miscellaneous Goods for the week were $884,523, against $1,468,496 the corresponding week of last year.

The Cotton Circular of Messrs. NEILL BROTHERS, prepared for the Arabia, remarks:

RECEIPTS.—In our circular of the 19th of February, while the receipts yet showed an excess upon those of last year and confidence in the deficiency of the crop was generally shaken, we wrote: "This is the last excess which we shall have to report, and we repeat our former advice, that our friends may with perfect confidence base their operations upon the anticipation of a very heavy falling off all through March and April—a decrease amounting perhaps to 400,000 bales to the first of May." That we should hazard so confident and definite predictions upon a matter seemingly so uncertain, caused surprise at the time, but it is now verified by the result in a remarkable manner, the decrease of receipts amounting this day to 409,000 bales. To make up a total of 3,000,000 bales we have now to receive 267,000, or 66,000 bales per month for the remaining four months of the season. It is not therefore likely that the result will vary greatly from that amount though it will be to some extent dependent on the forwardness of supplies from the new crop in August. At this period, in 1850, the receipts had fallen to 2,000 bales per week, yet the deliveries subsequently to this date amounted to 287,000 bales, or 20,000 bales more than would be necessary to make the present crop up to 3,000,000.

Exports, though not heavy, are greatly in excess of receipts; to Great Britain, this week, 43,900 bales; to France, 1,600, and to other foreign ports, 9,000—making a total of 54,500 bales, while American consumers have only taken 2,000 bales, a reduction in their takings which seems more than confirmatory of our remarks of last week. One week, however, affords no rule in their operations.

The Money Circulars for Europe.—EXTRACTS. By Arabia.] NEW-YORK, Tuesday, April 28.

The tendency of the stock market during the past fortnight has been downward. In investment securities, although some few descriptions are rather more active, business is generally quite limited, while speculative operations in railroad shares continue on a very large scale. The fluctuations in the former have not been important. For the latter, prices have been very irregular. For a short time the market was quite steady, at about our last quotations, but the advance in the rate of interest by the Bank of England, in connection with the upward movement in bills on Europe, inducing renewed heavy sales, in anticipation of a decline, prices again receded rapidly, and, with a few exceptions, the depression was greater than that of the previous fortnight. The market has since been unsteady, but a slight advance upon the lowest points has been established, and there are some indications that no further material depreciation is likely to take place, unless the future financial advices from London should be of a very discouraging character. The present low prices, while they lead to the absorption, to some extent, of the floating stocks, by purchases for investment, induce caution on the part of operators for a decline, in making contracts for future delivery.

The supply of Money continues abundant, notwithstanding a considerable reduction of Bank Loans during the fortnight; and although an increased export of Specie to Europe is anticipated, there are no apprehensions of any inconvenient stringency during the next two months. It is expected that the specie reserve of the banks will be maintained at about the present point, by the additions it will receive from the disbursements by the Sub-Treasury, which, up to the 1st of July, must largely exceed the revenue, and by the receipt of gold from California, and coin from the interior. CAMMANN & CO.

NEW-YORK, Tuesday, April, 28.

The principal transactions in Railroad Bonds have been in Illinois Central Construction without variation of price, in Harlem Railroad First Mortgage at an advance of ¼, and in La Crosse and Milwaukee Railroad "Land grant" Bonds at a decline of 3¼ ₱ cent.

At private sale, Burlington and Missouri First Mortgage have been done at a further advance of 2½ ₱ cent.; also sales of the different issues of the Milwaukee and Mississippi Railroad and Galena and Chicago First Mortgage have been made without change of price. Money is easier, notwithstanding a contraction of the Bank loans during the week. No change in rates—paper, 8½@11—with but little offering. DE COPPET & CO.

NEW-YORK, Tuesday, April 28.

The upward tendency which was beginning to be felt at the close of our previous advices of 20th instwas of but short duration. On the 22d, the shares of Erie, Michigan Southern, and Cleveland and Toledo Railroad recommenced falling, touching at one time 41 for the first and 60 and 63¼ for the others, (the closing quotations, however, show a recovery of 3¼ ₱ cent. on Michigan Southern, and 6¼ on Cleveland and Toledo.) Other stocks without having experienced such marked fluctuations, have been affected by the depression on these securities, and in the majority of them there is a decline.

Money continues easy, without change in rates.

GEN. HORNSBY'S LAST DISPATCH TO GEN. WALKER

By the arrival of the Illinois at this port yesterday, we have late and important news from Nicaragua.

Our advices from Rivas extend to the 13th of April.

At that time WALKER, with a reduced force of 150 men, occupied two houses, and was closely surrounded by the allies. He had no provisions.

The reported victories of the 5th and 16th of March were false. The Costa Ricans were not slain in the manner stated.

San Juan del Sur was in possession of the allies.

The partition of Nicaragua has been fully settled in Salvador. The Nicaraguans are consenting parties.

The force under LOCKRIDGE, on the San Juan, as already reported, is completely broken up. Their failure is attributed to MORGAN & Co.'s abandonment of the Filibuster cause.

Our correspondence, published below, gives full and deeply interesting particulars of these events.

PANAMA, Monday, April 20, 1857.

The Panama Railroad Company's United States mail steamship Panama, Capt. J. M. Dow, arrived here from ports in Guatemala, San Salvador, and Costa Rica, on the 12th instant. Her dates are from the city of Guatemala to the 22d March; Acajutepeque to the 26th; San Jose de Costa Rica, April 8, and Nicaragua, April 1. She brought thirty passengers, and a cargo valued at $160,000, principally for New-York, and consisting chiefly of the following articles: 727 bales indigo; 1,400 double sacks coffee; 61,000 pounds india rubber; 5,600 hides, and 200 packages sugar. The Coffee crop in Costa Rica will be larger than last year; 83,874 quintals passed through the gates of San José in the months of January and February. Prices ruled from 8¾c.@9¾c.

I will now collate and translate for you all the facts of most interest in the Costa Rican papers, in relation to the war in Nicaragua, and give you besides all I can pick up here from reliable persons who came passengers.

Gen. SANDERS, in his efforts to relieve CAYCE, was cut off from Rivas about the 3d of March,—38 men found dead on the field, and a large number bad ly wounded, as well as his horses, wagons, etc., which he was taking down to San Juan del Sur, to bring up supplies. The loss of the Allies was one captain and two privates killed, and one ensign and 18 privates wounded, the names of whom are published.

The 80 men brought down by the Sierra Nevada on the 5th of March, were attacked by 300 of the Allies and half of them killed and the rest dispersed. CAYCE escaped, having taken another route. The loss of the Allies on this occasion was only three or four wounded—none killed.

The Orizaba brought a report to Panama that while WALKER had gone to attack St. George, FERNANDEZ CHAMORRO attacked RIVAS with 2,000 or 3,000 men—upon learning which, WALKER, after getting into the Plaza of St. George, returned to Rivas, and falling in with CHAMORRO's force, opened his cannon on them in front, while HENNINGSEN took them in the rear killed 300 and wounded 227. His own loss was reported at 2 killed and 20 wounded. By the time this story reached New-York, I perceive the number killed grew into 600, while the wounded were set down at 500. The Album Semanal, of March 28, has the following account of this fight, giving the names of all the killed and wounded on the side of the Allies:

"At early dawn on the 16th instant, WALKER ventured out with all his disposable force, and taking up a position at the Church of Pueblo Nuevo, which is close to St. George, opened a very heavy fire upon the latter place, which he kept up throughout the day, sending into the town close upon 500 round shot, besides grape and shell. His riflemen, during the same period, were actively engaged. This fierce attack was most nobly resisted. At 4 P. M., finding all his attempts fruitless, after losing more than 125 of his men killed, he commenced a retreat. But here he had to encounter difficulties he had but little anticipated. Gen. C MAS so seeing the result, had with much judgment detached Gen. JEREZ with a force to obstruct his passage, and wherever a position offered itself, detachments of riflemen were stationed to harass and impede his retreat. Gen. JEREZ had also occupied a position which gives upon the four crossroads. This position is within half a mile of Rivas; and from it the attack became so fierce that the bandit force broke and was completely dispersed, saving themselves by flight, as best they could. This, the close vicinity of Rivas and nightfall favored. They, however, left many more killed and wounded. While General JEREZ remained in possession of the position he had ably chosen; and here we understand that officer was reinforced on the following day, it being the intention of the Commander-in-Chief to move his entire force and to invest Rivas.

"We have to lament the loss, on this occasion, of 22 killed and 60 wounded. From this total we regret to learn that two of the officers and six of the men killed, and one officer and twenty of the wounded belong to the Costa Rican army. The remainder are from the ranks of the allies. The filibuster loss on this occasion must have been very great, for besides the dead left upon the field, four omnibus loads (transit carriages) of wounded were drawn into Rivas.

"Several deserters had gone over from WALKER to the allied camp. Among the number, three had taken part in the engagement of the 16th. They affirm, on oath, that more than one hundred of the filibusters were slain on that occasion, and that the number of wounded was very great."

WALKER is said so have left three pieces of canon on the field.

So this great story about eleven hundred killed and wounded, and of WALKER's piling up and burning the bodies of the dead, which seems to have led some New-York papers to think that "his fortunes were reviving," is wonderfully shorn of its proportions by this accounts. From my experience in these big stories, I have no doubt the Costa Rican account is literally correct, save about fifty per cent. exaggeration in WALKER's loss.

Gen. JUAN J. MORA, brother to the President of Costa Rica, having been appointed by the Allies their Commander-in-Chief, and CANAS his second, the former took charge of the Allied forces on the 19th March, and immediately gave orders for the close siege of RIVAS. WALKER, with 600 men, all told, half of which were sick and wounded, had strongly fortified Rivas, and entrenched himself to resist the coming attack.

On the 22d March, at 9 A. M., Gen. MORA, with a column of 800 men, marched out of St. George, which he left guarded by 100 Legion soldiers, under command of Col. CALDERON. In a little time he reached the Four Corners, about 600 yards from the principal Plaza of Rivas, which he found occupied by Gen. JEREZ, who had established there his head quarters. A fire was kept up all day against the City, with a 24-pounder, which WALKER answered with a 9-pounder, without damage.

At 3½ o'clock A. M., on the 23d, Generals CANAS and CALDERON invested at different points the fortifications of RIVAS. CANAS kept up a fight for some hours with WALKER's forces, and after rashly penetrating into the Plaza, was forced to retreat, not being able to cross the moat and strong entrenchments of WALKER, protected as they were by infuencs and artillery.

On the 24th, at 4 o'clock in the morning, the division of CHAMORRO made a slight attack upon the entrenchments of Santa Ursula, without effect. It will require some days to reduce the strong fortifications of Rivas. The Allies loss in these different attacks, in killed and wounded, amounts to about 100 men.

The last dates from Rivas I find in an extra of the Cronica de Costa, of April 8. in the shape of an official dispatch from the Commander-in-chief of the allies. I translate it in full:

HEAD QUARTERS, FOUR CORNERS.
Wednesday, April 1, 1857.

I have kept your Excellency informed of my operations since I took chief command of the army. I have but little to add, but nevertheless, you will find it interesting.

The siege of Rivas is more complete than could have been expected, with the small force at my disposal. The good selection of the ports, and the service of my scouting parties, have contributed much towards the success of the siege. A 24 pounder that I have planted has done much damage to the city, and dispirited the enemy.

Day after to-morrow at latest I shall place in battery at the post of the Puebla, occupied by General XATRUCH, another gun of equal calibre, brought by my orders from the Fort of San Carlos, which will cross its fires with that at my head-quarters, and which will completely destroy or dislodge the filibusters. WALKER and his forces are reduced to feed on mule-meat and dogs, seasoned with sugar in default of salt, and of this they have a most miserable ration. Those pushed by hunger, who go out to hunt for plaintains, are driven in by my troops, without their having effected their object. Every night I send in little guerrilla parties from each one of my posts, who advance to the intrenchments of the Plaza, thus obliging the filibusters to be constantly on the alert in the night, so that they have no time to rest. This course, united to the certainty they feel that they are now completely hemmed in, produces a desertion among them of about five each day. I calculate that triple that number daily take the road to Costa Rica. The filibusters have arrived at such extreme pusillanimity, that one of their deserters of yesterday returned from my camp to his old quarters in the Plaza—which are the same that Gen. SALAZAR occupied when we were in Rivas last year—distributed some of the proclamations of your Excellency, and taking a rifle, returned freely to my camp.

Since yesterday fourteen deserters from the enemy have come into my camp.

I am assured that a division of Guatemalians will be soon in Grenada. I shall send the steamer San Carlos for them to morrow.

Every probability is in favor of our early triumph.

I am your Excellency's obedient servant,
JUAN J. MORA.
To THE PRESIDENT.

The Album Semanal says that Gen. JEREZ has taken possession of San Juan del Jur—so of course WALKER can get no more assistance from California, either in men or provisions.

From the 8th to the 27th of March, there arrived at Liberia, in Costa Rica, 86 deserters from WALKER. They declare that the bells of the Allies' cannon cross the entrenchments, and begin to cause considerable damage. They confirm the account that WALKER has 600 men very strongly fortified in Rivas. A great portion of these are sick or wounded, or rendered incapable of duty from the niguas, (a small insect that gets into the flesh, generally in the feet, deposits its egge, and finally causes the loss of the membe, if not taken out.) They had been many days nearly starved. There were 125 deserters from WALKER in Punta Arenas de Costa Rica and San José. The Panama did not bring any way, because the Government was unwilling to incur the great expense by this route.

The papers say that deserters were promised free passage out of the country, viâ Greytown—that if they are repentant they could easily clear the river of their filibuster companions, so as to have egress by it. They say also that those now deserting are not repentant, but many of them late recruits to WALKER, who desert from mere desperation, knowing that he and they can do Costa Rica no more injury. The Costa Rican Government paid Capt. Dow, this trip, all the expenses which they had promised for the batch of 126 he brought away on the previous trip, except the railroad expenses, which President MORA wished to refer to Col. TOTTEN, the agent here, to see if he would not abate something from his charge. It is quite certain that there will be a deal of suffering among these deserters in Costa Rica, if they are not sent away. As our Government connived at their going to Nicaragua, it is no more than fair, now, that it should send a vessel to Costa Rica to take them away.

Among the deserters that have come into Costa Rica is no less a personage than WALKER's Quarter-Master General. As Col. CAYCE occupied that post when I was at Rivas, and also at the last direct dates from San Juan del Sur, it can scarcely be any other than he. Col. CAYCE's name is inseparable from all the reports of hard-fought battles since WALKER has been in Costa Rica. He is always mentioned in the despatches for his bravery and good conduct. When HENNINGSEN burned Granada, CAYCE endured all the honors of the siege of the Church of Guadalupe that followed—working at the entrenchments, fighting whole days and nights without repose, and living 20 days on dogs and mule meat. Finally, the little band of 260, having become reduced by cholera and the balls of the enemy, to only 90 men, had extended their entrenchments down to the waters of the lake.

They sent a Sandwich Islander to swim out to WALKER, who was then on the steamer Virgin, watching a chance to relieve HENNINGSEN, to inform him that they had succeeded in cutting their way to the Lake. After being seven hours in the water, Kanaka JOHN reached the boat, and Col. WATERS was debarked, with 160 men, to help the little force to embark. After all were on board, CAYCE found that his favorite black horse was left behind, as also the horse of WALKER, the only animals that had not been eaten. He immediately debarked, with a few men, swam the two horses out to the host, and got them safely on board. When I was in RIVAS, CAYCE took a notion, hearing the cannon and musketry at St. George, to go down on his horse by himself and reconnoitre. Stealing in through the plaintain patches, close to the enemy's barricades, he and his horse quietly laid down to listen. The firing shortly closed—WALKER had retreated—and the band of music of the Costa Rican forces struck into a triumphant strain.

CAYCE, tired, and perhaps a little drunk—for he is a good drinker, like the rest—fell partly asleep, his head resting on his horse's flanks, and it was only when the music ceased, at broad daylight, that he awoke and became aware of his dangerous situation. He declares that he was awake all the time, but the mellow music from a sort of flute that always goes to make up a Costa Rican band so entranced his senses that he had no power to move while it lasted. CAYCE took part in the revolution of Paez, in Venezuela, and afterwards joined CHAMORRO, in Nicaragua, in the war between the Serviles and Democrats. It was then that he lost his left arm. When WALKER arrived, he found CAYCE a Captain in this service. He gave him the same grade, on his desertion from CHAMORRO, and promoted him or conferred some favor upon him after every battle.

Col. CAYCE lived some two or three years at Panama and Gorgona, dividing his time between monte and muleteering. His code of morals, perhaps, was not very choice, but he was always a generous-hearted fellow, and I think not much worse than a good many others who occupied higher seats hereabouts in the Synagogue. He took me over his fine cacao and coffee estate, close to Rivas, and remarked, in a tone of honest pride that was quite rare among the filibustere: "This is none of your confiscated estates." He had bought it at a very low price of the owner, who, previous to the coming of WALKER, had got disgusted with the everlasting revolutions of Nicaragua, quit it, and gone to New-York. CAYCE's desertion was, no doubt, owing to the close vicinity of his old commander, CHAMORRO, who would doubtless have made short work of him had he caught him in the service of WALKER.

A paper in the Spanish language called El Telegrafo Setentrional, has risen up among the ruins of Granada. It is edited with talent. Its motto is from the placard which Gen. HENNINGSEN posted up in the Plaza after he burned the city:

"Aqui fue Granada." "Here stood Granada."

The third number of the Telegrafo Sententrional contains the following article on the desertion of the Rangers.

"It is rather an ominous sign when "the Rangers,", the darling friends and firmest support of WILLIAM WALKER, desert him in his hour of greatest need. On the 1st of this month twenty of the Rangers deserted, and protected by the proclamation of President MORA, took their way to Costa Rica. WALKER dispatched the remainder of the Rangers, numbering about fifty, to overtake and bring them back. The pursuing party overtook the decamping party, and after a conversation of ten minutes it was adjudged, decreed and determined by the high contracting parties on both sides, to unite their forces and both proceed amicably to Costa Rica. There could not be a more unparalleled exemplification of Central American clemency than this. The Rangers were always the dirty tools of a dirty man to discharge the most dirty work. If a hacienda was to be robbed, they were dispatched to perform the work. If a young boy was to be torn from the arms of his agonized mother and forced into the ranks, they did it. If robbing was to be perpetrated under the form of taxation, they did it. If a poor Indian woman had to be plundered of her little store of sugar which she had carefully manufactured to sustain herself and family, THEY did it. If oxen, or money, or corn, or rice were required, they were dispatched, and nothing more was required than for the owner of the hacienda to see the ugly face of their commander, and to hear his house 'God damn you, I want money,' backed as the expression was by a cocked pistol, to give him all he asked. And yet these men have not only been received as brothers, but money and means have been given them, that they might reach their homes and repent of their enormities in Central America. This unparalleled clemency is unprecedented in the annals of history."

Just before the arrival of the Sierra Nevada with a batch of eighty filibusters, the following odrrespondence passed between Gen. XATRUCH, of the division of Honduras, and Commander DAVIS, of the U. S. sloop-of-war St. Mary's. I find it in the Boletin Oficial of Costa Rica. As Commander DAVIS' letter was probably originelly written in English, then translated into Spanish, end now brought back into English, there may be some trifling errors in it:

[Translation.]

ST. GEORGE, Tuesday, Feb. 24, 1857.

To the Commander of the U. S. Sloop-of-War St. Mary's:

SIR: I have good reason to believe that there will arrive by the steamer shortly expected at San Juan del Sur, a party of Fillibusters, destined to recruit the force of WILLIAM WALKER, who has been reduced to occupy solely the city of Rivas, and who insists upon his foolish and criminal enterprise of conquering this country, as also in committing every species of outrage against the property and rights of its inhabitants. There is nothing unlikely in this supposition of the arrival of recruits by the next steamer, when it is known that for a long time this business has been carried on of sending Fillibusters from California through the medium of the line to this Isthmus.

Under such circumstances, I can but consider the presence of the United States forces in the Bay of San Juan as favorable to the cause which that Power sustains in Central America, based upon principles of civilization and universal justice. I have no doubt, therefore, that you will take steps to prevent the ingress of those adventurers who will essay to disembark to swell the number of the wicked men, who, against all reason and right, have caused such immense evils in Nicaragua. Such conduct on the part of Captain DAVIS would be entirely conformable with that of his Government; for it is notorious that the enlightened Cabinet at Washington has taken steps to prevent the egress from the ports of that Republic, clandestinely, and under the appearance of passengers, and articles of commerce, men and means for WALKER's support in Nicaragua.

In pursuing this course you will also give proofs of the sincerity of the United States, which professes to hold inviolable the principles of international right; and will also aid in consummating the loyal and harmonious relations of friendship which bind your country to the Governments of the Republics of Central America, and which is in accordance with the explicit acknowledgments recently made by the Provisional Government in Nicaragua under Don PATRICIO RIVAS, against whose Administration the armed faction of WILLIAM WALKER is more immediately operating.

If a band of fillibusters should land in the port of San Juan del Sur, in the face of the forces of the United States, to whose worthy chief I have the pleasure to direct myself, it could not fail to damage the honor and good name of the Government of a great nation, whose respectable marine is called to sustain its wise laws against piratical incursions, and the usurpation of the rights of a free people. For these reasons, I have the greatest confidence that the intelligence and rectitude that characterize Commander DAVIS, will not permit him to permit the disembarkation of fillibusters during his stay in port.

Besides, it is proper to observe that the pretext under which the fillibusters have formerly introduced themselves—that of being simply passengers—does not now obtain, from the fact that the Government of Costa Rica, supported by that of Nicaragua, in view of the scandalous use that has been made of the Transit, has closed it, which you will see from a decree in the official bulletin of the former Republic, No 264, herein is closed. This will be a new and powerful motive in deciding you to prevent the aforesaid landing.

I avail myself of this occasion to offer you the assurance of my high consideration and respect.

FLORENCIO XATRUCH.

[Translation.]

ON BOARD THE U. S. SLOOP-OF-WAR ST. MARYS,
SAN JUAN DEL SUR, March 3, 1857.

To his Excellency Don FLORENCIO XATRUCH, commandor-in-chief of the division of Costa Rica, Salvador and Nicaragua:

SIR: Your note of the 24th February only came to hand on the 1st instant, which will explain any delay that may appear from the date my reply.

I have given to the various subjects of your communication the attentive consideration which a respect for your high position and a knowledge of my duty entitles it.

Your Excellency asks me to interfere, by force of arms, against the disembarkation in this port of men who you suppose will arrive in the next steamer, to unite themselves with the party of Gen. WALKER, and you communicate to me the decree of the Government of Costa Rica and its allies, suspending the transit between San Juan del Sur and San Juan del Norte, declaring these ports to be in a state of blockade.

In answer to your request, I have to say that the President of the United States, in his last annual message to the Senate and House of Representatives, distinctly recognizes the existence of a civil war in Nicaragua, not caring to receive either of the diplomatic representatives of the two belligerent parties, or to decide, with his imperfect information, which is the actual government. Since that time, no change has taken place in the affairs of Nicaragua which can in any manner authorize my deviation from the line of conduct strictly imposed upon me by the clear and direct language used by the head of my Government.

During a civil war in a foreign nation, the existence of which war is acknowledged by the Government of the United States, the two parties are regarded as two independent belligerent nations, and the Government of the United States (according to my impression) has no right to interfere in the hostile acts of either party, when they confine these acts strictly to legitimate war upon each other.

My position in regard to the two parties engaged in the civil war that exists in this State, is that of a neutral; and it is evidently the duty of a neutral to lend no aid to one party which he is not equally prompt to render the other.

How precious is this neutral position, and how sacred are its obligations, the Republics of South America had ample opportunity to know and appreciate, during the civil wars that resulted in their separation from Spain, in the system adopted by the United States and Great Britain.

Besides, permit me to observe, it is no error to suppose that because the United States, in virtue of a law of Congress, forbids the recruiting of men for foreign service, WITHIN THE TERRITORY AND JURISDICTION OF THE UNITED STATES, that the Commanders of her Ships-of-war necessarily are bound to the same duties, and exercise equal faculties on the waters within the jurisdiction of foreign governments.

And it will be apparent to you as it is to myself, that if my Government had intended this ship should take an active part, as you propose, in the questions that disturb the peace of this country, it would not have omitted to furnish me the necessary instruction.

Having referred to the last annual message of the President, permit me to call your especial attention to the great interest it expresses in the protection of the persons and properties of the citizens of the United States in Nicaragua. Its words are directed with especial reference to the deranged state of your affairs; and in default of what may be styled a responsible Government, I shall use my best endeavors to protect those of my fellow citizens who have not compromised themselves in the war. The assurances you give that the property of the Transit Company shall receive no prejudices from the forces under your command, receive my cordial thanks; but this matter is of such importance, and weighs upon my mind to such a degree, in consequence of recent events, in which ignorant citizens of the United States were the sufferers (?) that I cannot permit any opportunity to pass without recurring to them.

In answer to the last paragraph of your note, I have the honor to say, in respect to the suspension of the communication between the two oceans by the Lake of Nicaragua, that unfortunately it is not a matter included in my instructions.

But the notification of the blockade of this port has excited my sincere surprise, Your Excellency knows that when such a notification is not supported by the promise of a competent force, in or near the port, there can be no legal blokkade.

In this case it is the more strange, as the waters of the port are not only not in possession of your force, but are actually under the domination of the opposite party, who have blocaded it with the schooner Granada. But before entering into a useless discussion (as I hope it will prove to be) upon blockades, so clearly defined by international laws, (the rights of nations,) and which I presume are much better understood by your Excellency than by me, permit me to ask to what point you claim the exercise of the rights of belligerents under the laws of blockade, and to what point you limit the operations of neutral vessels?

I pray your Excellency to answer these important questions at your earliest convenience.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully,
Your obedient servant,
CHAS. C. DAVIS,
Commander of the U. S. sloop-of-war St. Mary's.

It is probable that in the original Commander DAVIS does not use the words "ignorant citizens of the United States"—perhaps it should be "innocent citizens." The "recent events" he refers to must be the troubles he had in regard to the boats of Captain EDMANDS, of the American ship Narragansett, of Providence, R. I. The case is this: WALKER, after he heard of the loss of the Transit Company's steamers, contemplated the organization of a boat expedition to retake them. For this purpose, Captain EDMANDS loaned two of his ship's boats, perhaps fearing that WALKER might give him some trouble if he refused. Both boats fell into the hands of the allies, the one at Virgin Bay and the other at St. George, where WALKER had had it hauled up into a creek and concealed. Capt. EDMANDS sought the aid of Commander DAVIS to get back his boats, and the latter sent a force to St. George and Virgin Bay to bring them down. The allies refused to let them pass at first, but Com. DAVIS' party succeeded, principally by threats, in getting possession of them.

It appears to me that the Honduras General might retort upon Com. DAVIS his flippant question with interest, as to "what point he limits the operations of neutrals," when the latter undertakes to reclaim property of American citizens that had been voluntarily placed in the hands of WALKER to make war on the Allies. It strike me also that the Hondureno must be a peculiarly good-natured man, to assure Com. DAVIS that "the property of the Transit Company shall receive no damage at his hands," when it is known that every dollar of that property on the Isthmus was voluntarily placed by its former as well as its present claimants at the service of WALKER to make war on the Allies. As to American citizens in Nicaragua, (on the Pacific side,) who have not compromised themselves in the war, it would be difficult for Com. DAVIS to place his hand on one. As regards the action of "neutrals," permit me to ask Commander DAVIS if General XATRUCH would not have had a perfect right to seize and burn the Orizaba or Sierra Nevada, which always acted as belligereats—and if he would not have protected these ships from seizure by the Allies?

Commander DAVIS goes a good way out of his road to answer the question of XATRUCH, as to whether he would enforce the United States neutrality laws, when being infringed under his very nose. Admitting that WALKER is carrying on a legitimate revolution in Nicaragua, I do not see what American citizens have to do with it. As to his duty to prevent the the landing of such citizens whose object he knows to be to make war upon foreign powers at peace with the United States, I am not sufficiently well read in our neutrality and international laws to decide. But it does seem to me that our navy would be nearly or quite useless, in time of peace, if it was not authorized to see that such laws were not infringed by our own citizens, in foreign ports, and within range of its guns. The fact is, any step the United States has taken in regard to this filibustering business has been a reproach and a disgrace to our Government in the eyes of the whole civilized world.

The facts I have collected make it quite certain that WALKER and the remnant of his forces are this have either been taken prisoners, destroyed, or escaped from the country. There can be little doubt that San Juan del Sur is occupied by a sufficient force to prevent his escape by that route, and every other avenue, and even egress from Rivas, seems to be closed. Besides, if he should endeavor to cut his way to San Juan del Sur, he would probably have also to fight a large force on the Jocote ranch, five miles from San Juan. If, however, he could get to San Juan, I suppose that Commander DAVIS would intercede or perhaps interfere for his protection, and take him and his forces on board the St. Mary's. Or as the Orizaba was at San Juan, on her return to California, from this port, about the 8th of April, he possibly may have escaped by her. If taken by the allies, it is scarcely possible he will escape public execution, as their soldiers recollect, even if the officers have forgotten, the execution of their favorite leaders, CORRAL, MAYORGA, and SALAZAR. The Leonese soldiers will not forget, at any rate, the cruel murder of the latter. The burning of Granada and a portion of Rivas, the robbing of the churches of their silver, the melting down of the bells that have so often called them to bow before their altars, will be a bitter remembrance with them. WALKER, if taken, will die the death he condemned the noble-hearted CORRAL to.

And so the Man of Destiny—he with the blue-gray eyes—has fallen at last. He has met the fate that ever follows ambition unguided by principle. If he lives, he must be made of stone if he can look with complacency upon the evil he has done in the world. Five thousand men's bones bleaching in the sun of Nicaragua—hearts broken, and hearts desolated everywhere, that he might tyranize over his fellow mortals, in wielding the sceptre of a down-trodden nation, must be sorry subjects of contemplation to him, when he shall look inwardly, and be alone, with only his own conscience for company.

And the rich plantations—haciendas—block of houses on Granada, Leon, and Rivas—all gone! PIERRE SOULE's fifty-thousand estate, on which he was to introduce Louisiana negroes, and his code of laws for Nicaragua, for which he has been to work so industriously upon for the past year—RANDOLPH's Transit Charter—and BENNETT's new Indian Empire—all gone to pot! And the Utophia of American invention, "a Goverument on a military basis!—well! We shall never see such another WILLIAM WALKER.

VERY LATE FROM RIVAS!

ASPINWALL, April 20.—The British steamer Thames arrived here this morning from Greytown. LOCKRIDGE remains at Greytown. Col. ANDERSON and Gen. WHEAT came passengers in the Thames. I saw the latter amusing himself a few minutes ago in cracking away with a navy revolver at a man in a crowd, singing out "You G—d d—d thief! You ran away from Capt. COOPER!" One ball struck close to the legs of an officer of the Cyane, but did no damage.

The general impression at Greytown was that WALKER had been sold out by his friends.

The news from WALKER is to the 13th of April, by way of the lake and river. A dispatch came to Greytown of that date from Gen. Mora, stating that he had got Walker and his whole force confined to only two houses—that he had dug a trench all around what was left of the city, and that WALKER would be forced to surrender by the 20th, to-day.

The Partition of Nicaragua Settled.

SAN JOSE, Cota Rica, Saturday, April 4, 1857.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

Gen. BOSQUET took possession of San Juan del Sur on the 24th March, and up to the 27th no less 100 fillibusters surrendered to CANAS, who forwarded them to San Jose, en route for Liberia. They all state they left WALKER with only 120 men, and the only provisions he had were three mules.

WALKER offered, on the 25th March, to surrender, but positive orders were given to CANAS to agree to no capitulation that was not unconditional. It is also rumored that Gen. HENNINGSEN will be severely dealt with, because during the siege of Granada, when terms of capitulation were offered him, he replied that he would "hang the Allied Generals as high as Haman, if he caught them," and denouncing them as traitors and villains. Reports from Salvador say the Commissioners regarding the partition of Nicaragua, have agreeably arranged matters, and President RIVAS addressed the Government of Costa Rica that the intended partition was acceptable to the leading Nicaraguans, as they were afraid a new fillibustering expedition might be organized in North America, to invade again Nicaragua, and in her present desolated condition she had no power within herself to resist it.

THE FILLIBUSTERS ABANDONED BY MORGAN & CO.—REMOVAL TO ASPINWALL IN THE BRITISH FLEET—THE BRITISH ADMIRAL IN A QUANDARY—DISPOSITION OF THE MEN, ETC.

ASPINWALL, Monday, April 20, 1857.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

Not being able to find out anything definite in Panama, in regard to the disposition that is to be made of the 374 fillibusters here, and not knowing whether your Greytown correspondent be still in Aspinwall, I decided to drop over here this morning, to pick up the news.

As regards the breaking up of the river force of LOCKRIDGE, the following appears to be the facts, as near as I can arrive at them: On the 3d of February the steamship Tennessee arrived at Greytown, carrying ont orders there from MORGAN & Co., to SCOTT, their agent, to endeavor to break up the force of the fillibusters, and leave the river to the Costa Ricans. I presume that the Steamship Company, having at last come to the conclusion that nothing more could be expected from WALKER, and having perhaps joined in a new company to get a charter from Costa Rica, decided upon abandoning him. On the arrival of the Tennessee, LOCKRIDGE's force was up the river, in the vicinity of Castillo, with a view of attacking it. But not feeling at all certain of success, after reconnoitering, they encamped to consult upon matters, when they were met by the information that they must in future rely upon their own resources. A portion of them came immediately down the river, and found the Tennessee had returned there, on the 6th, from this port. The captain of that ship was urged to take them on board, but refused, as he said he must take some 200 men from Key West on account of the United States. Finding that the whole lot would soon be pressing upon him, the captain up steam and was off, leaving the poor devils to their fate.

SCOTT then, on condition that the Costa Ricans should not molest his property, undertook to get the men og. He agreed if the British fleet would take the men to Aspinwall, that he would take charge of them from thence. Capt. ERSKINE, or the officer in command, assented. SCOTT then gave draft on CHAS. MAGAN & Co. for the expense of the passage from here to New-Orleans and New York, holding himself under the guarantee of the fleet, the arms of the fillibusters for his security. When the ships arrived in this port, last Friday night, and presented the drafts, they were refused by the agent of the steamers. The officers of the Cossack and Tartar then threatened to land the men, against which the Governor of Panama instructed the Prefect here to remonstrate, and thus matters stand as I write. Capt. ERSKINE, you will see, has drawn an elephant in a raffle.

The Cossack has 174 of the men on board, generally in good health. Her Commander now proposes to draw on the British Government at $10 a head, in favor of the Granada, if she will take them to New-Orleans, so that his ship may be relieved, and he may go to Carthagena to consult with the Commodore as to what is to be done with the 200 on the Cossack. The measles has broken out among the latter, and it is reported there are two cases of the small-pox, so that no ship will take them, at any rate, it is presumed.

The men are stowed away between the guns on deck and between decks, a rope being drawn along the breech of the tier of guns, to fence them in. They look like Bears in a cage, only twice as dirty and savage.

SIX O'CLOCK.—The Granada has just gone, taking 110 fillibusters, on account of the British.

THE VERY LATEST.

From the Aspinwall Courier, April 20.

The steamer Thames arrived here this morning, from Greytown, bringing several of the officers of the late San Juan River fillibuster force.

Per steamer Thames, we have four days' later intelligence from Greytown. We learn that LOCKRIDGE remains at Greytown, and that the Costa Ricans are still there. Gen WHEAT and Col. ANDERSON came in the Thames.

We also learn that the impression is no longer disguised at Greytown, that WALKER has been sold by MORGAN & SON.

The symptoms of dissension between the Costa Ricans and Nicaraguans have already shown themselves on the Atlantic side and in the interior, as they did some time since on the Pacific side. RIVAS sent a collector of customs, and Gen. MORA sent him back with the message that he would attend to the collecting on the river. Col. CAUTT had declared the river open, and several parties had gone into the interior with passports from him. MORA was expected at Greytown.

Col. ANDERSON waits here the next news from WALKER.

To-day, the 20th, is the day fixed by the Costa Ricans for the finishing of WALKER on the Pacific.

Returned Nicaraguan Officers.

Among the passengers by the Illinois are Gen. WHEAT, Gen. HORNSBY, Col. CHARLES DOUBLEDAY and Capt. MARCELLUS FRENCH—the two latter having been severely wounded and scalded by the explosion of the steamer J. N. Scott. From these gentlemen we have obtained interesting accounts of late operations on the San Juan River, ending in the evacuation of Greytown.

Gen. HORNSBY says that according to last accounts received from over the lake by scouts, Gen. WALKER was in Rivas, in possession of two houses, with 150 men and three mules.

Gen. HORNSBY, on his arrival at San Juan del Norte, reported to Gen. WALKER as follows:

GEN. HORNSBY'S LAST REPORT.

PUNTA ARENAS, Sunday, April 5, 1857.

GENERAL—SIR: In accordance with your verbal request, I remained in New Orleans waiting your letters, until the expense of living there made it necessary that I should leave, having exhausted all my private means. At the time of my leaving there the cause of Nicaragua was very popular at the South, and all were looking anxiously for news from Col. LOCKRIDGE, not doubting but that he would soon have possession of the river, which would have been the case had the command of Castillo not have been entrusted to Col. TITUS—he left here with the intention of joining you viâ Aspinwall, but I understand that he has changed his purpose and has left there for New York.

The defences at Castillo are of such a character that by unanimous consent, an attack was impracticable, and could not be undertaken with our present force. The hill (Nelson's) that commands Castillo has been cleared away, and a barricade or chevaux de frize erected, encircling the top of the hill, as though they intended to hold possession of it forever. From the sickness and desertion, it became necessary to make a different disposition of the troops who were willing to remain in the service, whereupon Col. LOCKRIDGE had all the forces mustered, and called for volunteers to go by the way of Panama to join you. One hundred and thirty or forty responded to the call. Those, with some 80 or 90 sick, were placed on board of the steamer J. N. Scott. The men who were to return to the States were placed on board of the steamer Rescue, and both boats with everything on board, were proceeding down the river in good order. On reaching a sand bar within a mile of the Serapequi, it was deemed prudent to round to, and send a canoe to reconnoitre, before proceeding further, as the entire force had been above them. This happened on the 2d April, at 9 o'clock A. M., After anchoring, some fifteen or twenty minutes, from some unaccountable cause the boiler of the steamer Scott burst with a terrific explosion, killing seven instantly, (among whom was Maj. WM. R. MORRIS, who was returning to Nicaragua, and then on duty,) Capt. SLEIGHT and his Lieutenant, whose bodies have not been recovered, and scalding some twenty-five or thirty others, of whom several have since died, and others not expected to recover. The names of the killed are: Maj WM. R. MORRIS, Capt. SLEIGHT and his Lieutenant, (name not recollected,) Lieut. COMKLIN, and three privates. Eight others have died since the casualty, and several others cannot possibly survive. Among the wounded are Col. ANDERSON, (slightly.) Lieut. Col. CHARLES DOUBLEDAY, (severely,) Capt. MARCELLUS FRENCH, (severely,) Lieut SISTERS MALTBY, (mortally,) SAML. KENNADY, (or CURLEY,) legs badly scalded. Your brother NORVAL and myself escaped as by a miracle, (RIDGE) sent the sick and the wounded immediately to this point, where they arrived at 12 M. on the 3d. The English surgeons, Doctors CONY and DESMOND, tendered their services, giving every comfortable assistance to the sufferers, who are as much aid and assistance to the sufferers, who are as comfortable as it is possible to make them.

We arrived two hours too late to take the Tennessee for Aspinwall, or to send information of the accident. It will be one month before any other steamer will arrive at this place, and then the uncertainty of getting troops across the Isthmus of Panama to join you. Col. LOCKRIDGE has decided to send every-whence they were sent the next day to Bangor, have been executed by the people of that place. The circumstances, as near as they could be ascertained, were as follows: It will be recollected that they were accused of shooting and robbing Chinamen, and were sent up to be examined before a Justice of the Peace, who had issued a warrant for their apprehension. They had been examined and held to answer, and were placed in charge of the Constable at Bangor, and the Sheriff sent for. On Thursday morning, some time between the hours of two and four o'clock, Pascuzzo, one of the four, succeeded in withdrawing his hands from the handcuffs after which he liberated the rest. They then possessed themselves of the Constable's pistol—in what manner we did not learn—and attempted to make their escape. The alarm was promptly given and the people pursued, and soon overtook and arrested them. Ferguson, the youngest of the party, turned State evidence, and was protected. The other three, Georgia Ringold, Georgia N. Johnson and S. R. Lake, share burn where they were taken. Mr. Mallon informs us that a Coroner's jury had been called, and the verdict was "found hanging to an oak tree,"—but the parties engaged in the hanging were unknown to the Jury. They were all young men, neither supposed to be over twenty four years old.

Failure of the Pacific Express Company.—Attachments against this Company have been issued in Stockton, Sacramento and San Francisco, amounting to $7,000, and the doors of the principal office in this city are now closed. The failure of this Company is to be attributed to the rapid decrease of their business since the expose in regard to the $134,000 and the bond given by Rowe. The Company was composed principally of the former attachés of Adams & Co. They were young men with their industry as their principal capital, and having been thrown out of employment by the failure of that house resolved to continue the Express business upon their own resources. This they have been enabled to do until the obligation given by Rowe for the payment of money never seen or received by the Company so destroyed confidence in their business, that they have been forced to stop simply for the want of funds to pay the actual expenses of carrying their express matter. The attachments yesterday were issued in favor of the Steam Navigation Company for $1,200; the California Stage Company for $2,400, and other smaller sums for like services. By this failure at least fifty persons are thrown out of employment.

Frightful Tragedy.—An Englishman named Joseph Lester, a miner, has been living for the last month with his wife in a cabin on the Sacramento and Auburn road, a short distance above the Fountain House. At about 5 o'clock last evening, Lester quit working at his sluices, went to the cabin, and deliberately shot his wife dead with a double-barrel shot-gun, after which he consummated his diabolical deed by blowing his own brains out with the remaining barrel. No one else was present at the time, although there are a number of miner's cabins within a short distance; but the reports of the gun were heard by several persons, who thought nothing unusual of the noise, until persons ten minutes after, when Lester's partner came to the cabin and found the woman lying on the ground, in front of the door, with her head in a large pool of blood, and life entirely extinct, the shot taking effect on the right side of her head. On looking into the door of the cabin, he beheld Lester's lifeless body lying on the floor in a large pool of blood, and the brains scattered over the ceiling, sides, bed and floor. His head was split in two from the point of the nose clear to the top. The gun was lying on Lester's body, with his right hand firmly grasping it. It appeared that Lester deliberately took off his boot, either before or after he shot his wife, and pulled the trigger with the big toe of one of his feet.—Sacramento Union.

OREGON.

A Steamer Carried Over the Falls at Portland—Two Lives Lost—Fears of Another Indian Outbreak

Our intelligence from Oregon is to March 26.

A terrible accident occurred at Oregon City, on the 17th ult., the steamer Portland having been carried over the falls at that place, causing the death of Capt. Jamieson and one of the hands, and the entire destruction of the boat.

The following particulars are given by the Portland Argus:

"The Portland had left the basin of the works on the other side of the river, where she had been to unload her freight, just brought down from Yamhill. The regular engineer was on this side of the river, attending to repairs of the rudder, and which had been lashed with ropes for temporary use. The engineer for the time was Dutch Pete, a fireman. When the boat shoved off from the Mills, her rudder became unmanageable, and she went broadside upon the breakwater; her stern slewed around, and she went over stern foremost. Just at this juncture Dutch Pete jumped overboard into the basin, but was carried over the breakwater, when he caught hold of a sawlog that was fast, and he was soon roped out by persons in the mill. The boat darted with great rapidity down the shute toward the Falls, stern foremost, her engine working all the time. Before she reached the brink of the falls, Jamieson and Bell jumped off. The boat, in going over the brink of the falls, broke in two, and whistled. She was torn into ten thousand fragments, which soon came drifting past the City. Her pilot-house came down almost entire, containing trunks, clothing, bedding, guns, and other articles, which were nearly dry, showing that it escaped being submerged in making the frightful passage."

The weather of late had been cold and wet, yet crops looked well, and fruit promises to be abundant.

There had been heavy falls of snow in the interior of the Territory during the past winter.

The Cayuse and Snake Indians had a fight at the Walla-Walla station, at which eleven of their number were killed. Those at the Grand Round Reserve are still disconsented, and desire to return to their old camping grounds.

Fears are entertained of another Indian outbreak in Washington Territory.

SANDWICH ISLANDS.

Guano Discoveries on Jarvis and Nantucket Islands—Shipment to New-York—Annexation of the Islands—Ship Montpelier of New-Bedford condemned.

Our last advices from Honolulu are to March 12

The schooner Lithobite had arrived at Honolulu, with 100 tons guano, from Jarvis and Nantucket Islands, awakening a good deal of interest; as the expedition had been looked upon as visionary.

The Honolulu Commercial Advertiser says:

"The appearance of the specimens of guano which we have seen, is that of a fine powder, very much resembling snuff, without the strong smell of ammonia which the Chincha guano has. Under a microscope, it appears entirely composed of crystalized substance, and resembles sugar. Good judges pronounce it to be first quality guano, but what its value is, compared with Chincha guano, remains to be determined. About eight tons of this guano goes forward by the bark Fenkse, to be sent on by the mail steamer, viâ Panama, to New York, the object being to land it in New York as soon as possible. The balance is being shipped on the clipper ship Aspasia, to New-York direct, and will reach that port about July 20.

It will be seen from the following, which we copy from the Commercial Advertiser, that the islands have already been annexed:

"The agent of the company, Mr. Arthur Benson, erected upon each island a flag staff, upon which now floats the American flag, and each island has on it a small house for the protection of the property of the company, as well as a general caveat against all intruders. One great drawback to these guano islands is the want of fresh water, not a drop of which is anywhere to be found. Rain seldom falls, as appears by the very dry condition in which they found the guano as deep as four or five feet, below the surface. Birds' eggs and fish are in such abundance as almost to stagger our faith in human testimony. At times the birds were so thick as to actually cloud the atmosphere, and it was almost impossible to step without treading on the nests. Altogether, it seems, these islands are, by all accounts, a wonderful place."

The San Francisco Herald says on the subject:

"These are the Islands to which Commodore Mervine was ordered to proceed some time ago, but which he neglected to do for some cause as yet unexplained. If the guano should prove to be of good quality the discovery may be regarded as exceedingly important. Peru at the present time derives nearly all its revenue from the Chinchas. The restrictions recently put upon the trade has been the occasion of much annoyance and incurred the necessity of looking elsewhere for a supply."

The Honolulu Commercial Advertiser says that the ship Montpelier, of New Bedford, after a thorough and impartial survey, was condemned. The step was taken with reluctance, after the heavy gales on her during January, but there appeared to be no alternative. Her bottom, fastenings and plank having been damaged at the North as to require a new bottom at an expense deemed unwarrantable here. Her oil, 1,900 barrels, was being shipped by the Aspasia to New-York. She has been completely stripped, her lower masts only standing, and her hull in this condition sold at auction on Wednesday, to Chas. King, for $1,050. Her total effects, besides the hull, realized about $5,000. Her hull is to be broken up.
